

MEETINGS IN CITY WILL CROWD 1919

Scores of Big Conventions Are Scheduled to Be Held Here

WOOL OVERSEERS WON After 42 Years in New England Organization Chooses "Workshop of World"

During its forty-two years' existence, the National Organization of Woolen and Worsted Overseers has not met outside of New England. This year, however, the semiannual meeting of this organization will be held here so that its members may become better acquainted with the "world's greatest workshouse."

This is one of many conventions scheduled to meet here this year. The Chamber of Commerce records show that last year there were 189 conventions, exhibitions and assemblies held in Philadelphia, with a total estimated attendance of 254,668.

The number of associations listed up to the present to hold conventions or exhibitions in Philadelphia does not indicate the total that will be here, because a large number of associations do not decide on meeting places until a month or six weeks before the time set for the meeting.

BRITISH HERO TO SPEAK Lieutenant Walker Will Tell of Zebruge Achievement

Another hero of the famous British naval attack on Zebruge will be heard by Philadelphiaans today when Lieutenant H. T. C. Walker, of the royal navy, will speak at the exhibit of British naval photographs being held at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. Lieutenant Walker was in charge of a gun aboard the Vindicator and his left arm was shattered by a German shell. Three men were killed by the same missile and all the other members of the gun crew injured.

SERGEANT WALTER T. BRUNER A survivor of the old Third Regiment, Camden, which was nearly annihilated in the taking of Sedan, Sergeant Bruner is a member of the 11th Machine-Gun Battery, Twenty-ninth Division. He was badly gassed in October and is still in the hospital. He received the French bravery cross

NEWSPAPER VETERAN FIFTY YEARS AT DESK

J. St. George Joyce, Dean of Philadelphia Writers, Still Busy at Seventy-three

J. St. George Joyce, author, poet and raconteur, is seventy-three years old today and the present year marks his fiftieth anniversary in the newspaper business.

He observed his birthday and golden jubilee at his desk in the office of the Evening Public Ledger. Enthusiasm, optimism, a sunny disposition and keen and ready wit are the elements that make Mr. Joyce forget the passing years.

As a matter of fact he is usually too busy to bother about them. Since his entrance into newspaper work his life has been crowded with action. A great part of his newspaper training was acquired in Ireland, and he figured in many history-making events. Shortly after becoming a reporter on the Galway Express in 1867 he became interested in the home-rule movement and subsequently established the Vindicator, the first home-rule paper founded in Ireland. He later became editor of the Clarion Journal, the Midland Tribune, the first Nationalist organ in the midlands of Ireland, and finally filled the editorial chair of the Leinster Leader.

Mr. Joyce had largely in bringing about the election to Parliament of Charles Stewart Parnell, and until the latter's death was the great Irish leader's intimate friend. On coming to this city, many years ago, Mr. Joyce became connected with the old Philadelphia Times as a reporter. His quick grasp of events of moment and ability to write well on a large variety of subjects soon won him recognition. He became assistant city editor, news editor, foreign editor and editorial writer, and remained with the paper until it ceased publication. He then joined the staff of the Public Ledger, and later became foreign editor of the Ledger Company some time ago.

Mr. Joyce can reel off a poem on most any subject as quick as a wink and has the commendable trait of getting to the point quickly whenever he talks or writes. He is an authority on the question of European politics and economics and has acquired an enviable reputation as a writer of contemporary Irish verse.

TUGS CAN'T BUDGE TJISONDARI

Six Strong Boats Fail to Free Stranded Transport After a fleet of six of the strongest tugs in the harbor had labored in vain on two incoming tides to float the American steamship Tjisondari, which is stuck in the mud at the lower end of Pea Patch Shoal above Fort Delaware, the tugs gave up the task higher than in floating this morning the work of lightening part of her cargo will be undertaken. The Tjisondari was bringing army and navy material to Lengue Island and had on board eighteen officers and seventy enlisted men, injured at the Marne in July. They had been transferred to the navy tug Springfield and were sent through this city to a New York hospital.

