Statesman Declares Preservation Among Allies Was Important Achievement

Paris, Jan. 25.—There are several sufficiently accurate ways of characterizing the agreement of America and the Allied Powers to receive representatives of all the Russian groups, including the Bolsheviki, at the Princes Islands conference. It is et in Paris a diplomatic defeat of France President's Stand on Rus-England, with America acting as mpire.

But a better way, perhaps, is to speak of it as a compromise of all the Powers concerned to arrive at a harmonious settlement of the first serious difference that has actually come to a head since the formal opening the conference. It is better to come to a head since the formal opening of the conference. It is better to look at it in that way, because, after all, this is a Peace Conference, and to speak of "defeat" and "victory" implies that there has been fighting. And fighting among themselves is distinctly what the delegates do not wantespecially in these days of preliminaries. For, big as the Russian question may be by itself, intich greater issues are to come, which will call for even greater concessions or comprosess. even greater concessions or compro-mises than that which France has Bolsheviki as requested by Lloyd

According to my information, the so-and now the unbelievable has actually happened in the Russian question.

The main thing to keep in mind, said a French statesman to me today, is that the union of the Allies and America has been preserved unimpaired by this decision itself. There is no question but what France was diametrically opposed to England and America. They have yielded some of Wilson's policies, particularly the baye we.

the period of the strike of electrical workers (since ended) perhaps a majority of the houses here were without any light. The few candles in the stores were sold and there was not a quart of kerosene, the only other possible illuminant, at any public stores.

The effect of the strike was almost a catastrophe at the hospitals, which were overcrowded. In some cases the lives of patients on operating tables were endangered because the lights went out suddenly and withou, warning. Patients might have bled to death but for the extraordinary dexterity of German surgeons, which has been increased many fold by the exigencies during the four years of war.

Happity the subway has its own electrical works but one might wall in the atracal enterprises are gravely endangered by the latest measures to save coal. Beginning next Mon. Happily the subway has its own electroly works, but one might well impact the panic that was caused in the tunnels by the sudden extinguishing of the lighter. The private power today in the subways afforded the only means of communication. The Standbahn has not been operating for weeks, lacking locomotives, which had to be delivered to brance, according to the terms of the armistice. So great was the pressure in the subway cars that many windows armistice. So great was the pressure in the subway cars that many windows and even some doors were burst by closely packed masses of humanity, the nearest station being reached safely only by all passengers clinging stoutly to-sother.

Meanwhile in eastern Europe the British forces are engaged in international police work and are occupying a num-ber of points the ultimate ownership of which will be decided by the Peace Conference, but will certainly not be awarded to England.
