Stosh Retires for Full Count After Interesting Meeting With Jackson's Haymaker in First Round-Wagner and Feldman in Two-Man Battle Royal

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

THE only things that saved the wind-up at the Olympia last highli were Dick Stosh, formerly of Cleveland, and his trusty glass jaw. Some forty seconds after the battle started Richard struck out the fragile chinaware and Willie Jackson, of NYawk, caressed it with a right manler. There was a collision, shattered fragments were scattered all over the place and Stosh embarked on a trip to listen to the sweet singing of the little birdles and play with lavender gorillas and green giraffes. He simulered in full view of the enthusiastic clubmen and was flat on his back. Thus we had a demonstration of the effect of a fragile jaw meeting a healthy haymaker. The haymaker always wins.

All of this happened in the first minute of the first round, or, as was said before, in forty seconds, eastern time, according to Billy Purcells split-second watch. Dick had every intention of lingering until they put out the lights, and it was through no fault of his that he retired early. He made horrible faces at Jackson, threatened to wallop him in the jaw and things like that, but Willie calmity worked him around the ring and against the ropes, where Steah made the mistake of leading with his chin.

The finishing wallop did not travel more than six inches, but six inches were enough. Dick spun around and flopped flat. He tried to roll over, but the effort was too great, so he took the full count and then some. He did not recover until some minutes after he had been carried to his corner.

Stosh did not realize he had been knocked out until Phil Classman told him. Then be became real angry and seemed peeved because Jackson had been so unclubby as to soak him on the chin. Elising from his chair, he looked around and said:

"Where is that guy? Lead me to him? I'll show him he can't pull that stuff on me! I'll knoch his block off, I will, as soon as I see him! It ain't right, it ain't. Let me fight him again!"

. . . $B^{\rm y}$ THAT time the doctor decided Dick's just had not been broken and Willie had deported for his dressing room. Through his hurried departure Jackson spolled another good fight-maybe.

Pough, Ready and Fushing Entertainers in First Act $G_{\rm last\ night,\ but\ put\ over\ something\ new.}$ He had two feature boatsthe first and the last-and sandwiched the others just to fill in the time.

That first battle was a wonder. It introduced a pair of hams named Kid Wagner and Sammy Feldman, and what those gays didn't do wasn't worth doing. They put on everything from knock-'em-down-and-drag-'em-out to classic dancing in their eighteen-minute act, and made the hit of the evening,

No one knew who lie battlers were and no one cared. From the start w there was action, and every one was sore when the final belt clanged. The boys really staged a two-man battle royal, and were ably assisted by Lew e referee. Lew showed rare judgment and DEPENDAC nothing of excellent footwork, and wasn't hit once. They did everything but bite and they were too tired to do that. Mr. Feldman was oute companionable, and appreciated the applause so much that he sought time and again to go out into the audience and mingle with his admirers. The ropes hept him in the ring, however, sometimes winding around his need to hold him back. Once Wagner struck him when he waen't looking and Sammy grew real angry. He started an uppercut, and Wagner obliged by ducking his load in time to get the full benefit of the blow. The Kid was very obliging in that way. He never missed an uppercut, always stopping the wallop with his face. Several times both of the boys were on the floor, but sumped up in time to avoid a double knockour. In the fifth Sammy went down without being hit, and Wagner, believing he had no right to visit the canvas, soaked him on the chin before he got up. This further infliriated Feidman and he tried to walk out of the ring. The ropes, however, folled ham,

A suggestion has been made to the effect that the status of golfers on the links might be indicated by the costume they wore while playing. For instance, the scratch man might wear a red coat, red cap, shield, brass buttons and breeches; the man who got better than 80 regularly, might wear a badge on his cap and back, red coat, tweed cap and breeches. For the 80 to 90 man, there is the badge on cap, tweed-and knicketbockers, while for the 90 to 100 man iweeds, budge on back and trousers turned up are suggested. The clothing for the duffer could in-clude soft hat, while boats, badge and trousers not turned up. WAS GREAT FAVORITE TEAMS PLAN SPRING TOUR Giants and Senators May Meet in New York, Jan. 7.
