

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of Several Happenings in Society—Miss Jane Maule Hostess at Tea Yesterday for Baltimore Girl. Plans in the Making for Valentine Revue

JANE MAULE had one fine party at her house on Rittenhouse street yesterday afternoon. It was a tea, and it was given for Sarah Nelson, of Baltimore, who was up here for the week-end. They went to the Saturday Evening Class Saturday night at the Bellevue, and I really think that Sarah has had a pretty nice time. There were about twenty-five or thirty there yesterday.

Jane Maule is a would-be-debutante, you know, and probably will go out as much next year as if she were to make her debut; just as Peggy Thayer and a lot of other girls would have come out last season will, and will virtually be debutantes. And goodness knows, they are not much more than children, are they? None over twenty. And after all, a great many girls wait until they are more than nineteen to make their bow to society, anyhow. Jane Maule is very pretty and has awfully good taste in clothes. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Price Maule.

YOU heard about the Actors' Fund benefit at the Forrest next Friday afternoon? Well, a crowd of E. A. A.'s have volunteered to sell flowers and programs there, and, "believe it," they are pretty ones. Sid Franklin, Antoinette Geyelin, Hatty Geyelin, Gennette Farley, Ethel Huhn Bailey, Alice McCabe Simpson (both are married, you know), Lisa Norris, Pauline Denckla, Mary Norris (who will soon be a debutante age), Edith Hutchinson, Gertrude Conaway and Gretchen Clay, Kitty Brinton and Margaret Dunlop.

Did you ever know anything on earth like the benefits? If it isn't one thing it sure is another these days; and for everything you dig into your pocket. And the amazing thing is that the pockets still seem to have something left in them after that constant diving. You'd think you could not spare another cent, but then comes something that you think ought to be helped, and there you are again.

I'D BE willing to bet Mary Alice Clay Borie is a very happy person. She is another of the young married women whose home had to be broken up on account of the war. Mary Alice and Louis Borie were married a little more than two years ago and they had apartments in the De Lancy (which seems to be overrun with young newly-weds, doesn't it?). Well, war was declared and Louis was in the Troop and had to go. Mary Alice stayed on for a while and then she and a certain Charles Louis, 4th, went home to stay until Louis (thank) would return from the other side; which, my dears, he did last week, and after visiting both sets of parents (that is, the Clays in town and the Bories at Tydal) they will take a house in the country for the summer. But their plans are very indefinite as yet, as for all the returned men. It's a sort of new honeymoon for them to return to home and wife, and many do not want to settle down to housekeeping at once.

WELL, I've heard a little more about the St. Francis Junior Aides' Valentine Revue, which is to come off on Saturday at the Bellevue. It's to be mostly vaudeville, you know, instead of a regular show with speaking parts, as they are always rather difficult and everybody is just waiting for the songs and dances anyhow. I know you'll be glad to get the news that Bessie Walsh Prizer is going to do a "red-white-and-blue" dance; she is so graceful. Rosalie Hoban, Jean Edelman, Edwina Malpass and May Walsh have worked up some awfully clever impersonations of popular actresses. Then, of course, there are the chorus numbers—I love big choruses in pretty costumes, don't you—and they sound lovely, under such titles as "Peacocks' Prance," "In Old Versailles" and "Sample My Kisses" (and as one member in speaking of it says, "Their rendering will leave nothing to be desired"). I wonder what she meant! Of course, Charlie Morgan is getting up the whole thing, as usual.

A rather exciting feature of the show may be, and everybody is hoping will be, the appearance of Governor Spruhl. He and Mrs. Spruhl have been invited as guests of Judge Rogers, and I understand have accepted the invitation.

