

WARNER AND HEISMAN WILL RENEW FOOTBALL RELATIONS WHEN TECH AND PITT CLASH

GEORGIA TECH AND PITT COACHES MET JUST 23 YEARS AGO

Warner and Heisman, Tutors of Two Greatest Football Teams of Year, Were Famous Southern Rivals Two Decades Ago and Earned 50-50 Break

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

WAY back in 1895, when football players wore long hair and canvas jackets, there appeared in the city of Athens, Ga., a young man fresh from college who had decided to embark on a career as a football coach.

About the same time, another youthful person took up the game of football as his life's work and got a job at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, situated in Auburn, Ga.

Warner and Heisman are old rivals and each has a lot of respect for the other. Even in the older days they worked hard to put over something new, but it was a hard job.

The disciples of modern football have been stacked against each other on two different occasions. In 1895 Heisman won the game by the score of 12 to 6, and in 1896 Warner turned the tables with a 16 to 6 victory.

It is a strange twist of fate that brings together these men, who started together and made good in different sections of the country.

Warner's Trick Plays Finally Downed Heisman

BUT to step back into the past for another paragraph. When Warner started coaching at the University of Georgia he soon learned that the big game of the year was with Auburn on Thanksgiving Day, at Atlanta.

"Oh, don't worry," he was told. "We beat Auburn last year and we'll do the same this year. That guy Heisman isn't so much, and we are not afraid of him."

Warner took their advice, and on the day of the game believed he would win. Heisman, however, proved beyond all question of doubt that he had the goods; his team romped all over Georgia and won by the score of 12 to 6.

The next year the Georgia coach took no chances. He studied the play of Auburn from the beginning of the season and his scouts followed Heisman's team everywhere.

Between the halves Warner conceived a new play, which was to be used on the kickoff. He knew only a fluke or trick play could gain him a victory.

"When we kicked off," said Warner, in explaining the play, "we dribbled the ball down the side line and one of our men fell on it. Then we lined up and the quarterback gave the signal for a wide end run.

That was the end of the scoring, and I still believe that the game would have resulted in a tie if that trick play hadn't been used."

Heisman Explains His Famous "Jump Shift"

DOCTOR HEISMAN witnessed the Pitt-Penn game at Pittsburgh last Saturday, but would make no comment after the game. In the morning, however, he discussed his much-talked-of "jump shift," and declared it was according to the rules and not illegal.

"Numerous descriptions of the 'jump shift' have appeared in the papers, but each has been inaccurate, if not actually misleading," declared Heisman.

"Upon original formation, the snapper (center) with the ball is the only man on the actual scrimmage line. The rest of the linemen—two guards, two tackles and two ends—are about one yard back of the snapper.

"On a given signal the team, except the snapper, jumps to certain given directions—according to the play called for. They do not all jump alike, either in direction or direction. As a matter of fact the jump in its entirety calls for the men to jump in a great variety of differing ways.

There is only one thing that they always do in common and that is they all jump SIMULTANEOUSLY. When properly drilled and practiced, this jump in unison results in their landing on earth in perfect unison in their new positions.

Shift Play Absolutely Legal, Insists Heisman

AT THE completion of this jump they come to a complete stop, as is required by the rules, and seven of them always are found to be on the line of scrimmage, as again called for by the rules.

"In their new positions after the jump, the eleven men pass for the barest fraction of a second. Almost instantly after the shift and the fractional stop of the players on the scrimmage line, the ball goes into play.

"The Heisman man-in-power not only the backs, but the linemen as well. It is employed on EVERY close formation play, and calls for a great variety of differing ways and distances of jumping on the part of the different men, whereas in most shifts all the men shift uniform distances and in the same direction.

"Early in the season it is difficult to teach new men the thing so they will not either jump too soon or too late and thus offend some rule or other; but by November it is always found working very smoothly.

The best evidence in the world that the 'jump shift' is not illegal is the fact that we have employed it in each of our games since 1910 in which some of the most famous officials in America have been involved—and not one has found fault with it."

