BRITISH PAPERS LAUD PRESIDENT

Press Comment Shows Cordiality of Feeling Toward This Country

Great Event in History When King and President Ride Side by Side

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by New York Times Co.

London, Dec. 27. The British press this morning exressed great enthusiasm over the visit of President Wilson.

The Morning Post said: "The President of the United States we trust is convinced of the sincere cordiality of welcome in this country. diality of welcome in this country. It is fittingly marked by ceremonial, but behind the pageantry is a hearty desire to salute the representative of the great western republic, both in his own persen and in his capacity as President of a great nation which is allied to this country by ties of common origin and linked with common interests and ideals. Above all, the American people, as the President said yesterday, are joined with the British people in the greatest adventure known to history for the permanent suppression of the enemy of civilization."

the permanent suppression of the enemy of civilization."

The Dally Mail said:
"It was real and sincere affection and no mere curiosity that brought to President Wilson's delighted ear the tromendous acclamations of London yesterday afternoon. All desired to see what manner of man it was who threw the sword of the western world into the scale which turned the war and to know by actual sight the great republican who had crossed the Atlantic to make a distracted and war-torn Europe also a safer world for democracy. Britain is giad to the heart that the great President has come among us. We have made a new friendship and built a strong bulwark of peace."

The Dally News said:

The Daily News said: "It would be an insensible mind that could witness without emotions of profound gratitude the spectacle of the President of the republic which the folly frest riding through our streets side by side with a sovereign of a more entered day. In that scope we saw by side with a sovereign of a more en-lightened day. In that scene we saw not only an erasure of the past, a cleans-ing of the book of memory of a long tale of estrangement; we saw in it a symbol of reconciliation and the opening of a new and happier chapter, not only in the history of the English-speaking races, but in the history of the whole human family, of whom those races family, of whom those races

The Daily Telegraph comments as "To many of us the coming of President Wilson is apart altogether from the direumstances which brought it about It is the visible realization of a hope that had been dear to us throughout life, and although we never doubted of it in the end, it would be vain to pretend that we ever expected it to take this, the most striking and most-to-be-desired of imaginable forms. That is why the enthusiasm with which we greet the President is of a particular quality, dif-ferent in kind from what we felt in receiving other guests whom we were equally delighted to honor. Blood, language, law and common political equally delighted to honor. Blood, language, law and common political ancestry give sanction to the drawing together of the world's great English-speaking commonwealths which is signalized by the presence among us today of the head of a State sprung from unmixed British stock.

from unmixed British stock.

The Chronicle's editorial says:

"It is obvious that the President's visit betokens a good deal more than that of the head of a state crowned or uncrowned, and the cheering crowds in our streets were and will be well aware of it. In the first place Mr. Wilson represents America, the country of which no Englishman ever thinks quite as he thinks of other nations, since it speaks our language, shares our literature, and has built up its fabric of ordered liberty on the basis of ideas which are also largely common to us. In the second place, he comes as the spokesman and champion of a point of view regarding international offairs in which as a nation we are deeply interested, since it is tion we are desply interested, since it is the one for which it is sometimes more and sometimes less clearly seen that the majority of our 800,000 dead laid lown their lives."
