"CALICO BOHEMIANS" HAVE RIGHT TO DRINK

License Court Refuses to Revoke Selling Privilege at Dad's Hotel

"Bohemians in calico" must have a place for pleasure as well as those who wear silks, commented Judge Shoemaker and Wessel in the liquor license court today when the Department of Justice again brought before the court the case against Dad's Theatrical Hotel, 150 North Seventh street, whose license they seek to revoke on the ground that he permitted disorderly and obscene conduct in his cafe.

It was admitted by the department that the majority of the patrons of Dad's are theatrical people from burlesque houses and vaudeville circuits. The testimony presented at the original hearing was to the effect that the revocable started after about 10 o'clock and no one was admitted to the room unless they were known by "Dad" Frazer, the proprietor, or were recommended by someone he knew.

This testimony, Judge Wessel said, in his opinion showed that Frazer tried to conduct his place in strict accordance with what its name implied it to be, a theatrical hotel, where those of that profession might enjoy themselves after the theatres closed.

"You must remember," the judge said, "that those who wear calico have no more right to drink liquor than those who wear calico, and you can't expect the latter class to visit large, first-class hotels for the pleasure."

Todd Daniel, counsel for the department, admitted that such was the case, and at the suggestion of Judge Shoemaker the rule to revoke Frazer's license was held under further advisement and his place will be kept under observation.

Mrs. Mary Beer, who has a license at 325 South Second street, was declared by Judge Wessel to be "swallowing as close to the line as possible without violating the law." A rule to revoke her license was presented by creditors of her husband, Louis Beer, who originally held the license, but dies about two years ago.

Mrs. Beer had the license transferred to her as executor of the estate, and when the creditors sought to have her pay the old debts she declared that the license was part of the property and as she was the owner of the property she was not liable for the debts. The rule to revoke the license, presented by the creditors, was dismissed.

John Golden, 457-59 North Broad street, agreed to close his upstairs room at 8 o'clock in the evening, and thus eliminate an objectionable feature that threatened to cost him his license. The Department of Justice, upon this agreement, withdrew a rule to revoke his license.

Mrs. Emma Kunkel, 144 North Twelfth street, agreed to close entirely a small room in the rear of her saloon which caused a rule against her asking for the revocation of the license. This rule was withdrawn when she said she would close the room.

The judges granted a transfer of the license of Dennis P. Murphy, 2974 Aramingo avenue, to Joseph Maroz, Maroz is now in the army, having been drafted about two months ago.

SALOON PLEDGE MAY FALL. Don't Want to Keep Pact to Close at Midnight

Saloonkeepers may back out of their agreement to close at midnight, beginning tomorrow.

The action is favored by many liquor dealers to make up for losses due to the influenza shutdown.

Decision will be made this afternoon following a conference between City Fuel Administrator Lewis and Neil Bonner, president of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

500 OPERATIVES WILL LIST LABOR

American Protective League to Assist Community Boards

CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS

Men to Handle Questionnaires and Aid Transfer to Essential Industry

Between four and five hundred operatives of the American Protective League will serve the Associated Community Labor Boards in listing less essential labor employees in Philadelphia.

A list of the names of the proposed activities of the league members, working in conjunction with the Department of Justice, was made today by P. H. Gaskill, acting chief of the Philadelphia division of the protective league.

He said that the men would distribute, collect and investigate all the questionnaires sent to the 7000 employees in non-essential industries and would serve in any way to bring about the successful transfer of the needed 35,000 workers here to essential war industries.

Notice for volunteers among the league members has been sent out and candidates are urged by Mr. Gaskill to communicate with league headquarters in the Federal Bank Building without delay.

The contingent of league operatives will work directly under the leadership of Ernest T. Trigg, president of the Chamber of Commerce and regional adviser of the war industries board.

Men and women alike are called upon to volunteer their services in essential work by going to the nearest United States employment bureau and "signing up" for service needed by the Government.

From the questionnaires of employees returned by the employers, will be called the required number of persons needed to carry on the war program. Employees must respond under "the work-or-fight" order, while employers, by order of the war industries board, must contribute a specified amount of workers or their supplies and transportation cut off by the Government.

