CAMDEN TO COMPEL

Council Takes Steps to Force Improvements on Trolleys

Failure of the Public Service Rallway Company to fulfil its promises to improve Camden's trolley service caused City Council at a meeting last night to take definite steps to compel the railway company officials to show their hand.

President David Jester appointed the Railroad Committee, headed by Coun-cilman George B. Helm, to wait upon the Public Service officials and present the city's demands.

Indignation was expressed by several members of City Council over the rail-way company's apparent dereliction. Councilman Frederick Von Nieda, of the Eleventh Ward, brought up the subject Just as a resolution to adjourn was offered by another Councilman.

The company's practice of taking cars off the lines between 5 and 7 o'clock in the evenings also was attacked. While hundreds of passengers wait at the Federal and Market streets ter minals, it was pointed out, three and

One of the most marvelous things about shops is how they stand the constant strain of keeping up to the demands of the season. From one end of Chestnut Street to another they passed through the Christ-mas rush with flying colors, and when the disadvantages under which they labored are taken into consideration: lack of help, scarcity of goods, and an unexpected and unprecedented amount of business, the way in which the situation was handled was truly masterly. And now comes stock taking, with all the marking down of merchandise which precedes it. Old goods must give place to new, and many tempting bargains are to be found in the Chestnut Street Shops.

A QUASCUTUM Coats! That I am sure is something you never heard of before, but once seen, you are not likely to forget them. They are at only one shop in town, at William H. Wanamaker's, 1217-19 Chestnut street, for whom they were especially made by the Aquascutum Co., of 100 Regent street, London. These "water-shedding" coats for men, which left England the day the Armistice was signed, come in heavy Great Coats, Ulsters and Motor Coats. The latter models have raglan sleeves and other features to promote the comfort of the draver, while the Great Coats and Ulsters are more conservatively cut. The materials are the finest English fleece and genuine Irish frieze, and among the lot are shewerproof spring - weight coats suitable for southern wear. QUASCUTUM Coats!
