PREPARING LOBSTER AND CRABS; MRS. WILSON EXPLAINS HOW

Methods Given for Dealing With Other Shellfish, Too—Terrapin, Shrimp, Turtle and Snapper—Cooking Hard and Soft Shelled Crabs and Ways to Serve the Other Varieties of Sea Food

By MRS. M. A. WILSON (Copyright, 1919, by Mrs. M. A. Wilson. All rights reserved.)

SHELLFISH include crabs, both hard and soft shell, lobsters, shrimp, terrapin, green turtle, snapper, etc.

Hard Shell Crabs All shellfish must be actively alive before cooking. This is the essential point and this will prevent ptomaine poisoning. Never cook the fish if they are dead. Remember, they are deadly.

Place a boiler of water on the stove and bring to a boil. Add one tablespoonful of red pepper and one cup of vinegar to every twenty-five crabs. Place in the crabs and cover and cook rapidly for twenty minutes for the medium size, fifteen minutes for the small and twenty-five minutes for the large ones.

When cooked, remove from the water and place under the cold water to cool. Place on ice until needed.

Place a boiler of water on the stove and bring to a boil. Add one tablespoonful of red pepper and one cup of vinegar to every twenty-five crabs. Place in the crabs and cover and cook rapidly for twenty minutes for the medium size, fifteen minutes for the small and twenty-five minutes for the large ones.

Soft Shell Soft-shell crabs are shadders, that is, the crab has shed his shell and the new one is not yet hard. To clean insert the finger under the apron-shaped piece and the back part of the shell and remove the spongy fingers, the entrails, etc.

Lobster Lobsters may be boiled, broiled and baked. To Boil Plunge the lobster into boiling water and cook for twenty minutes, for medium lobster. Cool, break apart; discard entrails and fine vein running down the center of the tail. Break open the claws and remove meat. This meat and that of the belly and tail may be used for salads.

Terrapin Diamond back or salt water terrapin are best. Fresh water terrapin may be used for croquettes and puree. Clean the terrapin by placing in fresh running water for six hours. Wash in warm water and then place them alive in boiling water. Cook for five minutes. Remove and then rub with a coarse cloth the neck, legs and tail to remove the skin. Wash again. Return to the pot. Cook until the legs leave the body easily. Usually about thirty-five minutes for small terrapin and seventy-five minutes for large ones. The age and condition determine the time of cooking. Cool. Now, before it is entirely cold, separate the terrapin from the shell, discarding the small intestines, shell, gall, etc. Cut the meat into pieces.

Turtle and Snapper Lay the turtle on its back and cut ravagottes, au gratins, croquettes, cutlets, a la King and terrapin style.

To Broil Lobsters Split the live lobster in half. Lay it on its back. Do not cut the back shell through. Remove the entrails and remove the vein through the tail. Wash well and then brush with salad oil and place in broiler, shell side up, and cook for fifteen minutes. Turn the flesh side up and baste with salad oil or melted butter. Cook for twelve minutes and then remove and serve with melted butter, chill or tomato sauce.

Please Tell Me What to Do

By CYNTHIA

To "An Unbeliever" Dear Cynthia—I am a constant reader of your page, and note with interest the one headed "Are Women Deceitful?" written by "Unbeliever."

He does not state whether they are deceived. If not, why? Just because a girl says she loves him, why should he want to keep her caged in away from other young men and women? Of course, on the other hand, they were engaged we will have to admit, from this side of the story the girl is wrong.

Maybe "Unbeliever" you had done something that vexed your friend. Then the last of your love was to explain matters, tried as the old saying is to get even with you.

Now, if you really love the girl, why not go on more to her and ask her to explain her actions? There are always two sides to a story and we have only one.

You have my sympathy, "Unbeliever," and I hope everything will come out all right.

Brings Her Troubles Dear Cynthia—I guess you think that I bring all my troubles to you, but I feel so very sad.

I have liked a boy very much and he has always shown an attitude toward me which led me to think the same, but the last few days he has acted altogether different. I am sixteen years old and I do not go out at night with him for we have no appointments to meet him anywhere except to go to a party or something like that.

Will you please tell me a way to win his love back again? I saw him yesterday, but he did not tip his hat or even smile. Is it right for a girl to speak first to a boy?

I have been told that you do not put in the answers inside a month or two, I trust that you will have it in Monday night's Ledger. M. A.

I am sorry your letter could not be answered sooner, but there are so many, they must take their turns. Surely, dear little girl, if this boy is so ready as to kiss you in the street without taking off his hat, you do not want to win his affection. A boy who will treat a girl with such rudeness would not be worth the name of friend. There are plenty of "good fish in the sea," you know, and my advice to you is, turn your attention to other friends and ignore this rude boy if he does not apologize for his rudeness.

Stands Up for the Girls Dear Cynthia—Kindly publish the following advice in answer to "Unbeliever."

After reading your sad experience with a girl who did lightly trifles with true love, I feel that I must say something in defense of my sex, to re-establish the balance upon which pedestal from which you have so rudely cast her.

Four years ago I met a young man three years older than myself, who lived in a city 50 miles distant. After enjoying each other's society for a few days we left for home and did not see each other again until nine months after. So it has been for the last four years. We have corresponded continually since that day we met and I have never seen him for more than two weeks out of every year. I have had so dearly that there is nothing I wouldn't do for him. His happiness is my happiness, and he has never for one moment had cause to doubt my word, and I hope he never shall have.

