in sinking myself for the final count. The fishes around about the environs of City Island were disappointed beyond words when I came up for the fourth time and stayed up.

It all vame about as do most drowning parties, in quite all unexpected manner. For some reason it had been arranged that I should take a swimover at one of the emporiums at City Island, and I accordingly departed with my faithful Mr. Fogarty tumbling along at my heels. Since Mr. Fogarty involved me in trouble the other day by barking at the Jimmylegs be has endeavored in all possible wits to make up for his thoughtless irregularity. For instance, he met me this morning with an almost brand new shoe which in some manned be had managed to pick up in his wanderings. It fits perfectly, and if he only succeeds in finding the mate to it I shall probably not look for the owner. Looks Fit to Stand Anything

When you see a truck with this distinctive looking hood and radiator, look it over if you get the chance. You will find it lives up to its good looks.

Notice the radiator particularly. It looks different from the cheaper types you see on many motor trucks. And it is. The Clydesdele radiator is made from seamless copper tubing sweated into a brass header—the core being bolted to top and bottom tanks of polished aluminum, all supported by solid cast side members and carried upon the frame by heavy coil springs.

Of course this construction costs more-a lot more, but it pays Clydesdale owners. There are no seams for the vibra-tion to open. You have to smash a Clydesdale radiator to make it leak. And this is almost impossible due to the heavy nickel guard bars. A leaky tube can be easily plugged and the truck kept moving.

This is only one example of many distinctive features you will find about the Clydesdale, that have made it one of the most dependable trucks ever sold in this city.