SHE was hustling upstairs to her apartment on the fourth floor, calling the elevator names because it was out of order and fumbling in her bag to get her key out. She had been to a matinee and talked too much at tea, so that she was late getting home, and it was Thursday, and you know what that means, and altogether, by the time she reached the door she was decidedly hot under her georgette collar. Then, to add to her annoyance, the key refused to go in the lock. She turned it upside down, stood on her head and discovered that the lock was turned straight, tried the key right side up, turned it a little to one side and finally tried the knob. Knowing that there was no one in the house she was shocked and horrified to hear a stirring inside, then to have the door opened, while her astonished neighbor of the third floor looked out to see who was trying to break in. They ought to do something about this similarity of doors in apartment houses.

NANCY WYNNE.

EX-JUDGE SULZBERGER JEWISH ART BENEFACTOR

Jurist Collected Rare Hebrew Library and Gave It to Seminary

When the history of the Jews of America, shall be written the name of former Judge Mayer Sulzberger, of Philadelphia, will stand foremost among those of the founders of Hebrew culture in this country.

This was the opinion expressed today by Professor Alexander Marx, of the Jewish Theological Seminary of New York, conceded to be one of the world's foremost librarians. Professor Marx is now in this city.

"Before 1890," said Professor Marx, "Judge Sulzberger started collecting rare Hebrew books, at a time when no other person in this country thought of it. American students of Hebrew were obliged to go to Europe, to the great collections of Jewish literature at Oxford, London, Paris and Leipzig for precious books and manuscripts. It occurred to Judge Sulzberger first to make America independent of Europe in the most important matter, the preservation of Hebrew learning. With remarkable judgment Judge Sulzberger bought books and manuscripts, searching all corners of Europe for the best. He collected and assembled 3000 volumes and 400 manuscripts of Hebrew and Judaica, constituting a library of learning that was priceless and wonderfully rare.

"This collection became the pride of our library when he presented it to the Jewish Theological Seminary in 1893. In the same year he acquired the Halberstam collection in Austria of 6000 volumes and 150 manuscripts, also impossible to duplicate. He gave this to us. He has contributed to help us in the most important matter, Jacob Schiff, for instance, and our library is now by far the greatest in this country and inferior only to that of the British Museum and Bodleian at Oxford. We possess more than 55,000 volumes and 1800 manuscripts.

"Some of these gems have a most interesting history. For instance, our Talmud treatise on 'Idolatry' written in Spain in 1229. Throughout the persecutions in Spain for 800 years this remained in the possession of a family of Marranos, as the secret Jews were called, until acquired by Judge Sulzberger. In his first great gift to us were forty books printed before 1500.

"The Talmud literature forms the cornerstone of our library as of every Hebrew collection. For next to the Bible itself it is the most precious possession of the Jewish people. And during the Middle Ages, when education the world over was verily in support of the superstitions that kept the Jewish mind alive was the Talmud.

Every Jew was expected to study it, and most did. Like the Jew himself the Talmud was persecuted. It was frequently confiscated and burned. But it was recognized as the main intellectual and moral support of the Jewish people. However, it found many friends and defenders as well as enemies among the learned Christians of the Middle Ages, and the conflicts and persecutions in the world of Christian learning, avowed the public consciousness of its lethargy and thereby greatly helped the Reformation.

As the Talmud has come to the aid of the Jewish people, the Talmud has come to the aid of the Christian people. The Talmud has been translated into English and French. The Talmud has been translated into English and French. The Talmud has been translated into English and French.

Ireland in Peace Conference

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—Will you please publish the enclosed? It is a letter from an English paper, and to my mind contains nearly everything on both sides of a great question. It would please a great number of readers of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER to read this in your valuable paper. F. R. J.

Philadelphia, February 1. From the Manchester Guardian. Let it be realized at once that it will be entirely impossible to exclude the question of Ireland from the purview of the Peace Conference. There will be a demand, of course—it has been made already—for direct representation of Ireland by the Irish and the Nationalist, and it is a purely domestic matter with which nobody but ourselves is competent to deal; and that any attempt to take it out of their hands and to bring external opinion, let alone external action, to bear would be instantly and uncompromisingly resisted.