STATE'S DIVISION IN THICK OF FIGHT

22,384 Replacements Show What 28th's Men Did for Country

NATIONAL GUARD UNITS

Thirty Thousand Soldiers Started Campaign of Six Months Against Germans

The Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania division, made up of National Guard units from this State, has had a larger number of replacements than any other division in overseas service.

Corporal James A. Murrin, writing to a Franklin, Pa., newspaper, gives figures to show that 22,384 new men had to be used in a division that numbered 50,000 men when it went overseas. His article follows:

"With the 11th Infantry in France, Buxieres.—The Twenty-eighth Division has reason to feel proud that during the six months that it saw continuous active service at the front it established a real record.

"Of the outfits which had been overseas long enough to have men entitled to the first service stripe, it leads the list in number of replacements. And figures, in this case, do not lie; they show to what an extent a division was 'hit' in fighting. And be it known that the 22,384 new men assigned to the Twenty-eighth division in the six-month period speak louder than mere words of praise.

"When the Twenty-eighth came overseas it had some 30,000 men on the rolls of its infantry, artillery, engineers and other organizations composing the Keystone fighters.

"The Second, First and Third Divisions of the regular army, which were overseas for a full six months before the Twenty-eighth arrived, saw much action, but it is to be noted that the Twenty-eighth, in number of replacements, leads even the famous Rainbow (Forty-second) division, the Thirty-second and Twenty-sixth Divisions, other hard-fighting units. Here is the official table that tells the tale and shows the standing:

Table with 2 columns: Division, Replacements. Rows include 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st, 32nd, 33rd, 34th, 35th, 36th, 37th, 38th, 39th, 40th, 41st, 42nd, 43rd, 44th, 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th.

"Officers, commenting on the list, are of the opinion that perhaps no other division in France has seen so much real active service during the hottest part of the war game, sacrificing periods of relief in order to play the game with the same war spirit on another sector.

"The official losses of the 11th Regiment during its activity in the Chateau-Thierry fighting, along the Vesle and in the Argonne and in the Thiaucourt sector of the Woerth line 2213, according to the figures just made public. This regiment comes from the northwestern part of the State.

"Total enlisted men lost were: Killed, 328; wounded, 1568; missing, 263. Total officers lost were: Killed, 11; wounded, 58; missing, 4. Total losses: Killed, 342; wounded, 1691; missing, 267."

CITY LEGISLATORS TO MEET

Republicans Will Name State Committee and Select Seats

Members of the Senate and House from Philadelphia will meet this afternoon in the headquarters of the Republican city committee, Eleventh and Chestnut streets, to pick members of the legislative state committee and select their seats in the coming Legislature. The Philadelphia delegation is expected to number one from each congressional district, on the state committee which will distribute the legislative patronage.

William S. Leib, resident clerk of the House, will attend the meeting and allot seats to the members of the House. As a courtesy it is more than likely that Senator-elect William J. McNichol will receive the seat in the Senate which was occupied for many years by his father, the late Senator James P. McNichol.

The city committee will convene after the legislators have finished their business.

MAN MYSTERIOUSLY SHOT

Found in Stable With Bullet Wound in Back - Charles Griffenburger, 2900 E. street was found at Fifth and Butler streets today with a bullet wound in his back by two residents of the neighborhood. Griffenburger said he had been shot by a strange man at Sixth street and Huntington Park avenue, and went to a stable nearby. After remaining in the stable for some time Griffenburger said he came out to get a drink of water. He was sent to the Samaritan Hospital. His condition is serious. The police are looking for a man who attempted to rob a house in the northeastern section of the city.

Two Die in Old Ladies' Home

Two aged residents of the Old Ladies' Home, Wisaminong, Mrs. Amanda K. Puff, seventy-eight, and Margaret Brooks, eighty-five, died yesterday. Mrs. Puff was the widow of the late John L. Puff. Both women will be buried tomorrow.

CLOWN PRINCE SAW HIMSELF IN HIS OWN DUGOUT MOVIES

Story of Edith Cavell and Belgian Horrors Not Among Those Projected in Theatre Found by Reading Soldier—It Was an All-Kultur Program

Pretty soft for the Clown Prince? Well, horrors perpetrated on Belgian women and children, "The Beast of Berlin," nor "The Prussian Cur." None of the light stuff for today was on his tastes would run to Kultur subjects, and result in the showing of numerous scenes of himself getting in and out of automobiles, drinking water out of a glass while shells and machine-gun bullets fell thick some two or three miles away, and personal demonstrations of the latest approved fashion for posing a cigarette holder.

