

ALLIES WATCHING CABINET AT OMSK

French Commissioner Arrives and American Consul General Is Expected

SEES HOPE FOR RUSSIA

Men of New Government Reputed Honest and Trying to Bring About Order

By CARL W. ACKERMAN Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger

Omsk, Nov. 14 (Special).—Eugene Legrand, the French High Commissioner, has arrived on a special train from Vladivostok. Next week Consul General Harris, of Helsinki, is expected here, representing America.

M. Regnaud's presence in the temporary capital of the All-Russian Government and the announcement that Consul General Harris will investigate for Washington, coupled with Sir Charles Elliott's recent visit, indicates that France, England and the United States are showing official interest in the new Russian Government, which contemplates the reorganization of the empire of Russia and the establishment of a government which will succeed the Bolsheviks.

The presence of these men, however, does not indicate that the Allies are ready to recognize officially the Government as Russia's real power, but that the Allies see possibilities in this cabinet for Russia's reorganization.

M. Regnaud, who was met with a splendid reception from the Russians and Czechs en route, came here impressed with the public attitude toward the Omsk Government. When I saw France's former ambassador at Tokyo and questioned him about the attitude of the Allies toward the Government, M. Regnaud said:

"I am glad to know that the people at the head of this Government are men of good faith, honest, serious and able. The Allies have not yet recognized them, but I think they are favorably disposed. From all I have seen, the population is quite in accord with the Government, because it purports to establish order, while the Bolsheviks want only disaster, some here representing France for the purpose of intervening in the Government officials. While I cannot say how what attitude France will take, I believe the Allies and the French plan will be, first, to encourage it if necessary, and, third, if the Allies see this Government is giving good administration to extend recognition to it as the Government of all Russia."

"Since the formation of the Russian Government the Siberian Government has ceased to exist. I know that the Government officials normally always found their ready and willing to work with the Allies."

I asked the High Commissioner about Prince Lvoff's mission. He answered:

