Nancy Wynne Hears That Miss Alexandra Dolan Is Suffering With a Broken Wrist-She Tells of the Tea at Chapin Home for the Blind

I WAS so sorry to hear about Alix Dolan's Mrs. Burton Chance, Dr. and Mrs. Charles accident. Did you know she was thrown Henry and Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Knowles. accident. Did you know she was thrown from her horse while hunting down in Aiken, S. C., where her parents and she are spending several weeks? Her wrist was broken. Alix, you know, has been taking a course in nursing. I mean a real honest-to-goodness course, not a few weeks or months' one, but a couple of years, and she has been having a well-carned holiday. It is too bad this accident has happened. However, it's better than a broken arm. The Bob Strawbridges are down in Aiken, too, and Anita, their attractive daughter, is with them.

Anita, if I am not mistaken, is about the coming-out age, and will be among next year's debs. It's difficult to keep tab on the exact ages of the youngsters as they come along, when they get to be about sixteen, for so many of them turn up their hair now when they are only fifteen. (The boys won't dance with them at the parties, if you please, when their tresses are allowed to flow down the back; that means they are kids. Can you beat it?)

Next year it will be rather hectic as to ages, anyhow, because a lot of the girls of nineteen who would have come out last year and the year before will make their debut next, and you won't be able to say in future years: "Oh, yes, she came out in 1919-20 and so she must have been eighteen then and so she's about ninety now"; you know the way you do. Be that as it may, they are all coming out and it's going to be a wonderful winter as far as parties are concerned.

I WISH you could have been with me on Monday afternoon at the Chapin Memorial Home for the Blind. They had one of their afternoon tea parties for the old people who are at that home, and Mrs. Edgar Fahs Smith, who was in charge of the entertainment, asked the quartet of the University Glee Club to sing for them, and they did, and beautifully at that, and they accompanied the old people when they wanted to sing; and little Miss Heisler was out there and sang, too. Altogether it was a lovely party. Mrs.

William Woodward, you know, is chairman of the auxiliary of ladies who, among other things, get up these little parties four and five times a year. She has done wonderful work together with her committee, and you know she is blind herself-has been for twelve years-but she's ready to go anywhere and do anything for others and has, I honestly believe, done more for the blind in this city than any other one person here.

In connection with the Chapin Memorial Home, by the way, the Matinee Musical Club members will give a concert next Wednesday night, March 26, at the Normandle. Thirty-sixth and Chestnut streets, for the benefit of the Memorial Home. Dorothy Johnstone Baseler will play her harp. Zoltan de Horvath will play a number of his piano compositions and Miss Ruth Buck, Miss Kathryn Melsle and Mr. Howard Berry will sing.

The philanthropy committee of the musicale dub has had a concert every year for the home and the silver offlerings given by the attending guests have made quite a sum for the home, which is not endowed and must depend on the charity of its

DID you hear about the huge fish Harrison Dulles, Jr., caught down in Palm Beach recently? He and his parents are down there for a while, you know. Well, Harrison went fishing and he caught the largest kingfish ever recorded there. What do you know about that? It weighed sixtytwo pounds, and maybe he did not have some cute little time landing Mr. Fish. He's having it mounted, my informant tells me, and they say he's going to take it to New York with him as a souvenir. Some souvenir. You know the Dulleses have been living in New York for some time, though they are Philadelphians.

TEDDY was busily engaged in testing the capacity of his hands, for holding mudrainy day the day before being still evident in the garden. And it was interesting to see how completely they (the hands) disappeared under a fair-sized lump of mud. So interesting in fact, that he never knew a thing about the time until he heard the maid calling him to come get his bath and get ready for dancing class. Dancing class -with all that fascinating mud there in the garden! But it had to be, and so he submitted to a bath, and then clean clothes, slippers that refused to stay on his feet, a large and flowing necktie and much combmg and parting of his thick hair. At last he was ready, and as Mother patted him approvingly on the shoulder and asked him for the last time whether he had a handkerchief and if he was sure he had the right hat, he sighed violently and remarked resignedly, "Oh, it's such a bother to be a zentleman's son!" ## GERALDINE FARRAR STARS AS FIAMMETTE

Brilliant Performance of Leroux's New Opera Given by the Metropolitan Company

The Metropolitan Opera Company last evening gave the first Philadelphia performance of Xavier Leroux's opera. "La Reine "lammette," a work which required almost the entire resources of even that great com-pany, for there are twenty-three in the east and a vast number of extra persons, while the scenic demands are as great as in any opera which has been seen here for a long

Probably one of the chief reasons for the production of the work, aside from the fact that Mr. Gatti-Casazza is always on the lookout for worth-while novelties, is that the part of Fianmette is admirably adapted to the dramatic talents of Miss Farrar, who is unquestionably at her best in parts like that of the high-spirited, impulsive queen who was the heroine of last evening's and who goes cheerfully to her death fo

Miss Farrar both sang and acted the part Miss Farrar both sang and acted the part to perfection. She was in better voice than she has been at any of her performances of this season in Philadelphia, her upper notes being especially clear in quality and free in utterance. There is little need to dwell on her dramatic abilities. It is suf-ficient to say that the opera gives ample scope to them, and Miss Farrar's dramatic nstincts and training did the rest. She was especially good in the closing scene, where after defying the Cardinal she and her lover roceed calmly to the executioner.