Any team that plays against Pitt absorbs a heap of bumps and football knowledge. This has been the case with Penn. The Quakers gained a lot of experience by battling the Panther veterans, and in view of the fact that they survived without any serious injury, the game was an advantage despite the defeat.

It is how one Penn player feels about the Pitt game: "I'm sorry we lost, but I feel honored that we played against such a wonderful team. I never thought muscle and bone could come at me so fast. Now I am surprised that once I feel immune to any further injury."

DRILLS AT PENN TO START TODAY

Quakers, After Three Days' Rest, Begin Swarthmore Preparation

MAKE SEVERAL CHANGES

The first football drill of the week will be held at Franklin Field this afternoon. After three days' rest the Quakers start their preparation for the second Swarthmore game of the season which will be staged Saturday.

The Red and Blue came out of the Pitt battle in a battered condition, but with the exception of Wilmington, all the players will be in shape to engage the Garnet eleven.

There has been talk of Coaches Powell and Hollenback moving Danny McNichol from fullback to end, but the rumor was quashed by Powell, who laughed at the suggestion.

The work of Peter was not entirely satisfactory to the coaches in the Pitt battle and it would not be surprising if Walker or the Jap, Akalashoki, would stand in for Hopper.

Notes of the Alleys

White Elephants' score of 1600 pins last week marks a new figure so far this season. Four of the team all tossed for double centuries and over in the second game rolling with the Girard squad. The highest single game score was rolled by Grossman, with a toss of 218 pins, and each of the other three rolled 213, and Knox one pin less.

Only four teams entered the Philadelphia Made Hardware League this season, namely: Harpise, Dismore, Plum Brothers and Miller Lock. This league will roll every Friday evening on the Casino alleys.

Although Country Gentlemen quieted up both a substitute and were allotted a handicap of thirty-eight, forty and thirty-two pins, it was unable to check the Journal squad last week, losing all three games. This Friday night revenge will be sweet for the team.

Eighteen pin scatterers of the Quaker City League were selected for the double century and spare pins. Bailey, Muller and Knox each having two out of their three games rolled.

The Curtis League again entered the running this season with the same number of teams as last year, eight. The department being represented and some keen competition can be looked forward to during the balance of the season.

The Artisan League, Section C will finish the season with but six teams. Clark Lane failed to enter a team this season.

The Steel and Iron League this season will roll with but three teams. Eight teams have entered the league and will roll off their games on Monday evening of each week at the Costa alleys.

The Chicago Bowling Association will hold its annual tournament on November 30. A large class has already been received from the Great Lakes naval training station.

NEW GUARD FOR DICKSON'S TEAM

Johnston May Start for League Island Against Georgetown

PLAY VERMONT TODAY

A new guard who shows a great deal of promise has been discovered by Coach Dickson at League Island, and he is likely to start for the Navy Yard eleven against Georgetown at Washington on Saturday.

The newcomer is Johnston, and if he continues to show the form he displayed in the early part of the week, he may be Budd's running mate against the Washington eleven.

Dickson and his aids leave for the scene of the battle Saturday morning, and all the men are in excellent condition with the exception of Hael, the halfback, who was injured in the Brown game on Franklin Field Saturday.

Soccer News and Notes

Marine Gunner Dally, who played at Oxford, England, on the 1918 team, is now playing with the Marine soccer eleven. He will also assist Coach Dow, Jr. Dally also played with the Heath Rovers eleven, of Scotland.

Much has been written and said, both to permit substitutes and not to permit them on the local fields the more I am convinced that the time will come when substitutes will be allowed in both league and cup tie competitions.

To allow substitutions in the game will go a long way to making the game more popular in this country and without the support of the majority of the fans, it will never be allowed in both league and cup tie competitions.

We are glad to see Maxwell, of the Merchants' team, rapidly recovering. Maxwell broke his hand while doing his bit at the big shipyard.

Kinross soccer eleven is open for games during the remainder of the season. Meetings will be held at the Adams, McParlane, Room 304, 41 South Fifteenth street.

The Marine team, League Island, is represented by ten different States, with another player from the Canadian border: "Blindfold" of North Dakota; Sanders, Brian, of Burlington, Ill.; Smith, Springdale, of Illinois; Hodder, West Chester, Ohio; Galloway, of St. Louis, Mo.; and Galloway, of Indiana, and Wintemore, Attlebury, Mass.