The duty of the league operatives also will be to see that the wishes of the Government in the listing and transfer of needed labor are faithfully and properly executed and that all violators are apprehended.

Given Four Years for Arson Louis Engle was sentenced to a term of four years in the County Prison by Judge Audenried in the Quarter Sessions Court, after a jury had convicted him of a charge of arson. The accusation against Engle grew out of the burning of the Burt Building, 142-23 Catharine street, last August. Testimony was adduced to show that the defendant had an interest in a business in the building.

Saloon Row Leads to Shooting Frank Olsen, of 2837 East Schiller street, is in the Frankford Hospital with a bullet wound in the stomach, as a result of a shooting scene in the saloon of John Tannelle, 2914 North Mutter street, last night. John Subawanski is charged with the shooting.

REBUFF GIVEN GUDEHUS BY UNITED BUSINESS MEN

Mayor's Personally Selected Recreation Chief and Judge MacNeille, of Board, Ask Co-operation, but Requests Are Simply Placed on File—Councilmen Attack Letters

Mayor Smith's new recreation board, and his personally selected supervisor of playgrounds, E. R. Gudehus, got the cold shoulder from the United Business Men's Association last night.

Letters from Judge Raymond MacNeille, president of the board, and Supervisor Gudehus seeking the endorsement of the association, were "received and placed on file." The voice of a friend raised in behalf of Judge MacNeille was hoisted down.

The letters were accepted by the business men as camouflage. They invited the members of the seventy-five branches of the association to help the board in its work, and, as a sign of good faith, to appoint committees to be present at the dedication of the new Kingessing recreation center.

Announcing to president of the board of directors of the association. After his letter was read, a long silence ensued.

"Why, this is a scheme, an underhand trick to make us approve the appointment of the members of the board and the discredited supervisor, who are illegally holding office," exclaimed William R. Horn, select councilman of the Twenty-third Ward.

A Charles von Tagen, select councilman from the Forty-second Ward, backed up Horn in his denunciation.

"These letters of MacNeille and Gudehus are a pretty good attempt to get the endorsement of this association of what has been one of the greatest stonewalls in the history of this city—the debauching of the recreation system," said Von Tagen.

"Though Judge MacNeille is a friend of mine, I must say that I know what he was doing when he accepted the position as head of the board. I admire the action of Mrs. Edward Biddle, who, when appointed by the Mayor to the board, quickly resigned when she knew in the hands of the Mayor, and would only last five minutes if the Mayor so wills it."

CITY THEATRES PASS UNDER CENSOR'S EYE Moral and Sanitary Inspection of Vaudeville and "Movies" Under Way

Inspectors of the Philadelphia committee on protective work for girls have undertaken "informal inspections" of all motion-picture houses and vaudeville theatres in the city.

They aim not only to eliminate any performances that are not considered beneficial to youths and young girls, but to force the establishment of better sanitary conditions where necessary.

The committee that has undertaken the work is a branch of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities and has headquarters at 130 South Fifteenth street.

The demand of the committee is for "wholesome entertainment" in all amusement places. In cases where the "censors" are not satisfied with the performances the managers of the establishments will be appealed to for an improvement.

Inspections to date have been carried on only in the center of the city and in West Philadelphia. No complaints of either the class of the performances or the cleanliness and comfort of the playhouses have been made.

GIVE MRS. WILSON YARN RACK Protective Boys Act on Hearing President Has to Hold Skeins

Boys of the Philadelphia Catholic Protective boys have gone to President Wilson's aid at the same time making Mrs. Wilson a nice gift.

When the boys heard that the President held skeins of yarn while Mrs. Wilson wound it on board a train from Washington to New York, they decided that his hands were too busy for such work.

The problems of the whole world are too heavy for him to have to spend his spare moments holding skeins, the boys figured.

So they made a skein and yarn holder and sent it to Mrs. Wilson.

In return, Brother Philip, head of the boys, received from her a letter of acknowledgment and thanks.