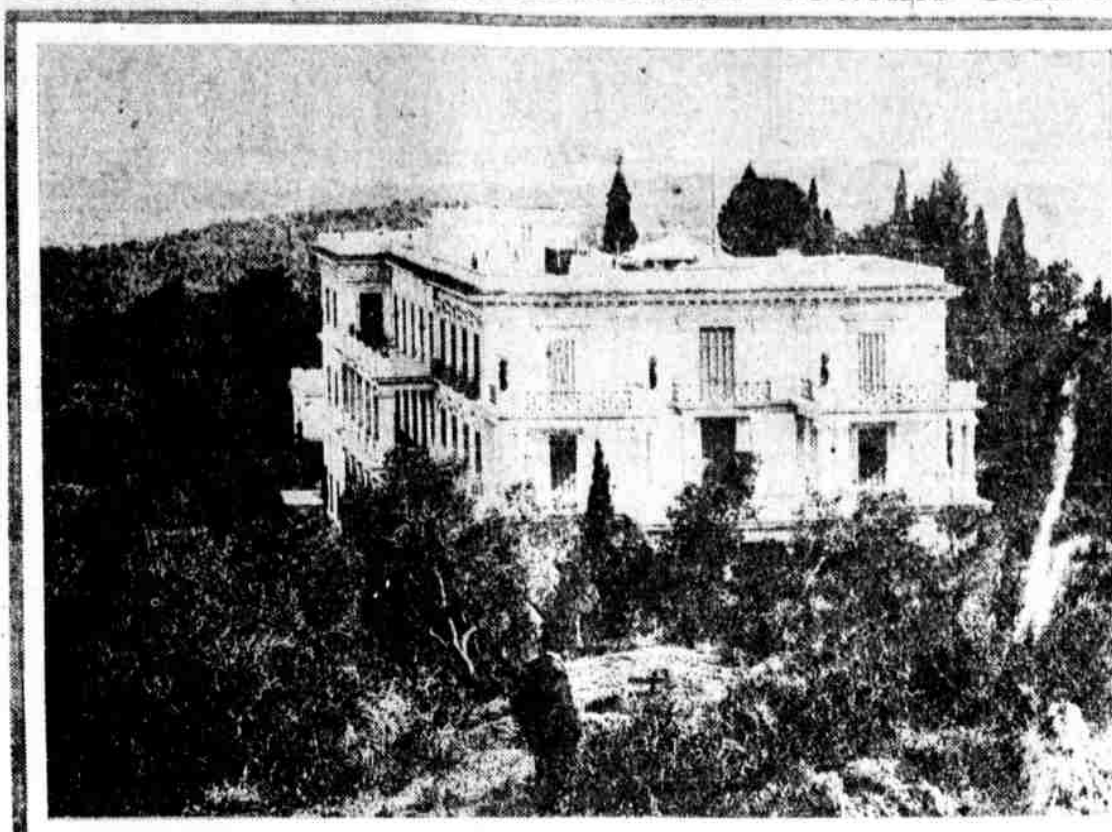

"Lvoff is the unofficial representative of the new Government. In all of his remarks the Prince has always spoken highly of this Government, saying the directors and ministers were honest, pure and energetic men."

When I asked how long the Bolsheviks were expected to hold out, M. Regnaud smiled, saying:

"We hope that with Allied help from the Black Sea, Archangel and through the Czechs here the Bolsheviks' strength will break. England, France and Italy are all sending troops to aid the Czechs. When the Czechs know we are coming to their assistance, that help is coming from all sides, and that the Germans are withdrawing from Russia, it will encourage them—this is the whole situation here. The only question is the morale of the Allies against the morale of the Bolsheviks."

Captain Gaston Bourgeois and Captain Pushoff accompany M. Regnaud.

HOHENZOLLERN LOOKS LONGINGLY TOWARD CORFU

These dispatches say the former Kaiser has expressed a desire to live in exile at the wonderful Villa Achilleon at Corfu, largest of the Ionian Islands in the Mediterranean. The island was occupied by Allied troops in 1917. The castle was built for the Empress Elizabeth of Austria in 1891; it came into the possession of the former Kaiser by purchase in 1907. During the war the castle was seized by the French and used as a hospital for wounded.

FRITZ AS A CAPTIVE IS MEAT FOR TALES

Bunch of Good Stories Taken From Trench Newspaper

The German had led them into the fight, and it was the colonel's ill-fated eye which noticed that the little, eighteen-year-old private had been gassed, says Stars and Stripes, from which this entire string of prisoner stories is taken.

Your M. P. must escort the prisoners to the rear, and there has been quite a lot of this job lately up Chateau-Thierry way. One captured lieutenant got quite a way down the road with a pistol hidden on him, and, in a moment of relaxation at the evening he was getting from fifty of his own men who were coming straggling cheerfully into bondage with him, he took a pot shot at the M. P. The M. P. was wounded, but not disabled, and a pistol shot followed in another moment there was one less Prussian Junker in this vale of tears. The outcome was greeted with unfeigned delight by all the other prisoners, who were reveling in the first chance to speak their minds that they had had in all their days.

COTTON UP $10 A BALE

New York, Nov. 14.—Cotton advanced 10¢ a bale within a few minutes after the market opened here today.

This represents the maximum in cotton prices since a new low was reached in the early part of the year.

"Do you allow prisoners to call officers by their first names in this army?" he demanded witheringly.

"Why?" asked the officer.

"Well, this pluck," said the officer, "called me 'Helm' every time he addressed me."

A German lieutenant came before the officer who was sitting and talking to him.

"What's your name?" he was asked.

"Johannes Jauch," he answered.

"Any relation to Wilhelm Jauch?" asked the American officer.

"A brother," said the liege in surprise.

"Well, if you look around when you see there, you'll find him in the prison of a piece. We got him, too."

HELD FOR BOND THEFTS

Land Title Co. Clerk Identifies One of Accused Men

Samuel Franka, of New York, was committed in default of $12,000 bail by Magistrate Meslery, at the City Hall police court, yesterday, for a further hearing next Thursday on the charges of conspiracy to steal $29,500 of Liberty Bonds from the Land Title and Trust Company on May 23.

William Kiley and Louis Merriam were held for trial in the same bail as accomplices of Franka.

Merriam was identified by C. Reginald Scott, a clerk for the trust company, as a man who after and failed to overtake on the day the bonds were stolen.

He said he saw him crawling out from under the counter at the time the bonds were missed.

Kiley was identified by Joseph Mooney, a contractor, of 211 Fernon street, as the man who had placed $12,500 of the bonds in his hands to dispose of. He said he sold a $500 bond to a man in Girard avenue and tried to sell a $1000 bond to a man named Solomon, after which he turned the bonds over to the police.
