

FRANCE WELCOMES PRESIDENT—FEATURES OF INTEREST GLEANED FROM HIGHWAYS HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

YANK LEADERS OVERSEAS on a dispatchboat going out in the harbor of Brest to greet President Wilson on his arrival in France. The soldier in khaki is General Pershing and the officer in blue is Admiral Benson.

PRESIDENT WILSON RIDING PAST THE GRAND PALAIS of the Exposition of 1900 on his arrival in the French capital. The first carriage was occupied by President Wilson and President Poincare of France, and the second carriage by Mrs. Wilson, Mme. Poincare, Mme. Jusserand and Miss Margaret Wilson. The President drove between solid ranks of French troops

THE U. S. FLEET AT ANCHOR in the lower expanse of the Hudson River shortly after the review by Secretary Daniels. The Utah is in the foreground. A vast throng watched in silence, as if awed by the spectacle, as the ten fighting units from overseas steamed slowly to their anchorage.

WHEN PRESIDENT AND MRS. WILSON stepped ashore at Brest they were greeted by this smiling group of American girls, canteen workers in France. The flowers held by Miss Lillian A. Clemens, of Bayonne, N. J. (at the left), and by Miss Helen Alexander, of Philadelphia, were presented to Mrs. Wilson by the canteen girls.

WORKERS WHOSE DAILY TASKS take them along Chestnut street in the morning are familiar with the picture of a girl "expressman" trundling out packages to her motor wagon. Miss Rose Paul has been driving over a regular express route, delivering and collecting express packages as efficiently as a mere man.