HOG ISLAND WILL ESCAPE SHIP CUT

Contract for Seventy Army Transports Will Not Be Canceled by U. S.

HURLEY GIVES PLANS

Reduction Being Made in Facilities Originally Planned at New York Shipyard

Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the shipping board, announced that the contract for the building of seventy army transports at Hog Island would not be disturbed, despite the shipping board's action in abandoning proposed construction of the Bethlehem yards at Alameda, Cal.

Chairman Hurley also said the building of transports contracted for at the New York Shipbuilding Company's plant, and at the Bethlehem yard at Sparrows Point, Md., will go on.

His statement regarding the outlining of the shipping board's policy regarding the future building of transports reads:

"Last April the military program was so materially enlarged that the War Department called on the Emergency Fleet Corporation for the construction of ninety-four transports, totaling over 1,000,000 deadweight tons.

The troopship program the Emergency Fleet Corporation had at that time undertaken was but little more than one-half of that total tonnage.

"A careful survey was made immediately, in order to determine which of the old yards could undertake additional construction of this type of ship. It was realized, of course, that these fast and complicated vessels could be constructed only under experienced management, and the choice of yards was necessarily confined to those which had already built vessels of a similar type.

"The Fore River yard, the yard of the Cramp Ship and Engine Building Company, and the yard of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company were so completely loaded up with navy work that they were unavailable for the execution of this additional program. It was, therefore, decided that construction should be undertaken by the New York Shipbuilding Company, the Bethlehem shipbuilding company at Sparrows Point, Md., and a new plant to be constructed adjacent to the Bethlehem shipbuilding yard at Alameda, Cal.

"The Sparrows Point yard had already been enlarged for the purpose of undertaking the construction of vessels of a larger type, and enlargements of the yard of the New York Shipbuilding Company were authorized.

"At the same time certain reductions in the facilities originally planned in connection with the extensions to the New York Shipbuilding Company's yard at Camden, N. J., were ordered, and this order is now being carried out by the Emergency Fleet Corporation."

CITY TO DON CAMOUFLAGE IN WARTIME HALLOWEEN

Merrymakers, Old and Young, Will Celebrate Tonight, Despite Restrictions of Fuel and Food Authorities and War's Levy on Ranks of Masqueraders

Goblins and merry-makers will reign tonight throughout Philadelphia—for this is Halloween.

Although the fuel regulations still compel a limit on illumination, what is lacking in light will be made up by the glaring colors of the merrymakers' costumes and the gaiety of the merry-makers.

While the ranks of the masqueraders will be thinned by the absence of thousands who have gone to rout the hoots, nevertheless there will be thousands on the streets to aid in routing the gloom.

In all sections of the city there will be parties and an abundance of music to add to the spirit of the occasion.

Halloween has always been a time for feasting as well as fun. Tonight the feast will have to be arranged along economical lines due to the food regulations, and there must be no waste.

Jack-o'-lantern carved out of pumpkins are under the ban. This involves waste of food, and Howard Heinz, Federal food administrator for Pennsylvania, has prohibited the use of pumpkins for this purpose. He also forbids the waste of corn, beans, peas and other kinds of food which are frequently thrown about at Halloween parties.

Regardless of the food restrictions it is possible for celebrants to have an ample feast, for there is no end of good things available which do not come under the ban.

Those who celebrate on the street will be obliged to observe the police regulations. Superintendent of Police Mills has issued orders prohibiting disorderly conduct, throwing of confetti or destruction of property in the slightest degree.

HELD FOR "PLAYING HORSE" Man Accused of Attempting to Sell Stolen Wagon

Leo Hanlon, thirty-three years old, of street near Toga, was held in $500 bail today by Magistrate Wigley at the Germantown avenue and Locomotion street police station for "playing horse."

Hanlon is charged with taking a light wagon belonging to N. Masington, 1511 Spring Garden street, from in front of a stable at 2548 North Fifth street. The wagon is valued at $25, and Hanlon is alleged to have tried to sell it for $20.

Hanlon told Magistrate Wigley that, after he had hauled the wagon around several hours, he abandoned it at Orkney and Ontario streets. The vehicle has not been found.
