JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Philadelphians to Attend Bachelors' Cotillon in Baltimore. Nancy Wynne Chats About Affairs for School Set. Interesting Marriage in Milton, Mass.

EVER so many people are going down | was formerly commanuant at the France, or Rallimore was next Saturday to attend | Arsenal, has recently returned from France. Baltimore way next Saturday to attend the Bachelors' Cotillon. For you know this one will be the first given since our country entered the world war, so it's going to be some party!

From all I've heard, there are to be numberless dinner parties for the debs and out-of-town guests, and one of the largest will be that given by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Adams Savage, who will entertain for their daughter Dorothy and whose outof town guests will include Leila Gordon, the daughter of Major General George Barnett, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Barnett, who is going on to Baltimore from Washington for the occasion: Ensign John A. Mayor. U. S. N., and Ensign Arthur Littleton, U. S. N., of this city.

DID you ever hear anything like the preparations for the Easter holidays in the school set? Dinners and dances and parties galore. Of course, there'll be the Saturday Evening Committee Dancing Class, and it will be March 28, about mid-Lent, because so many of the boys' schools give the Easter holidays before Easter. The reason for this is that the boys sing in the school choirs and they are needed for the Holy Week singing. I know this is so of St. Paul's, and I believe St. Mark's and Andover and St. Luke's and several others have the same rules.

Well, just some of the parties planned shead are: A theatre party for Charlotte Starr, to be given on March 22 by Mr. and Mrs. Starr; a dinner for Harriet Frazier Zimmerman by her parents before the Saturday Evening on the 28th of next month. and a dinner before the same dance for Elizabeth Bartow, given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah B. Bartow.

The Tristram Colkets will give a dinner before the Haverford school dance, which will take place on March 7, and Mr. and Mrs. Irvin King will give a dinner before the Saturday Evening on March 28. There will be several more meetings of the Wurts Class, too, before the end of the season. Tomorrow night will be the fancydress meeting of that class, and it seems as if it would be a very pretty affair, if all I hear is true in regard to the dresses the girls are going to wear.

WHAT a lovely time Mrs. Felix du Pont and Mrs. William Waterman are having down in Palm Beach. They went down there together several weeks ago and have been entertained quite a good deal, though not as much as the "Palm Beachers" would like to have done, because both Mrs. du Pont and Mrs. Waterman went there for a rest. Mrs. du Pont was Mary Richard Chichester, better known as "Dick," you remember. She used to live with her sister, the late Mrs. William Muir, in Haverford, before her marriage to Felix du Pont, of Wilmington, Mrs. Waterman was Miss Sarah Wister and lives in Chestnut Hill most of the time, She has several dear little children and is one of the sweetest women in the younger married set.

TT 18 interesting to hear of the marriage In Milton, Mass., of Catherine Whittier, of Milton, who is a sister of Ross Whittier, who married Nancy Tunis, of this city. Catherine Whittier was married to a young Scotchman of the Royal Navy, Lieutenant John Fraser, of Leckheim, Scotland. You remember Nancy Tunis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tunis, was married about a year ago to Captain Ross Whittier. He, by the way, was best man at his sister's wedding. Nancy Tunis is a sister of Hilda Tunis and a cousin of Marion and Eleanor Wurts and of the Bissell boys, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Perot Bissell, and of Dorothea Willson.

I HEAR that the Red Cross volunteer factory, at 1314 Market street, is still doing a great deal of work every day. The workers are turning out quantities of refugee garments, and the interest seems to have increased since the armistice. I suppose it's because so many of the auxiliaries have "shut up shop," that people who still want to work are going to the factory, where the work is still fast and furious. Mrs. Grenville Dodge Montgomery is running it now, and a number of prominent women are busy there certain days a week. Mrs. Harry Potter and Mrs. S. Deas Sinkler are always there on Wednesdays.

WEE Mary is not very old, but she is pretty bright, and she knows pictures when she sees them. But why do you suppose, when you want to show them off, kiddies always emburrass you? Mother had Mary on her lap one day recently when a friend came to call. Naturally Friend began talking to the baby, who smiled diffidently and tried to hide her face. In order to make her feel at home with the visitor, Mother picked up the book of bright pictures that Mary had dropped to the floor and said, "Oh, pretty pussy." "Meow!" responded Mary quickly. The visitor was highly pleased and Mother much elated at having overcome the shyness, and proceeded to show her the pictures, and Mary said "Wow-wow" and "Moo" and roared lustily for the lion. Then Mother showed her a goat, and to her horror Mary, who by now felt much at home, remarked with a delighted chuckle, NANCY WYNNE. "Daddy."

"PSYCHIC PROPHET" STIRS PENN CAMPUS

Samples of Free, Very Free, Verse, Strangely Signed, Excite Students

The Psychic Prophet of Poetry has arrived n the campus of the University of Pennsylvania. That's the name he calls himself. and nobody around the University feels safe n contradicting him.

As yet the newcomer has been seen by o one; indeed, he had never been heard of until this week, but from present indications he will soon be a Philadelphia as well as a college celebrity. So far nobody pretends to understand the

P. P. of P., but, as they say in apology. Nobody expects to understand the best of new poetry, and the least intelligible it is the better."