Dixon, A. A. will tackle the Wanderers in their home grounds, at State road, Unruh street, next Saturday.

President John B. Farrell will hold a meeting of the Allied League this evening at Pearson's Hall. Several important matters are to be taken up, and it is his desire all officers be present.

W. AND J. STAR IS HURT

Edgar, Varsity Tackle, in Hospital With Brain Concussion

Washington, Pa., Nov. 20.—Bill Edgar, right tackle on the W. and J. football team, was taken to a hospital last night with concussion of the brain, sustained in the Pitt game of November 9. Edgar, whose home is at Williamsburg, Pa., was one of the stars of the Pitt contest, playing first at right tackle and then at right end in the second half after Tressel was injured.

He sustained a number of bumps, including one in the head, but did not appear to have suffered any serious injury. He was not well last week, however, and did not practice with the squad. He was kept out of the game last Saturday with Geneva. Within the last two days he has been somewhat dazed and late this afternoon lost consciousness and is now in that condition at the hospital. Physicians do not regard his condition as dangerous, but are uncertain as to developments. Edgar came to W. and J. from Kibbi.

FOOTBALL FUN, NOT WORK, TO EPISCOPAL

Coach McCarty Sees That Boys Enjoy Daily Drills; Chances of Beating Penn Charter Rosy

KRAFT NEW WINGMAN

By EDWIN J. POLLOCK

COACHING a schoolboy football team and coaching it successfully is a bigger job than the ordinary layman imagines. The averaged high or prep school player is at the age when he can be made or broken physically. The right kind of exercise will make him; the wrong kind, or too much exercise, will break him.

Lieutenant Lawson Robertson, the former Penn trainer, contends that where work begins the benefit of exercise stops. He also backs the theory that the best exercise comes from play. In other words, athletics that are enjoyable.

We went out yesterday to take a look at the Episcopal Academy players in practice and it was a relief to see a field who was not having a crackerjack time. It wasn't football drilling, it was football PLAYING.

McCarty Plays, Too

Charley McCarty, the coach, takes particular pains to see that his boys enjoy themselves. In his knickerbockers and sweater, Charley is as much of a boy as any candidate for his team and to show for it he has an athletic body that belies his sprinkling of gray hair.

Coach McCarty never allows his charges to take the practices too seriously; he never gives them enough work to think they are working. When he sees signs of a tired body, he calls off practice. He never uses up all the energy of his boys, with the result that his team has something left for the next day.

Let it not be thought that McCarty allows the Episcopal football players to joke their way through the season. He has the happy ability to mix work with pleasure. He teaches football and coaches it well, as the record of the team to date shows, but the players absorb the technical knowledge almost unconsciously and in playing at football they get to work at football instinctively.

Best Chance Since 1911

Coach McCarty's methods are vindicated by the fact that not since 1911 has an Episcopal eleven been so close to an intercollegiate championship as at the present moment. The battle for the title takes place at Queen Lane Friday afternoon and not since Ned Harris, the former Penn captain, led the Episcopal boys seven years ago have chances been so rosy.

This is McCarty's second year at Episcopal and Penn Charter, the Intercollegiate champion, for six years in succession, is wavering. McCarty's team may not win the title, but that does not mean that the season is a failure. No football season is a failure if the candidates are brought to better physical condition.

Episcopal has not been strong this season because of veterans. There are only three players on the team who were regulars last year.

Only Three Veterans

They are Captain Ringe, the center; Starr, the quarterback, and Jack Williams, the big blonde fullback. The rest of the team is made up of inexperienced boys.

Coach McCarty will start the same eleven against Penn Charter as the one which beat Germantown Academy last week, with one exception. Mock-

Great Lakes Routers Get Leave for Navy Game

Great Lakes, Ill., Nov. 20.—Preparations are under way today for a special train to carry football enthusiasts from the naval training station to the game on Saturday at Annapolis, Md., between the Great Lakes and Naval Academy teams. It is planned to have one hundred pieces of the battalion band accompany the excursionists.