The answer to this is that Ireland has been appealing to Parliament for generations, and her representatives even allege that not only has the oft-promised measure of freedom been dashed from Ireland's lips, but that nothing has been done to help her and satisfy a claim long since admitted to be just, but that the Prime Minister, who is ultimately responsible for all that happens or does not happen in Ireland was once known as a friend of Irish freedom as of other small nations, but that he is now a simple, that there are two Irelands, and that their claims clash. Of what other subject nationally cannot the same thing be said? Of which of the half-dozen or thereabouts of peoples whose claims the Peace Conference

MISS JANE PERRY PRICE MAULE

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Price Maule, of 2217 Rittenhouse street, who entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Sarah C. Nelson, of Baltimore.

THE READER'S VIEWPOINT

Letters to the Editor on Topics of General Interest

Are You a Godmother? (Note—The editor of this letter is a lieutenant now recovering from wounds at the Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C. He was reported "officially killed" last summer.)

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—For four years American women have been waiting in hospitals for French soldiers for fatherless French children and Belgian babies. They have been angels of mercy to the French, Belgian, Serbian and Polish refugees. All very well and good. Let the good work continue. Congress seems about ready to spend $100,000,000 for the starving people of Europe. But what about our own boys?

The time has now come for the big opportunity to be of real service to our wounded American boys now returning. A large proportion of them are in hospitals away from their homes. As soon as the first novelty of landing in good old U. S. A. is over, they begin to get homesick and restless. A large number of them are not able to go home for quite a while and their relatives, if they have any, are not able to make the trip to see them. The "draftees" brought home by the Government are in a very real sense, "overlooked" them. The Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., etc., give them a certain amount of recreation, but they can't fill the void which their absence has created. Namely, the home feeling, the home touch.

They don't want to be petted, pampered, winced or wined, but, oh, how a large number of them are in hospitals away from their homes. As soon as the first novelty of landing in good old U. S. A. is over, they begin to get homesick and restless. A large number of them are not able to go home for quite a while and their relatives, if they have any, are not able to make the trip to see them. The "draftees" brought home by the Government are in a very real sense, "overlooked" them. The Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., etc., give them a certain amount of recreation, but they can't fill the void which their absence has created. Namely, the home feeling, the home touch.

Your wounded boys from France are coming back to you. Are you a godmother to a wounded Yankee? You're lucky. BLESSE.

Justifies Sale of Bonds. To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—Your argument in advice to hold the Liberty Bonds is most correct; but too often necessary. The "draftees" brought home by the Government are in a very real sense, "overlooked" them. The Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., etc., give them a certain amount of recreation, but they can't fill the void which their absence has created. Namely, the home feeling, the home touch.

This is wrong, a great wrong to patriotic people who did their best to help their country. Their country—our great country—should and can see that this wrong does not exist. If these patriotic buyers really need their money, their bonds should be redeemed by the Government. The danger of inflation has passed, if it ever existed; because of its low purchasing power, we need more money per capita in circulation and it is to the advantage of the country to stop needless interest. We should therefore buy such bonds as owners must in good faith sell by an issue of greenbacks.

The present method means that the wealthy class will acquire the bonds at a low price while the workers will be the ones to redeem them with interest many years from now. It is certainly much better to give greenbacks which do not bear interest and which would facilitate business and give employment to the rapidly increasing army of unemployed. We finished the Civil War on greenbacks. We found them such good money that we have continued them ever since.

The Liberty Bonds were a splendid way to "sell the war" to the general public, but now that we have won the war and every business man needs his money in his pocket, where it can and should pay him better than in the bonds, we should as a people, proposition jump at the plan to redeem the bonds by paying for them at par in current money. This would not only give the real friends of our land from the losses they are now taking, but it would greatly facilitate our getting into profitable economic conditions. CHARLES E. DUTRY, Philadelphia, January 29.

