E-14 SURVIVOR TELLS OF SUBMARINE'S LOSS

Famous British Undersea Craft Looking for Enemy Ship When Disaster Came

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 26.

The official report of the sinking of the famous British submarine E-14 off the Dardanelles early in 1918 with the loss of her commander, Lieutenant Commander Geoffrey White, and all except seven of the crew, has just been published.

The E-14 left Mudroson the evening of January 27 and proceeded up the Dardanelles to search for the Goeben. After diving under submarine nets she found that the Goeben had left a few hours previously, so Commander White turned back, keeping a sharp lookout for enemy craft.

A torpedo was fired at the ship which carried the Goeben's ammunition, causing a heavy explosion which extinguished the submarines lights and sprung the fore hatch. Leaking badly, the submarine rose to the surface. The forts immediately opened on both sides of the straits and a shell hit the hull, destroying the upper steering gear. An E-14 survivor says:

"Orders were given to steer from below, and we ran the gauntlet for half an hour, only a few shots hitting us. The captain, seeing that escape was hopeless, ran toward shore. His last words were: 'We are in God's hands.' Only a few seconds later I looked for him and saw his body, mangled by shell fire, roll into the water and go under. The last shell hit the starboard side of our boat, killing all near it, I believe."

The submarine soon afterward ran into a sand bank close in shore, and the Turks picked up the survivors.
