New York Plant to Add 3000 to 8000 Men. Says Official

VALUE OF THRIFT URGED

Speakers at Dinner Advocate Saving as Preventive of Bolshevism

From 2000 to 8000 additional men will be employed by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation at its Camden plant, according to an announcement by Marvin A. Neeland, president of the corporation.

"We have more than 12,000 men at work in the plant now," said Mr. Neeland, "and expect to add substantially to this number, employing in the future from 15,000 to 20,000 men. We hope to maintain the high scale of wages, even though the elimination of overtime has made some reduction in the pay envelope."

Warns of Industrial Crisis

Mr. Neeland spoke at a "thrift dinner" at the plant last night. He sounded the warning that the United States is facing a period of industrial depression, due to the return of the great industries to a normal basis, and expressed the belief that a certain amount of thrift is now possible during the reconstruction period.

"The crazy way of bolshevism that is sweeping through Russia," he said, "cannot come to this country if the people learn how to save their money." The necessity and value of individual thrift was reiterated by Treasury Department representatives and bankers who spoke at the dinner. The investment in war savings stamps of the $2,000,000,000 spent annually for liquor was urged by Mr. Lewis, of the Treasury Department, who told the members of the society that their investment was the "finest in the country" and had been used as model in industrial plants throughout the country.

"There are two appeals I would make to the country," said Mr. Lewis. "One is to limit the job of this war to the war will not be finished until every returning soldier who has won the uniform of the United States has been reabsorbed into industry. There is no permit of a too rapid demobilization. The other is that the people must save their earnings and live individually thriftily. If the money is not saved, it will be lost to the country. It is the duty of every citizen to save, all the expenses and sacrifices of the war will have been worth while. Let us win the waste war, but let us win the waste of this country."

The stability of investments in war savings stamps was pointed out by all of the speakers. "The best preventive of Bolshevism," said Mr. Lewis, "is the habit of saving and creating an abundance of government securities by the people at large."

A warning not to give up their savings or sell their government securities to the enemy was also given by Mr. Lewis. He said that the government securities are the backbone of the nation's credit and that they should be held as long as possible. He also urged the people to buy war savings stamps as a means of saving and as a way of supporting the government.

The following speakers took part in the dinner: Mr. Lewis, Mr. Neeland, Mr. J. P. Morgan, Mr. C. D. Johnson, Mr. H. H. Rogers, Mr. J. B. Connelley, Mr. W. C. Clegg, Mr. J. H. Ladd, Mr. J. M. Gurnea, Mr. J. H. Ladd, Mr. J. M. Gurnea, Mr. J. H. Ladd, Mr. J. M. Gurnea.

RELATES ROMANCE OF RICH MAJOR AND CLIFF SUICIDE

Doctor Fahnestock, Millionaire Clubman, Who Died in France, Often Visited Miss Packwood, Says Her Neighbor—Woman Spoke of Husband's Death

New York, Jan. 29.—That an attachment existed between Major Clarence Fahnestock, millionaire member of the Union Club, whose death as an army officer occurred overseas last October, and Miss Azelle Packwood, the handsome Florida woman found dead last Sunday on the Palisades, has been disclosed.

It could not be determined whether or not there was an actual engagement between the two, although it was established that the fighting branch of the service, and Miss Packwood was told by Mrs. Joanna Casaux, of 2185 Broadway, who since 1914 was Miss Packwood's neighbor for more than three years.

Visited Miss Packwood Mrs. Casaux said the personally knew Major Fahnestock long before he entered the army and that she had met him in the vestibule of the apartment house in which she lived, near Miss Packwood. The French woman also said that Major Fahnestock had been a frequent visitor at Miss Packwood's home. She had seen him before the door many times, Miss Packwood confided to Mrs. Casaux her regard for the major.

As soon as the Palisades suicide was identified as Miss Packwood and the newspapers quoted her as saying to her friends that the death of her husband, who was a major aviator, had caused her to want to kill herself, the great friendship between the two at once flashed into my mind," Mrs. Casaux said.

"I remembered at once that Mr. Fahnestock was a physician and that I had read in the newspapers that he had died in the army while in France. The newspaper reports relating the story of Miss Packwood's death also said she had received a telegram telling her of the death of the major, which was dated last part of October, which coincided exactly with the date of Major Fahnestock's death from pneumonia in Paris.

Fond of Each Other "Major Packwood and Miss Packwood were very fond of one another," said Major Fahnestock, who, at a great many times, whether they have been married or not, he would not say. At the time he visited Miss Packwood here he lived at the Union Club, she told him.

"I remember that at the time he was visiting here although he was a physician, he was not practicing medicine. There is no doubt in my mind that the major mentioned in the newspaper was Major Packwood since she moved from here. I did not even have her address."

Whether Miss Packwood was married to the major or not remains a mystery. There is no hint from any quarter that she had been married to Clarence Packwood, on January 1, 1918, in Cannel, Putnam county, N. Y., by Surgeon General Bennett Southard. There was no mention of a wife. His estate, valued at $2,000,000, was left to Mrs. Helen Campbell.

OFFERS BONUSES FOR INDUSTRIES

Jujuy, Argentina, Invites Outside Investments in Province

WANTS MANY PLANTS Chamber of Commerce Bureau Here Receives Information From Washington

An interesting account of the means taken by the provincial government of Jujuy, Argentina, to foster the establishment of industries suited to the needs of the province, has just been received by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce through the Bureau of Foreign and Consular Affairs at Washington.

