

Varied Views from Beyond the Seas Dominate a Photographic Review of News Happenings

©Underwood & Underwood

THE BRITISH ARMY which the Kaiser in 1914 summed up as "contemptible and little," passing through Cologne. This important German city is under the military occupation of the English army, according to the Armistice terms. In the background is the beautiful Cologne Cathedral, one of the finest church edifices in Europe.

©Underwood & Underwood

BRITISH CAVALRY crossing the Hohenzollern Bridge over the river Rhine at Cologne. General Plumer and staff are standing alongside the former Kaiser's statue, reviewing the troops as they cross the bridge.

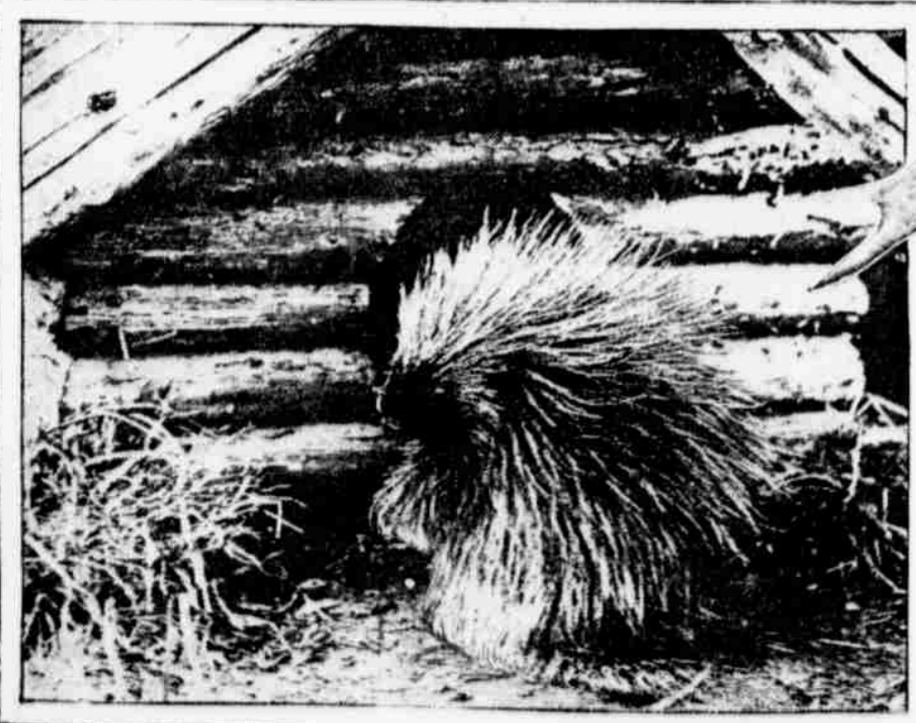

©Committee Public Information

FRENCH WORKING WOMEN in the service of the American army were employed to assemble light motor cars at a salvage plant in an American base port overseas during the war. Ten women assembled eight cars the first day of the test of this type of labor.

©International Film Service

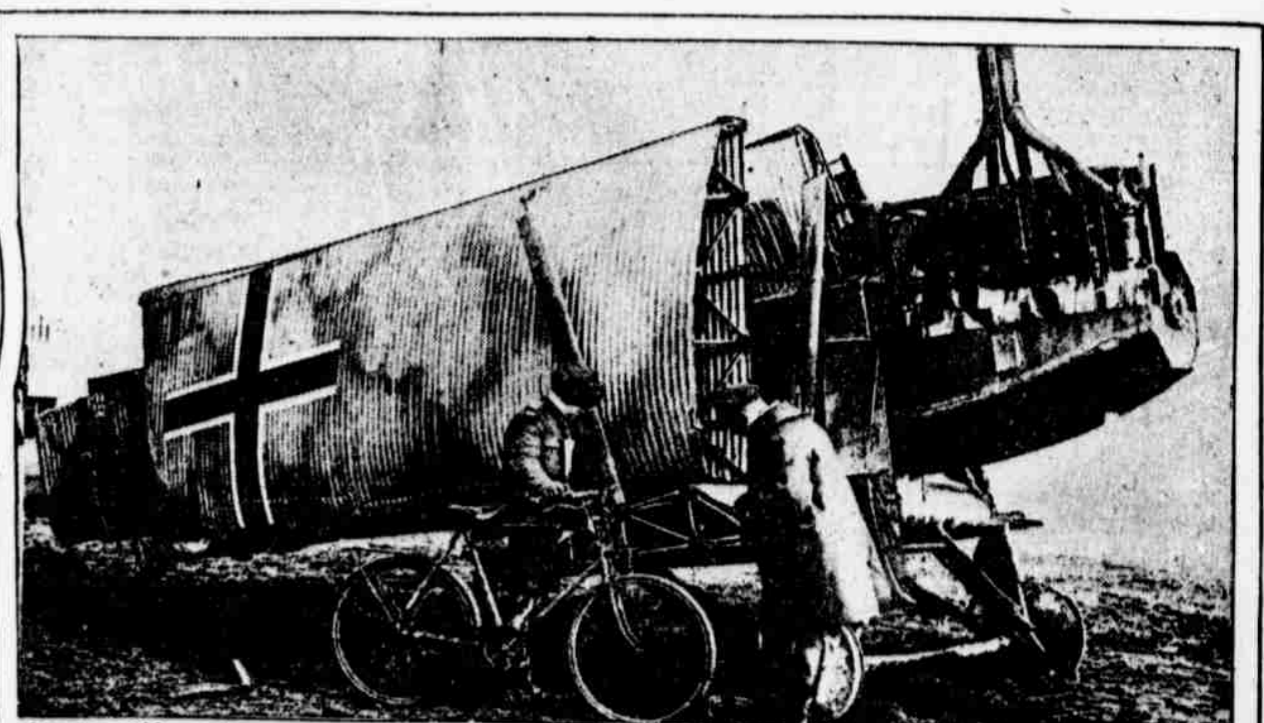

THE PASSING OF THE CASK of the brew of malted grain and hops. A large New York brewery has just been converted into an ice-cream plant. With but six more States needed to ratify the national prohibition amendment to make the nation bone-dry, these Gotham breweries have removed all the vats and are now busily engaged in manufacturing ice cream.

MR. PORCUPINE is averse to having his portrait taken; among his neighbors at the Zoo he is considered rather dour and inclined to be "stuck up"—but our photographer "snapped" him as he was ambling into his domicile.

TAXIDERMIST DAVID McCADDEN, of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Nineteenth and Race streets, modeling a moose's head on which he will mount the moose's skin.

Canadian Official Photo

TWO CANADIANS inspecting a German airplane made almost entirely of tin, with the exception of the motor. The wings are made of metal resembling corrugated iron and have considerable weight.