Wagner says the dugout theatre was comfy and was fitted with electric pianos, electric lights and other accommodations. Wagner also says that German soldiers did not starve, even though the people at home may have gone hungry. He says that packs of German soldiers were opened after they were killed and were found to contain butter, jam and other delicacies in quantities, in addition to the ordinary fare of the soldier in the field.

SUNDAY VAUDEVILLE FOR SOLDIERS ENDED

War Camp Community Service Drops Entertainment When Ministers Protest

No more Sunday night vaudeville shows for men in the service. They have been discontinued by the War Camp Community Service, following protests by ministers and laymen, who declared the entertainments to be Sabbath "desecrations."

A committee is now at work figuring out some form of substitute entertainments for the "boys."

Calvin L. Lewis, director of the war camp service, declared today that the Sunday night shows were the best means of keeping thousands of men off the central streets.

"But several ministers and laymen have thought otherwise," he continued. "They say that the shows, which were always provided patriotically by theatrical people, were a violation of the law. In addition, they criticized the fact that many of the uniformed men brought girl friends with them. As a matter of fact, only 25 per cent of the men came with girls. Many of these men brought their wives."

"During week-days and nights ample provision has been made for the many enlisted men in this city. No city in the country takes better care of the soldier and sailor visitor than does Philadelphia. On Sundays, however, it is different. Any one walking through Arch, Market and Vine streets, the hottest streets on Sunday must be impressed with the great number of men in uniform that do not meet—men strolling aimlessly, trying to find something to do, but it better to go to the movies, to the streets, into a theatre or club, watching a decent show until bedtime than to leave them to their own devices or to the ministrations of street-walkers or bootleggers."

WILL OFFER JUBILEE PLANS

Art Associations' Council Ready to Advise Mayor's Committee

The advisory council of the Art Associations of Philadelphia will submit plans for a three-day pageant as the feature of the peace jubilee in May to the Mayor's committee on the celebration, of which Joseph E. Widener is chairman.

The plans were discussed and definitely approved at a meeting of the council in the Sketch Club. In the absence of Wilson Hyde, chairman of the council, W. E. Gray, president of the Sketch Club, presided.

Among those who attended the council were: Mrs. M. V. Oakley, Joseph Pennell, J. MacLure Hamilton, Paul King, Charles Grafy and E. H. Fetterolf.

The art associations represented included the Sketch Club, the Fellowship of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, the T-Square Club, the Art Alliance and the American Institute of Architects, under whose auspices the council was formed.

No definite date has been set for the celebration, which will be given as soon as the peace treaty has been signed. It is hoped that this will be some time during the latter part of May, so that the festivities can culminate on Decoration Day.

OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR JOBS

Bureau for Discharged Service Men Registering Applicants

The entering wedge of an intensive campaign to reinstate returned service men in places in civilian life will be driven today at noon, when the booth at the Liberty Statue will be formally opened for registration of proposed employers of soldiers and sailors.

The statue, which has been the scene of so many stirring demonstrations during the last year, will be a silent spectator to another patriotic rally to be given in connection with the opening of the bureau.

Harold Stone, of Washington, national superintendent of employment bureau for discharged soldiers and sailors, will be the principal speaker. The labor situation will be thoroughly discussed later at a conference between directors of the peace employment drive committee and a group of employers and manufacturers to be held at the employment headquarters in the Finance Building.

BURGLAR, WOUNDED, FLEES AFTER DUEL

Injured Man, Found Far From Scene of Shooting, Under Suspicion

A burglar who attempted to rob the home of William Warner, Bust Avenue, in the neighborhood of the city, was compelled to abandon the task after a four-cornered revolver duel with Warner and three policemen.

Warner was shot during the fight, but managed to escape in the darkness. About two hours after the duel, a man suffering from a gunshot wound of the leg was found at Fifth and Butler streets. He compared with a description of the man who attempted to rob the Warner home.

