FEDERAL RAID IN GLOUCESTER

Bootlegger Suspect Had Whisky, Liberty Bond and War Stamps When agents of the Department of Justice arrested Charles Whitcomb, an electrician employed at one of the Gloucester shipyards, on suspicion of having given liquor to marines, they found in a handbag he carried a pint of whisky, a Liberty bond, and $70 worth of war savings stamps. Mayor Anderson sent Whitcomb to the county jail to await arraignment later before U. S. Commissioner Joline, in Camden. He was to have reported today for examination before a Kensington draft board.

Three other men were arrested by Department of Justice agents last night in Gloucester. They were James Richardson, of Gloucester: Joseph J. Kinsle, employed as a carpenter at Yorkship Village, and Thomas Boyle, also of Yorkship Village. All were accused of having furnished liquor to men in the service.
