WAR AND STEEL DISTURB MARKET

Uncertainty Traced to European Rumors and Corporation Dividend Action

The tone of the financial district yesterday was one of uncertainty. The end of the war, which to some looked as not very distant...

It was to the uncertainty produced by the above reports that the stock market opened rather weakly yesterday morning with considerable liquidation.

Next to the chaotic conditions in Europe (the principal point for discussion in the brokers' offices and investment companies was the action of the United States Steel Corporation directors in the matter of dividends.

The physicians wanted to send him to the hospital, but he protested so vehemently that he was finally given a clerical post back of the lines.

Sergeant Cushing is twenty years old and unmarried. He formerly lived at 2521 South Lambert street.

The official casualty list given out today shows another small total, indicating that the War Department has caught up with its lists to the point where the first list came in the Franco-American drive and has not yet reached the point of giving out the names of those killed seriously hurt, and one in missing.

Private Augustus C. Goodwin, Company D, Twentieth Infantry, regular army, was originally reported as missing, but yesterday was listed as severely wounded by an official message from the War Department.

Private Harry W. Henning is in a base hospital recovering from wounds received in action on July 18. He is now at Sylvan Blvd., 2338 North Lawrence street, dated September 24.

Private James M. Feger, of Company I, 112th Infantry, was wounded in seven places by a shrapnel shell that struck him in the back of the head.

Private Joseph M. Feger, reported in today's casualty list as "wounded, degree undetermined," was really slightly more than three months ago when he was in the 112th Infantry, Private Matteo's parents, Private Frank Matteo, live at 147 South Handolph street.

Private Joseph M. Feger, reported in today's casualty list as "wounded, degree undetermined," was really slightly more than three months ago when he was in the 112th Infantry, Private Matteo's parents, Private Frank Matteo, live at 147 South Handolph street.

son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Turner, of 1317 Wolf street. He enlisted in the 101st Infantry in June, 1917, but was sent to France from Camp Hancock two months prior to the departure of his old unit, and once overseas was assigned to the Thirtieth Infantry. Private Turner is now at 3111 Aramingo avenue.

Private Sylvester W. Bergbauer, Company D, Twentieth Infantry, regular army, was originally reported as missing, but yesterday was listed as severely wounded by an official message from the War Department.

Private George K. Hoopler, twenty-three years old, 5136 Greene street, Germantown, was wounded in the fighting around Chateau-Thierry during the summer. He feared he will be unable to return to his regiment, he writes to his father, William K. Hoopler.

BUSINESS CAREER OF PETER FLINT

A Story of Salesmanship by Harold Whitehead

HAD a letter from dad this morning. He had a lot to say about my leaving the Magnitude.

He seems to think that I threw away a good job purposely and said he was "greatly disappointed that I would not even consider the suggestions of those older than myself and who had only my best interest at heart."

It's all right for dad to talk like that, but he ain't right here on the ground like I am. He don't know the "ins and outs" of the thing; besides, he's only a small-town man and can't be expected to know the curves of New York.

While dad's letter made me mad, I had another which put the "jees" in my position again. This is it: My dear Peter—You know it's very unkindly of me to write to you, but how else am I to ask you to do something for me?

I want a book called "Pamphlet the Story" by some Russian writer. Mother was reading a review of it and said with a shudder, "It must be a perfectly dreadful book—set it at the book for young girls to read at any rate."

Now I can't read it I read it, so I want you to be a real nice boy and buy it for me and bring it here next time you come.

So as not to shock you, I'll say that here another copy happened along. It's a book of poetry conditions there. (There, even I'm calling him Francis since the engagement) is visible. I'm sure, so I suppose you'll come as well?

Will you come up in a "true love" or he'll broken? I told him that he'd better get a ready-bulldozing concern, he wanted to see if he couldn't get us to help him sell his houses and the commission with us.

There's quite a coolness between the house of Snelgrove and the house of Flint—hence the disappointment. Price: I do chatter! Well, I'm not now, Au revoir.

Your sincere friend, P. R.—You'll get that book, you? I wish Mary would write more frequently. Her letters sure do follow up.

I've been trying my hand at the real estate, but it's not such a success I thought. Lee's a slick customer—he don't tend to have the short end of the stick. His $50 per week average earnings, I guess to look pretty good. His only one-time job yet he didn't never asked full details.