Warner refused to tell how he was shot. The man gave his name as Charles Griffenburger and was taken to the Samaritan Hospital. Warner will go to the hospital today. Detective Ingle and Prinx and Quigley went to see the wounded man is the one who attempted to rob the Warner residence.

Prinx and Quigley, together with Patrolman Bryan, were looking for an automobile thief in the neighborhood of Warner's home when they heard a shot. A moment later they saw a man jump from the rear porch. All three gave chase.

Bryan caught the man as he was about to jump over a fence. The stranger drew a revolver and fired, but Bryan dropped in time to escape the bullet.

Warner then opened fire on the man. Prinx and Quigley followed, and the three policemen blazed away at him at the same time from different directions.

The burglar evidently had a good supply of ammunition. He fired at least a dozen shots at the police as he dodged from tree to tree in the neighborhood. A slight cry of pain was heard as the man, but when the police ran to the spot where he was last seen he had disappeared.

TWO MOTHERS END LIVES

Women Commit Suicide, Grieving Over Deaths of Children

When a postman arrived at the home of Mrs. Mrs. Spriggins, 3027 North Orkney street, bearing a letter saying her son, a soldier in France, was coming home, he found her dead. Mrs. Spriggins is one of two women who committed suicide because of grief over the deaths of their children.

On the second anniversary of the death of her only daughter, Helen, Mrs. John Davis, Jr., twenty-six years old, North Orkney street, bearing a letter saying her son, a soldier in France, was coming home, he found her dead. Mrs. Davis was found lying across the grave by persons attending a funeral, and they notified cemetery guards. Although she was hurried to the Jewish Hospital, she was dead when the ambulance arrived.

Mrs. Spriggins killed herself by inhaling gas from a tube attached to a stove. She was found by Patrolman Schroeck lying on the floor near the stove. Her body, extremely emaciated, indicates that what funds she possessed, if any, did not permit her to have the necessities of life.

PET ROOSTER SAVES LIVES

Timely Crow Today Warned Family of Fire in Home

The timely crow of a pet rooster saved the lives of several persons during a fire early today at the home of Harry Hulkin, 246 Race street.

Fire started in the cellar and the rooster was awakened earlier than usual by the smell of smoke. He emitted an excited crow which awakened the cook. She ran upstairs and aroused Mr. and Mrs. Hulkin. With their two children all fled to the street in their night clothes.

The youngsters held the chicken while the firemen fought the blaze. It is believed the fire was started by an overheated stove. The jobs was small.

PHILADELPHIA GUNNER WINS VALOR CITATION

Sergeant Arthur Somers Defied Fire Coolly, but Took No Captives

A letter of thanks to the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER for a "story" about him and his three brothers who are in the service, has been received from Sergeant Arthur Somers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Somers, 820 South street.

An EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER of November 11, containing the story, found its way to Sergeant Somers in the trenches, and he discovered one mistake in the story. So he wrote to have it corrected.

"There was one thing in that writing," he writes, "that was not due me. You said I captured twenty-one prisoners. I am an artilleryman and never go over the top or capture prisoners."

He closes with a request for a correction of the error. Sergeant Somers may not have captured any prisoners, but he so distinguished himself in action that he and the others of his outfit, the 20th Trench Mortar Battery, were cited for bravery by the brigade commander.

The citation follows: "The 20th Trench Mortar Battery, on September 13, fired a barrage from the most extreme front-line salient of the entire zone of the First Army, less than 600 meters from the enemy machine gun and under a most terrific bombardment from a dominating position of his batteries, controlled by enemy airplanes. The perfect self-possession of the officers and men during the bombardment, as well as the orderly withdrawal under severe fire of guns and personnel from the trenches after the completion of the barrage, was highly creditable. That no casualties occurred was largely due to the cool example of its officers and the fine discipline which prevailed through the engagement."

Somers and his unit were at the front thirty-eight days, and saw the finish of the war in the Argonne forest fight. Six of the unit were wounded there, the first to fall during the time the battery was fighting. They were not seriously hurt.

YOU may have been justified before the war—or during the war—but today, you'll have to present strong arguments to convince yourself that advertising isn't the key to your merchandising problems.
