VESTERDAY was quite an eventful day socially, wasn't it? Well, you see, it was because some persons were wise enough to have some little parties for the children and time honored Hallow E'en gave everyone a chance to have some ne fun. It makes one go back to one's childhood days; and the grown-ups I really think have as much fun as the

The George Buckley Warders had party for their daughter Betty in the evening out at Chestnut Hill. Most of the kiddles were of the school set. About thirteen, fourteen and fifteen years old, you know, and to say they had a good time was certainly true.

Another party out Chestnut Hillwards was given by the Ed Norrises for their daughter, Emma Norris, another young member of the school set, and still another party was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bicknell for their daughter Frances. Here again the little guests were members of the younger school set. They were all informal affairs, but all the more

Most of the parties seem to have taken place around Chestnut Hill, but there were some out on the Main Line too. And on the Main Line, you know, they always have the custom of dressing up and going about in masquerade from house to house, though only to the houses where one's friends live

Did I ever tell you about the time several girls of high degree who lived on the Main Line decided they would like to see the interior of a house which had been recently built? The owners were not in the Social Register, as it were; in other words, they were not on their list, so they had not been visited by these same girls. or their families, when they moved into the new home.

Well, these girls dressed up and went around among their friends and they found that one or two did not know them, so they decided they would call at the new house; they were sure they could get away with it, and they had heard it was a wonder. So they went, and imagine how they felt, when they heard the hostess remark to the butler, "Show them the lower floor, Blake; they came to see the house; I'm sorry, but I'm busy and cannot be disturbed.

That's a true one and served them right, n'est-ce-pas?

THEAR that Josephine Reeves is going to the Pennsylvania Hospital on Monday to start a three years' course in nursing. Joe is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Butler Reeves, of Germantown, you know, and has been working awfully hard as a first lieutenant in the Junior corps of the National League for Woman's Service. and during the influenza epidemic she did volunteer work in the wards at the I'mnsylvania Horpital. So you see the work won't be entirely new to her. She's taking the regular nurses' course, not as a member of the Student Nurse Reserve.

WHEN we got into the war he wanted to go but he was too young. He had his heart set on aviation, and he tried to get in. He couldn't make it on account of his age, and by the time he got to the R. A. F. Americans were no longer allowed therein. So he was compelled to content himself with work in a war factory until he got older or something happened. Then he got tired of waiting for time to pass and tried the marines, the navy, the tank corps; anything that would let him "get into this war." Then the draft age was and enlistments were closed, so something he could enlist in, in fact he found three things and applied for all three, and now he's hearing from all of them at the same time and it's slightly hectic. But anyhow he's going to get in and it makes him very happy. This morning he came down to breakfast and found Father chuckling over the morning paper. "Well," he beamed, "it looks as if things were about finishing up over there." "Don't talk like that, Father; wait till I get into this war before you finish it," pleaded Son earnestly. "Well, I don't think there will be much more of it," Father insisted. ."Oh, be cheerful, be cheer ful!" Son exclaimed. And he doesn't understand yet why Father laughed. NANCY WYNNE.

Propy is reacued from the Blue Imps by the Giant of the Woods and the Rosy Pres. and goes with them to the aid of the mother of the Dalton soldier boys.)

CHAPTER V In the Trenches

Pour away that ink. It's filled with Ready Smiler, as Mrs. Dalton prepared to write another letter to her soldier sons. Peggy obeyed and Mrs. Dalton opened a fresh bottle. This the Rosy Peps filled with their own eggs.

"These eggs will hatch out cheerfulness fun. courage, hope, confidence and all things good," explained Sir Ready Smiler.

"What shall I say?" asked Mrs. Dalton "Tell your boys how good the crops have been; tell them about the frisky calf and the greedy young pigs for which you are going to get a good price; tell them about how splendidly this country is backing them now splendidly this country is backing them up by huying Liberty Bonds and subscribing to the Red Crose, Y. M. C. A., K. of C. and all other war activities; tell them how you thrill when you read in the papers of American victories. There's plenty of cheery things to write about."

"To be sure there are. I can fill my letter so full of them there'll not be room for th little troubles that have been in my mind. Mrs. Dalton went at her letter with a happy test much different from the gloomy depression with which she had been writing hefore She smiled

"Kisses are a whole lot better than tenderops." declared the Giant, "If you'll be real good and promise not to speak or try to make yourself known, we'll take you with us when we deliver the letter," said Sir Ready Smiler.

"Oh, I promise," cried Mrs. Daiton, her eyes glowing.

eyes glowing.
"Put on the Wings of Fancy," ordered
Sir Ready Smiler. The Rosy Peps quickly fastened pink wings, much like their own, to the shoulders of Mrs. Dalton, Peggy and "And now for the trenches." cried Sir Ready Smiler.

With that the whole party flew out of the door and high up into the misty air. Presently they became lost in a dark cloud and could not see the earth beneath them. "Here we are in France," announced Sir Ready Smiler, after they had sailed along few moments. "Remember to keen

Down they darted into deep night. This pussled Peggy until she remembered that the time is faster in Europe than in America, the sun getting up hours earlier in the morning and setting hours sooner in the evening.

"My boys," whispered Mrs. Dalton. Sure enough, there were Ben and Bill, alert and strong, keeping watch toward the German trenches. With them was a third soldier whom they called Bob. The three, while vigilant and ready for action, were joking cheerfully among themselves. cheerfully among themselves.
"I wish we could get a crack at the Fritzies tonight. I feel as though I could lick a dozen of them," said Rob.
"So do we," declared Ben and Bill, and "So do we," declared sen and Bill, and Peggy saw their mother's face light up with pride.

