

CAMDEN TO HONOR HEROES' MEMORY

More Than $250,000 Will Be Spent for Living and Dead

SHAFT TO COST $100,000

Residents Shocked and Grieved at News That Old Third Was Shattered

More than $250,000 will be spent by Camden, N. J., citizens to honor the heroism of its boys in soldier khaki and sailor blue.

Announcement on Saturday that the gallant 114th Infantry, including the old Third of Camden, was virtually destroyed at Sedan, came as a severe blow to the mothers and fathers across the river.

They knew that their boys had paid a heavy price with their valor and wonderful spirit in the closing battles of the war, but not until the rumors concerning heavy casualties had been confirmed did they know the real truth.

"A terrible price to pay," said Mayor Charles H. Ellis, "but we are given some balm in the thought that our boys did not flinch and that in the awful struggle against overwhelming odds they stood firm and checked up a glowing victory for old Camden County."

List Not Complete

A complete list of the dead and wounded is yet to come and Camden awaits that list with an aching heart. Sixty of the men who left Camden for the war have paid the full price for their patriotism. Their names have been inscribed on the county's roll of honor, but a longer list will follow.

And Camden, appreciating what its soldier-sons did for the cause of world humanity, is planning a memorial to perpetuate their glory and convey to future generations the story of Camden County's effort in the great war.

Announcement was made today that a memorial shaft to be erected in one of the city's squares will cost more than $100,000 and that three temporary arches, to be erected immediately, will cost many thousands each.

James J. Scott, chairman of the memorial committee, announced that funds for the permanent memorial would be raised after the first of the year. He estimates that the shaft and expenses incident to the reception planned for the returning heroes will cost more than $175,000.

The veterans in the 114th Infantry and Battery B and Company B, of the 104th Engineers, are expected to return in the early summer and Camden will hold a three-day celebration.

For Men From Camps

In the meantime many of the city boys are returning from the camps and each is being given a cordial welcome. Sheriff William Penn Corson, chairman of the reception committee, extends to each returning soldier a personal welcome and then helps him re-enter the life of the city.

The committee, if it is necessary, finds a position for the soldier and also locates him in a good home, for many of the boys are returning to find that the influenza robbed them of father and mother.

The Ninth Ward Republican Club is erecting an elaborate arch at Broadway and Royden street and three others are to be erected in other sections. A big one will be put up at the Market street ferry entrance.

URGES BROADER RELIGION

Co-operation Asked by Speaker Addressing Presbyterian Ministers

A broader spirit of co-operation between Protestants and Catholics was urged by Clinton N. Howard, former member of the New York Assembly, and of the Society of Friends' delegate to the council on organic union of the evangelist Protestant churches, held in this city last week, at a meeting of Presbyterian ministers in Westminster Hall today.

The welfare work of the Knights of Columbus and Y. M. C. A. at the army and navy centers, he said, showed Catholics and Protestants can work together to good effect.

"Men of all denominations fought side by side with no idea, of religious prejudices during the war," he said, "and they will come home with the thought of religious toleration well founded."

ROW AFTER FLAG RAISING

Police Arrest Fifteen Men and One Woman

Fifteen men and one woman were arrested today by the police of the Fourth street and Snyder avenue station, following disturbances in the neighborhood of Seventh and Wolf streets. The prisoners were released by Magistrate Baker under a nominal bail to keep the peace.

The trouble grew out of a flag-raising yesterday, when the band employed hired a moving van and continued the celebration until morning.

Patrol Sergeant Schlegel was struck by the head and Patrolman Lyons was kicked. A riot call brought re-enforcements, who dispersed the crowd. It was necessary to bar the police station doors to keep out the crowd.

The Very Goods are Cheery—There Is Sincerity of Quality and Service—Gimbels

Every one of these December days there are meetings of managerial groups in the Store—and the thing discussed chiefly is no longer a grasping for more business, but the determination to hold the Store to a better and better standard of service.

The war depleted our ranks of hundreds and hundreds of our most skilled people. They are coming back—and there is room and employment for all and for the new people, too—as they conform to the Store's ideals of service.

It is all a new concept of business—service, helpfulness; growth through deserving growth and not through any scramble to sell.

Orderly, with its thousands of visitors daily—comfortable, even with holiday attendance; the great new Elevator Service caring for our visitors comfortably.

The whole Store is safe—for person and purse—and is one of the really scientifically heated and ventilated stores of the land. Its heat and power and light are brought in from a Sansom Street plant by pipes and wires.

Just helpful—in all that the term implies. Eight-million-dollar stocks. And Gimbels lead in value-giving.
