Private Emmett G. Laub, killed in action, was the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Laub, 7317 Bingham street, Fox Chase. He was drafted last winter, trained at Camp Meade and went to France in July as a member of Company A, 31st Infantry, Philadelphia's own regiment of selective service men. Laub was a plumber by trade, with a place of business at 123 Oxford street, near Charles Laub, is now at Camp Gordon.

Private Charles Henry Holley, negro, twenty-four years old, was wounded September 28, according to a telegram received by his mother, Mrs. Anna Robinson, 222 West Duval street. He was a member of Company F, 36th Infantry. He was drafted in November, 1917, trained at Camp Meade and sailed overseas in February. Holley came from Baltimore to this city six years ago and lived here with his uncle until he was drafted. He is reported to have been wounded. Private Frank J. Whitley, twenty-one years old, was wounded in action on September 17, according to a telegram from the War Department, verified by a letter to the father, William Whitley, from the soldier himself. Enlisting in the War Department, he was sent to Camp Hancock, where he trained with Company G of the 195th Infantry, and with which contingent he sailed for France. He was prominent in school athletics, having played basketball, and while at Camp Hancock he caught for the regimental baseball team. Private Joseph A. Conway, Company A, 31st Infantry, wounded, has written a letter to his wife, Mrs. Catherine Conway, under date of November 6, saying that he was in a hospital with shrapnel wounds in the right leg. He hoped to be well soon and to be home by Christmas. The War Department notified Mrs. Conway last week that her husband was wounded on September 17, training at Camp Meade. He sailed for overseas last July. Since leaving home, Mrs. Conway has received no news. He lives at 2505 Carpenter street. (Special John J. McMonagle, wounded, is twenty-six years old and son of Dr.

letter home he said it was "funny the way he got his wound" and that he would tell the funny side of it when he got home. Drummond enlisted in 1916 and served on the Mexican border. Sergeant Jerome B. Bevis, 4024 Walnut street, reported wounded in today's casualty list, wrote his mother on November 21: "You had better get plenty of sleep while the getting is good, for when I get home you will not get any for a month. It will take that long for me to tell you my experiences in France." Sergeant Levi, who is twenty-three years old, attended the officers' training camp at Pottsville, N. Y., in 1916. He entered the service as a private September 12, 1917, at Camp Meade, and was immediately made a sergeant. He was assigned to Company D, 31st Infantry, to assist in training recruits. Before entering the service Sergeant Levi was in the cigar manufacturing business with his father, Morris J. Levi, at 117 South Second street. He was born in Mount Vernon, N. Y., where he graduated from high school and came to Philadelphia about three years ago. Corporal Rita B. French, Jr., twenty-nine years old, was wounded on September 27, while in action with Company D of the 31st Infantry. Formerly a manager of a Chestnut street haberdashery shop, French was drafted on May 29 of this year, trained at Camp Meade July 7, when he sailed for France. The first intimation of the young soldier's injury came in a telegram from July 17, when he wrote home to his mother. Later the soldier himself wrote and told his family that he was recovering in a base hospital.

Private John F. Zell, twenty-four years old, has been over the top many times and has been sent to base hospitals four times since his arrival in France last spring. News of his latest injuries came through unofficial sources to this city yesterday, and his name has not yet appeared on the casualty list. He enlisted at Easton, Pa., and was assigned to Company A, Machine-Gun Battalion. He sustained his first wounds in the early part of June. Wounded again in July he had no more than a month when he was sent back to a hospital in September. His letters, however, have been always cheerful. Private Zell made his home at 60 North Parson street, and only enlisted at Easton because he happened to be employed there when he felt the call to fight for his country. Private James E. Hogan, of 1809 West Huntingdon street, reported as "seen" in yesterday's official casualty list, got lost from his own unit during the battle of the Meuse and, falling in with a detachment from another regiment, stuck along with them for six days. Finally when that unit was sent back to a rest camp he was able to locate the intelligence officer, explain his predicament and was promptly returned to his own regiment. In the meantime, however, he had been reported missing and, though a correction was telegraphed at once to Paris, it never caught up with the original report. Fortunately, however, the latter was so long in reaching his family that a letter from the young soldier arrived in time to prepare them for such a message from the War Department, and to assure them that Private Hogan was alive, well and once more with his own "squad." Governor Edge to Speak Here Governor Edge, of New Jersey, will be among the speakers at the annual meeting of the New Jersey Society of Pennsylvania next Wednesday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

THE essentials of a filing plan are: First, it must be a finding plan; it must not only put papers out of sight, it must produce them— instantly. Second, it must be the simplest arrangement possible, so that any new employee can quickly grasp its workings. Third, it must not require an efficiency expert to keep it going. Fourth, it must be capable of expanding with your business, with the least possible alteration. Fifth, and most important, it must not revolutionize your business. Amberg is not a systemizer, efficiency expert or business engineer; neither are they exponents of ready-made filing plans. While they deal in the physical means for making filing plans practical, Amberg's chief commodity is their knowledge of where to use and how to combine the principles of filing and finding.