The Chamber of Commerce Bureau is the co-operative office of the Washington Bureau for the Philadelphia district. The communication comes from Wilbert L. Bonner, United States Consul at Rosario. He states that the provincial government has enacted legislation to encourage the investment of private capital in local plants to develop the known resources of the province. His letter continues:

"A bonus of 2,000 pesos (one peso equals $0.4216 United States currency) is offered to the person or corporation which shall establish an enterprise, under provincial control, to set up machinery for clearing, planting, harvesting, threshing and other agricultural work, or to perform such work under contract at reasonable prices.

"A bonus of 5,000 pesos is offered to the person or society installing the first industrial plant for manufacturing thread and fabric from native fibers. A similar bonus is promised the person or company establishing the first plant for the extraction of vegetable oil from native products, and for the first industrial equipment installed for the refining of petroleum of the province.

"Five thousand pesos is also offered to the first private enterprise undertaking to manufacture porcelain from the native clay. A bonus of 2,000 pesos is offered to the person installing the first cement plant, and to those who plant and cultivate for two years at least five hectares (12.35 acres) of native trees.

"A bonus of 1,000 pesos is guaranteed to the first responsible enterprise undertaking the production of starch, and an equal amount is offered to the person furnishing the means and equipment for producing one metric ton of honey per annum.

The provincial government has also offered a bonus of 1,000 pesos to the person who undertakes to build a road of at least double the length of any road now existing in the province. The law will be effective until May 1, 1921. At the same time the provincial government of Jujuy has exempted from taxation for a period of five years any industrial enterprise which has a capital of not less than 10,000 pesos and which is demonstrated to be the first of its class to be established in the province.

The province of Jujuy is the most important of the Argentine States, it is traversed by the narrow-gauge railway reaching the Bolivian frontier. The province is rich in natural resources. The principal industry at present is in sugar-cane production. The capital city, Jujuy, has a population of 20,000 and contains several large banks, two large enterprises, an oil refinery, a soap factory, several brickyards and an electric power plant.

CLYDE LINE ACTION VIEWED AS SERIOUS

Drawback to Port Seen in Withdrawal of New York Steamships

The action of the Clyde Line to discontinue its Philadelphia-New York service is regarded as a serious drawback to the port by shipping and business men. Announcement of the company's decision to take this step was made yesterday by H. H. Raymond, president of the line. He replied to a communication of the Chamber of Commerce which protested against the company's action.

These are serious matters for us to deal with, and we are not going to be taken in by a man who has no right to be in the port. We are not going to be taken in by a man who has no right to be in the port. We are not going to be taken in by a man who has no right to be in the port.

JAMES M. BECK HISSED BY WOUNDED SOLDIERS

Advocates of Six-Months Pay Plan Disturb Meeting He Is Addressing

New York, Jan. 29.—Two men who tried repeatedly to interrupt James M. Beck, principal speaker at a "victory celebration" mass-meeting, were ejected from the Brooklyn Academy of Music by police guards. One of them was a city employe and the other a lawyer, who flared prominently in agitation to prevent Mr. Beck from speaking on the ground that he treated "disrespectfully" at a recent meeting in Madison Square Garden wounded soldiers who tried to present a resolution calling for six months' pay for army men upon their discharge.

The Madison Square Garden meeting was attended by the Independent Citizens' committee formed to welcome homecoming troops as a protest against the appointment of William Randolph Hearst to head a similar committee named by Mayor Hylan. The six months' pay plan has been favored by Mr. Hearst's plans.

There was no further disturbance inside the Academy of Music after the two men had been removed from the hall, but police reserves outside the building were kept busy handling a crowd of men and women who were unable to show admission tickets. Included in the number were about 100 wounded soldiers, many of them on crutches, who tried vainly to gain entrance, but were denied admission.

The soldiers, sailors and marines paraded in front of the building, singing and shouting Mr. Beck. Following this they formed in line and sang the "Star Spangled Banner."

EMERGENCY WORKERS AID HOSPITAL DRIVE

Young Women Take Active Interest in Campaign to Raise $75,000

Many of the Emergency Aid Aides are taking an active interest in the campaign to raise $75,000 for the West Philadelphia Hospital for Women. Their blue uniforms and caps, touched with red trimmings, dotted the assemblage of women in the Clover Room of the Bellevue-Stratford today. The hospital is the only institution to which the Emergency Aid committee has sent poor women who have come under its care.

Young women make up a large majority of the campaign workers. Aside from the Emergency Aid Aides, there is one team of University of Pennsylvania women, headed by Miss Cornelia Mann. Miss Anna Brockie and Miss Mildred Fetterolf, both well known from their work in Liberty Loan and war savings campaigns, also lead teams.

Miss Helen Steger, a student in the West Philadelphia High School; Miss Edith Johnson, a teacher in the Kensington High School; Miss Evangeline Beaumont, teacher in one of the grammar schools, and Miss Jean Faltmer, a student in the Girls' High School, are the first to enter the competition for Dr. L. S. Cogill's scholarship in the Women's Medical College.

The girl obtaining the largest amount of subscriptions in the campaign will receive the four-year scholarship. This is the second day of the ten-day campaign. More than $7500 a day must be raised in order to "go over the top," it was explained by Campaign Director Elizabeth T. Currier. About $7000 was reported yesterday as a beginning.

Both men and women volunteer speakers have been delegated to speak in motion-picture theatres and public halls of the campaign. Women workers are visiting business offices and residences to solicit subscriptions from persons listed by the campaign directors.

Mrs. George Horace Lorimer and Dr. Wilmer Krusen will be the speakers at the luncheon in the Clover Room of the Bellevue-Stratford today. Doctor Krusen will discuss the need for maternity hospitals, such as the West Philadelphia Women's Medical College, and will give various data relating to infant welfare and mortality in Philadelphia.
