Welcome to a Stranger

To the Editor of Woman's Page:

Dear Madam—Knowing you to be kind and helpful to others, I am requesting a little aid myself.

I am an out-of-town girl, twenty-three years old, spending the winter in Camden, I would like to know of some school where I could take a course in arithmetic, grammar and spelling. Thanking you, STRANGER.

You can take these courses at the free evening classes held three nights a week in the Junior High School, Haddon avenue and Newton, Camden. There are also evening courses to be had at small cost in the Y. W. C. A., 223 Broadway, Camden. If you wish to come to Philadelphia for the studies, there are any number of free public night schools you can attend. You can get the addresses of these at the administration building of the Board of Education on South Nineteenth street between Chestnut and Market streets.

To Take Out Dyc Stain

To the Editor of Woman's Page:

Dear Madam—Will you hindly inform me what to do with a centerplece in which the color has run? It is a white crash affair, worked in blue and green, and the leaves, done in green, have run. I have just washed it for the first time.

Running color stains are often difficult Running color stains are often difficult to remove, as the composition of the dye is not always known. You might try the potassium permanganate treatment. This is sometimes very effectual in dealing with colors that have run. Prepare and dissolve the permanganate as follows: Dissolve one teaspoonful of the crystals in a pint of water and apply a little of this to the sain with a medithe crystals in a pint of water and apply a little of this to the stain with a medicine dropper or a clean cork, and allow it to remain for about five minutes. Remove any pink or brown stains left by the permanganate by applying a little lemon juice. Frecede the treatment by sponging and follow by thorough rinsing. You may have to repeat the treatment a couple of times. If this does not remove the stain, apply a little javelle water to the stain with a medicine dropper, but don't allow it to stay on more than a minute. Then apply oxalic acid to neutralize the javelle water and rinse in bowl of water. to neutralize the Javelle water and rinse in bowl of water. You can buy these materials in any drug store.

NICK CARSON had no real idea of what was to come of his relations with Ruth Raymond. As has been said, he was no villain, but he was essentially selfish and he had no accupies about taking whatever came his way. When he took Ruth home that evening he was especially charming. He did nothing further to alarm her and she almost forgot the episode of the hand, almost but not quite, for she did remember it later on and it made ser uncomfortable. "I want you and your husband to come to Polly's masquerade party, he said, as he left Ruth at the door, "She will let you know about it herself as will let you know about it herself any one as yet." To tell the truth Nick and Polly had spoken of it very vaguely hemselves. There was nothing definite at all about when they would have it. Nick simply used it as a possibility of seeing Ruth again very soon. What he had done was simply to fit in a neat little wedge for himself. He was sorry, in a way, that he had frightened Ruth by taking her hand that way, but he was almost certain that he had fixed matters up all right later and that she had been perfectly reassured of his friendship.

Even the microscope finds it clean

Daily laboratory tests prove that the methods of milk production of the Walker-Gordon Laboratory Company are entirely justified.

The milking herd is made up of strong, healthy animals. Thorough and frequent cleansing of the barns, the cows and the milkers' hands during the milking period is rigidly enforced. Quick cooling and bottling of the milk, which is always kept at a low temperature, further helps the milk to pass the final check of the microscope.