As yet only three gents from the pen of this new gentus have been discovered at Penn. All were typewritten and two of them were unsigned, but at present students and faculty allike who are interested at all in the poetizing art are on edge with impatience for some new development.

The first of the three poems was found in the farthest recess of the most retired alcove of the library. It appears to be, so general opinion agrees, the new poet's greeting to Philadelphia, if, as is thought, he is a stranger from "climes unknown." Thus the poet rhapsodizes on the city of Penn:

Irrefutable, irrefragable, irresponsible Thou Scanning the water waves, A'break across the blue-green algae of predatory Politics,

Can we see the heart of thee,
Or only think we seet

- As the parden snail-yea, even the time

garden snail Who eradicates the toothsome beath or masticates

The prideful pea,
Sees his reflection in the filing Reac--How can a Cosmic Globald fell?

Somebody at the University was cruel enough to declare that this specimen of the Cosmic Globold's verse reminds him of a seed catalogue, but that is unjust to the new genius.

Second Message Discovered

At the other extreme of the campus, just outside the door of Botanical Hall, the second message from the P. P. of P., like the first, untitled and unsigned, was found late yesterday afternoon.

It appears to be intended as in honor of the newly rushed freshmen, but no one has as yet entirely deciphered it. This is how the poet sounds when he gets on subjects of local interest:

"Oh glow up ones, most hotly, brightly glowing ones Fanciful phantasics of a ferrid, phantas magorial

Phenomenon-Beware!
The snows of winter, age, the thickest snows of

The most wintry winter Are as naught, or less than naught Veside What will be befall

You-you-you.

Aerial argostes cannot save nor supper-nauts avail

When comes the night

The night of nights itself When mystic rites entangle And you no longer are yourself, the petted, patted. Friend of all the Gods,

But only good, yes, alas, are only good To fix the furnace."

Poet Hints at Identity

This morning shortly before chapel, directly in front of College Hall steps, a third innocent piece of paper was discovered, this time capped with the fateful signature, Psychic Prophet of Poetry, and which contained four short lines, written with the usual direct and simple vigor of the new poetic genius. They are: poetic genius. They are:

poetic genius. They are:
"I am that one—but not he alone
Most positively not, for he is not like me
More than a Bolshevik, yet not as much
For Bolsheviks are such as one can see,
But I—not so, most certainly not so—
I am the wind that rustles down your neck
As you standing waiting for the P. R. T.
I am the wind, the rain, the topmost speck of all of all, I am the psychic prophet of all poetry." Now everybody at the University is looking for further developments.

NICHOLAS DOUTY IN LECTURE-RECITAL

Interesting and Instructive Evening Given by Philadelphia Singer

Nicholas Douty gave the second of his interesting and instructive lecture-recitals before a large and justifiably enthusiastic audience in Witherspoon Half last evening. The series of three, which Mr. Douty b giving under the auspices of the University Extension Society, is entitled "The Post and the Song," and the event of last evening treated of the poets of the nineteenth century and the music to which some of this poetry is set.

Mr. Douty's treatment of his subject was not only interesting, but decidedly original He first discussed the poet and the place which has been awarded to him in permanent literature. Then he took up the specific poem which is set to the song which he had chosen, although this poem is frequently not of the type by which the post has won his permanent fame. Then, in a few words, he tells who the composer is, a matter of great interest and importance to those who are interest and importance to those who are not so familiar, as is Mr. Douty, with the history of the song.

As hight be expected from so thorough a musician as well as accomplished singer (and the words are not always synonemous). Mr. Douty's selections of the songs to illustrate the noems were of the best. They were not always those which showed his voice and style to the best advantage, but they were. In every instance, those which carried out to the utmost the points which carried out to the utmost the points which he had made in the talk which preceded them. They included songs from the classic and modern French, German (classic only). Norwegiah, English, American and Russian composers. Mr. Douty was in excellent voice and sang all the songs with that artistry of technique all the songs with that artistry of technique and the songs with that artistry of terminds and temperament which he always shows. Two of the selections were by Philadelphia composers, a charming setting of Words worth's 'Daffodils' by Ellis Clark Hamman and a remarkably beautiful work of Mr Douty's to Walt Whitman's "Twilight." Both are compositions which compared fa-vorably with any on the program, even though it included names such as Gounod. though it included infrees such as courtout, Liszt, Chausson, Grieg and Arensky, Mr. Douty was obliged to repeat the songs of Gounod, Lidgey and his own work. The de-ranges of the audience were perfectly just-fied as regards the lovely song of Gounod and Mr. Douty's own, but the success of the Lidgey song was something of a mystery. Despite the vigor of the nelody the rettera-tion of the disguised triplets seemed an unpardonable monotony.

At the close of the program, which was a at the close of the program, which was a fine setting by Avensky to a poem in biank verse of Tourgenieff entitled "Melodrama," which seemed, by the way, an inadequate translation, Mr. Pouty was so vigorously encored that he sang two of his own songs with fine effect, playing his own accompaniements. Joseph W. Clarke was at the piano and played the difficult and exacting accompaniments of the songs with taste and discretion, no easy matter when the fitting of the ac-companiment and its importance in the gen-eral scheme of most of the songs to the vocal part in many of the numbers is considered
