Sergeant Philip R. Dorn, Philadelphia, severely wounded at the battle of the Argonne, has returned from overseas. His life was saved by an English soldier who gave blood from his own body to supply that which Dorn had lost from wounds.

The news of Sergeant Dorn's return, and the details of how he was wounded have just reached the soldier's mother, Mrs. Robert Dorn, 3323 North Sixteenth street, from a chaplain at the Carlisle School Hospital, where Dorn is recuperating under the care of an Indian doctor.

Sergeant Dorn was gassed September 2, and after three weeks in a hospital recovered and returned to the firing line. He is attached to Company A, Twenty-seventh Division.

"I was on a detail with a lieutenant and three privates," Dorn told the chaplain, "manipulating a machine gun in efforts to oust boche nests that had been taking a toll from our men. When we had silenced their hidden weapons I volunteered to go out and reconnoiter, and had no sooner stepped from cover than a bullet plugged me in the left side. My comrades rushed to my rescue, but before they could reach me I had three more wounds. All four were wounded," added the sergeant.

Dorn was the most seriously wounded. He suffered a severe gash in the abdomen, a bullet hole in the left leg and wounds on the face and in the left side. He was literally riddled with bullets. He was sent to a base hospital, but had lost so much blood that he would have died had not an English "Tommy" allowed physicians to take blood from his own body to save the dying soldier.

Sergeant Dorn was formerly a Pennsylvania Guardsman and served on the Mexican border in 1916 and 1917. When the United States entered the war he was in New York in the advertising business. He is a graduate of Central High School and an only son.

Only one death for Philadelphia in the expeditionary army is reported today. That of Private Frank A. Glennon, 1618 Nicholas street, who died of disease. Nine from this city are reported wounded severely and one—Private Dragio Catono, 4924 Kershaw avenue—previously reported missing, is listed today as returned to duty. There are forty-seven others on the city's wounded list.

The War Department today announces 2800 casualties for the nation, and 230 for Pennsylvania.

Sketches of the Heroes: Private William McDevitt, was wounded in the left arm, October 31. His mother who lives at 2118 South Lee street, had been notified of her son's wounds by the Red Cross society previous to receiving the War Department telegram last week. He has returned from the war zone, and is now at Camp Dix Hospital. He has a...

ON NATION'S HONOR ROLL

Private William McDevitt, 1510 Oxford street, was wounded November 8. He is a member of Company M, Fifty-fifth Infantry, and has been in the service since May of last year. He is twenty-seven years old. His wife, Mrs. Mary Floyd, lives at the Oxford avenue address. He traded at Camp Houston, Tex., several months before sailing. Private John W. McTischin, 2325 Amber street, was wounded in October. He is a member of the 315th Infantry, and, according to letters he wrote home, has returned to duty. He is twenty-one years old. Private James Quintin, 4247 Orchard street, Fronthaven, Pa., was wounded in July, recovered and returned to duty only to be overcome with gas again October 21. His parents, living at the Orchard street address, learned this from the War Department. He is attached to Company B, Sixth Engineers, and is twenty-five years old. In a recent letter home he wrote that he had recovered from the last attack and returned to his unit. Private Elmer A. Berry, Company K, 109th Infantry, reported wounded by the War Department today, was gassed in action July 16. His parents, living at 4780 Richmond street, have received word from him that he is recovering in a base hospital and expects to sail for home soon. Private David Brenner, Machine-Gun Company, Fourth Battalion, wounded November 6, was under fire in the last big drive before he was wounded. He was wounded on one day without intermission. In a recent letter to a sister, Mrs. Dora Miner, 2444 New Kirk street, Brenner wrote that he was on a rest period when wounded. He had been attracted by a wounded comrade some distance from shelter and was struck in the shoulder when bringing him back to safety. He has recovered and returned to duty, he writes. Brenner is twenty-one years old and has been overseas since December, 1917. Private Georgi Capola, 263 East Haines street, Germantown, attached to Company D, Seventh Engineers, is reported wounded October 14. According to recent letters to his mother at the Haines street address, he was wounded in the right shoulder, but returned to his unit after eleven days in a hospital. He is twenty-one years old. He enlisted in June, 1917, and trained at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and sailed for overseas in February of last year. He attended St. Vincent's Parochial School, Germantown, and was a plumber.

Two Heroes of the 109th: Private William G. Rev, 6152 Spruce street, Fronthaven, Pa., enlisted in September. He is attached to the Machine-Gun Company, 109th Infantry. He had been overseas since July last. Previous to entering the service he lived with a brother, John Rex, at the address given. Sergeant Charles P. Brown, 5826 Walton avenue, was severely gassed July 26. His father, Charles Brown, 5826 Walton avenue, has been notified by the War Department. He was previously a member of the First Regiment, N. G. P., and saw service on the Mexican border. He trained at Camp Hancock for nearly a year before sailing as a member of the Machine-Gun Company, 109th Infantry, in May of last year. A brother, William Brown, eighteen years old, is in the army, stationed at Fort Jay, New York. Private Charles B. Ford, Company I, Fourth Infantry, according to word received by his mother, Melinda Ford, 222 East Colton street, Germantown, was wounded in the left hand October 9. In a letter received from him about three weeks ago he had lost his wrist watch and glasses, and was lucky not to have lost his life. "Do not write to me, for we are moving," he said in the letter. "I think that we are soon to embark for home."

He was drafted November, 1917, and was at Camp Meade and sailed in April, 1918. He was born in this city, attended the public schools and was a mill worker. A brother, Lawrence, twenty-one years old, a member of Company F, Fourth Pioneer Corps, is also overseas. Corporal John F. Bradley, Company C, 314th Infantry, was wounded September 26 in the Argonne. After he recovered and returned to duty he again was wounded ten days before the armistice. He was in the first draft, September, 1917, trained at Camp Meade and