SCENARIO TO SCREEN AND IN BETWEEN

Photoplay Gossip of Local and Other Film Centers—What the Stars Are Doing

In the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER-Universal Current Events, No. 5, the new reel put out by the International Film Service Company, Inc., through the exchange of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, a series of pictures are appearing that show for the first time how close upon the heels of the retreating German hordes the Yankee army is in fact, that camp had to be made under a tent. The boys are seen ready to resume the pursuit of the Hindenburg hordes, and French "baby" tanks join in the advance.

Lieutenant Ebles, Company F, Second Ammunition Train, captures a little fragment of the high plane of Teuton torture in the form of a saw-tooth bayonet. The capture of a German "pill box," or machine-gun nest of concrete, is shown. One of the twenty-six German airplanes officially credited to Captain Rickenbacker, American "ace of aces," is shown, together with pictures of Major Hartney commanding the First Pursuit Group, and Lieutenant Cunningham, major officer of the Ninety-fourth Aero Squadron.

Among other features in this news reel issued here to be seen a collection of fake weights and measures seized from dishonest retail merchants; scenes from San Francisco depicting the return of the "stragglers," California's crack artillery regiment, from abroad; pictures showing the launching of the Claxton and the Hamilton, two additions to the Navy's great destroyer fleet, and a cartoon, entitled "For Our Boys," drawn by Winsor McCay and animated by John Terry.

Many changes have taken place along South Street and it is no longer looked upon with fear by those who visit the theatre on the "hill." The "stragglers" and other entertainment compares favorably with that given by other neighborhood theatres in the Model.

Douglas Fairbanks has completed another film story. The motivation is about the famous letter of the "stragglers," which features Catherine Calvert on the local scene.

"Fog o' My Heart" will be in the movies within the year and it is said that either Margaret Greta or Mary Miles Minter will be the star. Another picture which will be made from a stage success is "Peter Pan," and will be the first Sir James M. Barrie play to appear in film form.

Guy Bolton, co-author of many recent stage successes in this city, will come forward as the writer of "Marrionette," which features Catherine Calvert on the local scene.

"Sins of Ambition" had its initial private showing last evening at a local theatre and will be presented for the public in the near future.

Charles Strakosck, formerly manager of the Walnut Street Theatre, is one of the representatives for the Stanley Company in New York city.

There is a rumor that Al Woods, producer of "Friendly Enemies," has a number of movie stars under contract.

Nigel Barrie, nephew of Press Director Jones, of the Klav and Erlanger interests in this city, is out of the army and has returned to picture making. He is the leading man for Alma Rubens in "Diana of the Green Van."

PATROLMAN CONVERT TO SPEAK AT MISSION

"Al" Crawford, Sunday "Trail-Hitter," Will Recount Experience at Dedication

Superintendent "Al" Crawford, former patrolman who was converted by "Billy" Sunday, will tell of his conversion at the dedication of Christ Mission, 218 South Eleventh street next Saturday evening.

There will be addresses by Edward A. Steel, J. H. Jefferies, Allan Sutherland, of the Presbyterian Publication Board; Charles Simington and the Rev. Dr. J. H. Schaffer, pastor of Spruce Street Baptist Church. Members of the National Bible Institute and the Philadelphia School of the Bible are also expected to be present.

The mission was opened January 13, and Monday prayer meetings are held every day. In the evening there is an evangelistic service at 7:45.

The dedication of the mission will also mark the fourth anniversary of the spiritual conversion of Superintendent Crawford by "Billy" Sunday.

Superintendent Crawford is the son of the late Detective Thomas D. Crawford. "I was just a plain 'quid' when 'Billy' Sunday converted me," he said today. "I had just been released from Moyamensing Prison for the fourth time when I walked up the 'trail' in the tabernacle."

Superintendent Crawford also told how he would come home intoxicated and shoot six pictures on the wall with his revolver. He also related how, on one occasion when intoxicated, he arrested a detective.