We are not engaged, yet there is a degree of understanding between us which is the foundation of deep comradeship.

True love, all-abiding love, love that never dies, is based upon the one, "Forget self in thought of other," please try this, "Unbeliever," and I am sure you can say you still have faith in some girl's words.

DEARIE GIRL.

Says She Is Disgusted Dear Cynthia—I am very much interested in your letters. I am a young lady just reaching the age of twenty-five and it is at this age that I feel disgusted with life. I am a pretty girl, have a model figure as people call me, and I don't look my age, as people judge me to be twenty or thereabouts. I have a jolly disposition, as I am always full of fun, am sociable, and I have a good reputation as a good and respectable girl, especially among the male sex; but I am an independent girl, and it pays to be independent with the opposite sex. Dear Cynthia, you are the only person I can turn to for a telling in regard to being disgusted. I have never been disgusted before until here of late. You see, I act jolly and of course, no one can tell. Perhaps if I were to meet my type of a man then I suppose I would be happy. Why is it a girl like me, that any fellow ought to be proud to go with, can't get the right man? Perhaps this is one of the reasons I am disgusted. You see, Cynthia, I am the oldest of the family. I have good parents and a nice home.

So, of course, I don't want to marry any one if I don't love him. I have quite a few proposals, but none appeals to me. All you hear people saying is, "Isn't Rose married yet, a nice clever girl like her?" I am a girl of today, can take a joke and give a joke, but I can't phone or run after boys the way some girls do, and I stated before I am independent with the boys.

See, Cynthia, being tall, I make a very nice appearance, no matter what I wear. Of course, I dress stylishly. So do you think, Cynthia, that some boys are afraid to take a chance on a fellow who need encouragement from a girl if she is of the independent kind? I hope you won't be under the impression that I am a conceited or think that I am beautiful, for I am not.

DISGUSTED GIRL.

If you have many proposals, why worry? Why be disgusted? You say you have looks, beautiful and stylish clothes, a model figure and are only twenty-five. What more do you want, my dear? Do not bore me with what the neighbors say, and do not marry without love. You have plenty of time to wait for the right man. Be unselfish with your family and take an interest in your friends and their interests, but these occasions are to be trusted. For, according to your own account, you have nothing to be disgusted about.

WHEEN the armistice was first signed and the whole world awoke to the fact that the war was over, everything seemed so bright and glowing. There was no branch of the world's industries that so quickly showed the difference between wartime and peacetime than the dress and fashion trades. The designers, both in Paris and on this side of the water, at once placed before the buying public creations which were bright and happy in design as well as in coloring. The women in general showed their enthusiasm in the changed condition by buying new frocks.

Every woman wanted to look her best and it must be a decided improvement in almost every woman's attire. But already we are beginning to know that there is still much work to be done, and that the world is not yet set straight by any means. The French designers, according to letters from the other side, are feeling that there are other things for them to do. The clothes that they have shown so far for the coming season are not therefore radical in their departures.

The tone is made of alternate bands of straw and rolls of taffeta. An ostrich feather trims the hat at the right side.

How to Reduce

To the Editor of Woman's Page:

Dear Madam—I am a young girl and I have just reached the age of twenty. I am a little stout and I would like to know the correct weight for a girl five feet ten inches in height and weighing 125 pounds. SURE THAN ANXIOUS.

The correct weight for a woman five feet two inches is 125 pounds. But as a girl eighteen years of age, you should not reach full development, one must discount for that.

In answer to your second question, the best way to reduce is by diet and exercise. Any healthy exercise, such as a course in gymnasium work, such as bicycling, walking, that is pursued regularly, is recommended. Jumping rope helps to regulate the hips. Whatever is done must be done regularly. As for diet, keep from sweet and starchy foods. This includes sweets and pastries, heavy cakes, etc., and vegetables, such as potatoes, rice, etc.

With some it is natural to be fleshy, but the exercise and diet ought to reduce the tendency.

CAN A GIRL BE POPULAR WITH MEN AND GIRLS TOO?

A Complaint From a Young Woman Who Attends a Co-educational College—Boys Pay Her Plenty of Attention, but Her Sisters Snub Her

Girls are popular with men and girls at the same time? I have a letter here on the subject. It comes from a college where there is co-education. "The boys are all very nice to me," writes our correspondent, "but I cannot say the same for the girls. Somehow they seem to snub me. About a dozen boys in the class have asked me to go out with them, but not one girl. How can you account for this? If seems I have always made friends with boys easier than with girls. But this is the first time I have ever felt so much out of place about it. I would like your advice, for I do very much want a girl chum. M. C."

THE other girl students resented this. It was not that they were jealous of her, but that they were not pleased in paying attention. Having nothing else to do, the girls accepted the invitations to walk, etc. and soon it was impossible to go to the village without seeing either one or the other of them in the company of some youthful swain.

Let us analyze your case, for instance. When a girl goes away to school she stands alone for the moment. That is, girls who have come in twos, three or four to be freshmen do not rush to take up with her. Neither do the older students. The girl who comes alone must stand a peculiar indefinite test to which those of her own sex put her.

One of the tests in that she must not be "boy crazy." Now, "M. C." I am not saying for a minute that you are overfond of boys or chasing about after them. But to the other girls it looks that way. I remember a similar case. Two sisters came from a western city to attend a co-educational university. As usual, the other girls did not take them up immediately, but the boys, always more kind-hearted