"Here's the mail," spoke a seldier, coming along with a sackful of letters. He handed one letter to Bob and then looked through his sack. "I thought I had one for you, Ben and Bill, but I can't find it," he said.

Peggy knew why he couldn't find it. She had seen Sir Ready Smiler take a big blue envelope out of his sack just before he reached the soldiers. The blue envelope was buiging out so large Sir Ready Smiler could scarcely handle it. The Blue Imps within were already hatching out.

"Well, we are glad Bob got one anyway." said Ben and Bill, bravely concealing their own disappointment.

As Bob opened his letter, Blue Imp fairly poured out of it. As he rend they aprang from every line, until they were swarming all over him. In an instaut they had tied him with fetters, as they had tied own with a groun, all the sturdy aleriness and vigor gone out of him.

"Oh, mother, mother, how you have dis-couraged me." he sobbed.

"Brace up, Bob! Look's as if we were going to have that scrap we were waiting for," spoke up Ben, looking out toward the Bob only sagged down the lower.

"I don't care. Mother says everything is going wrong at home and I guess I might as well quit over here."

Bill shook his head sadly at Ben.

"I'm giad our mother doesn't write letters like that." he whispered. Mrs. Dalton gasped and looked at fir Ready Smiler, who showed her the blue letter he was replacing with the cheerful one.

"FOLLIES" THIS YEAR GREATER THAN EVER

Ziegfeld Production at the Forrest Riot of Fun and Gorgeous Spectacle

To say that the twelfth annual "Ziegfeld Follies," which reopened the Forrest Theatre last night, is a lavish beauty show, a dancing, singing pageant of exquisite feminine charm and pletorial richness, a riot of fun and nonsense, together with a wealth of scenic surprises and patriotic appeals, may seem like extravagant description bordering seem like extravagant description bordering on the superlatives of the circus poster, but it's true, nevertheless—the production merits

Year after year Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., bas sent us the "Follies," and each new edition has marked a step in an ascending scale of attractiveness until, in the present offering one feels the lim't has been reached. The lines and lyrics of the latest version are by Rennold Wolf and Gene Buck. Louis A Hirsch and Dave Stamper composed most of Hirsch and Dave samper composed most of the music, but there are numbers by Irving Berlin and Victor Jacobi. Many of the songs are of the snappy variety and there are

Like its predecessors, the new "Follies" is all that a music show should be. There are no piotty problems to engage one's mind or, as is sometimes the case in theatrical offerings, insult the intelligence. It has been built to please the eye and ear; the brain may lie asleep. That is part of the secret of Ziegfeldian success. The other contrib-uting factors are: First (and perhaps the greatest), that wonderful institution—girl, of which there is no better picker in the realm of showdom than this same Ziegfeld, as evidenced in last night's parade of pulchritude; second, the assemblage of always about a dozen top-notch, worth-while come d'ans and singers. There are twice as many laughs in the present "Follies" than any

Mr. Ziegfeld's first assistant in preparing the stage pictures in the current was, as on former occasions, that of brush and color-blending, Joseph Most all of the settings show rare artistic taste, and the electrical effects are splendid. From the rise of the curtain disclosing Marie Wallace, comely of face and with none of the wonderful curves of her figure lost in her one-plece costume, standing aton the "Warring World," to the finale the show is alternating "pep" and picture. Will Rodgers heads the funnakers. This elever talking rope-twirler was never better. Many of his quips had a local flavor. For Many of his quips had a local flavor. For instance, he casually remarked that he had not'ced that this State was the only one where politics was included among the victims of the epidemic. Others of the comedians who scored individual success were W. C. Flelds, the com'c juggler and trickster; Eddle Cantor, Harry Kelly, Savoy and Brennan and Gus Minton. An old favorite who was missed was Bert Williams. He is no longer a member of the troupe. Frank Carter sings well.

On the pulchritudinous side there is allyn King, who appears in most every scene; pretty Marilynn Miller, the graceful dancer; everybody's favorite, petite Ann dancer; everybody's favorite, petite Ann Pennington, the Fairbanks twins, Mildred Richardson, whose song numbers were well received, and Hazel Washburn.

CALL FOR STUDENTS AT OFFICERS' SCHOOL

Pennsylvania to Furnish 1470 Candidates for Commissions at Camp Fremont

The War Department has issued a call for applications from civilians to enter the new infantry officers' training school at Camp Fremont, California. The camp starts December 1.

With a capacity of 20,000 this school will afford draft men another chance to obtain commissions as second lieutenants of infan try. Registrants between eighteen and fortysix years old are eligible, with the exception of those in deferred classes by reason of industrial or agricultural occupation.

The quota assigned to the Department of the East is 4240 student officers. The States included in this department have been allot ted quotas as enumerated below:

New York, 1670; Pennsylvania, 1410; New Jersey, 470; Delaware, 40; Maryland, 210; District of Columbia, 60: Virginia 380 With a big draft call expected soon there is not much time left to apply for Camp Fremont School and the authorities are speeding the work. In addition to the quota allotted to each State, an alternate list of 10 per cent is to be made up and prospective applicants should not delay in preparing their papers.

The physical requirements for the Camp Fremont School are those for general mili-tary service. Registrants now in deferred classes who enter the school may revert to qualify for a commission. Those in Class 1, however, will be required to remain in the service, commission or no commission

Every effect is being made to speed up the enrollment for the California center and headquarters for applications to be filed are being opened throughout the Eastern Department. The course of instruc-tion at Camp Fremont will be about two menths and candidates must be there not later than December I nor before November

Negro candidates for commissions will no be accepted for Camp Fremont, but will be sent to the training school at Camp Pike, Arkansas.

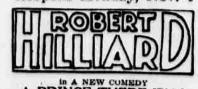

Applications will be received by examining officers located at educational institutions having units of students' army training