Of the others in the immense cast, Leon Rothler as the villainous Cardinal was the most convincing character. Impressive in appearance and dignified in action, but with appearance and dignified in action, but with plenty of vehemence where the part requires, he gave a rendition of the part that was a revelation to Philadelphians at least as to his vocal and dramatic abilities. His voice is deep, rich and of fine quality and volume. Adamo Didur, who made his first appearance here for some time, did well in the somewhat ungrateful part of Giorgio d'Ass. somewhat ungrateful part of Glorglo d'Ast. a character obviously not adapted to exhibit his great talents to the best advantage. Hipolito Lazaro, in the tenor role vantage. Hipolito Lazaro, in the tenor role of Danielo, rang and acted well, but it is no easy matter to play a tragedy part against the artistry of Geraldine Farrar when she is at her best, as she was last evener she had been to the cast were all relawhen she is at her best, as she was last evening. The others in the cast were all relatively minor parts, but were adequately taken, especially the part of the three little jesters, sung by Mary Ellis, Leonore Sparkes and Kitty Beale.

Musically, the opera is rather difficult to Musically, the opera is rather difficult to define accurately. It never rises to very great heights, but it can by no means be called commorphace. It inclines somewhat toward the Italian (Puccini) style of melody and is only remotely touched by the modern French harmonic system. Here and there are exquisite bits of melody, but they are never carried to their logical conclusions. Some of the scenes are longer than the dramatic and musical interest of them. sions. Some of the scenes are longer than the dramatic and musical interest of them out faithfully the emotion depicted by the action and rarely has the "bite" real tragedy. Mention, however, must be made of the artistic restraint shown at the close of the third act, where the Cardinal orders the Queen under arrest without spoken word, and as she leaves in silent ter-ror the curtain fails to two pizzicato notes in the basses instead of the thunderous orchestral tumuit which most modern com-posers would have written. In the orches-tration much discretion is shown, and there is none of that abuse of vast resources is none of that abuse of vast resources which has been so conspicuous a feature of orchestral composition, both operatic and symphonic, since Richard Strauss showed us many sins brilliant orchestration can be made to cover. The staging, both in scenery and in costimes, was superb. The opera in every scene was a picture to the eye, and Mr. Ordynski's efforts were amply acknowledged by the large audience.

"Let Us Have Peace"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger Sir-I have read with a great deal of in terest your recent article concerning the "Korean philosophy" of certain of our states-men, but it would seem to me that if we let our memory drift back but a few years we would find some of the ones who are now talking the loudest about our joining hands with the rest of the world were then the ones who were trying to keep this nation in the "hermit" class. Who was it that opposed preparedness and our entry into the European struggle long was plain to every clear-thinking American that we must sooner or later be drawn in? Not the Borahs, the Poindexters, the Knozs or the Shermans. Can it be that we have forgotten the watchwords of 1916 we have forgotten the watchwords of 1916. "He kept us out of war" and "Too proud to fight." It would seem that if our statesmen who wanted to keep this nation a hermit among the nations were to wear the "long Asiatic nightshirt, cloth slippers and inverted top hats tied on with a ribbon" this custom would long ago have become cuite a familiar sight in Weshington quite a familiar sight in Washington

We are willing to shoulder our responsi-bilities in the world, but we do not want this great nation, which has stood for so long as the home of a free people, tied down to the petty jeniousies of the Old World. A league of nations we all want, if it can be accomplished so that it will really bring about the result which every God-fearing human being desires, the doing away for al time with the possibility of the horrors which have oppressed us for four years; but if such league is to be formed it cannot be done five great powers dominating the world. high is merely another form of "Kaiserism."

This is what we all desire-a universa court of justice, where large and small na tions are represented slike, but first of all let us have peace; let the world return to its peaceful pursuits, feed the hungry, for it is in empty stomachs that Boishevism de-velops, let us restore poor, forgotten Belgium to its normal life; even on our enemics must we have compassion, for we must hasten before it is too late to save Germany from the fate of Russia. Let there be less talk more action and less determination to force at any cost the will of a certain few on the rest of the world.

A FAIR-MINDED AMERICAN. Philadelphia, March 17,

He Likes Dakota Brand

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger Sir-You invite comment on your editorial on the Nonpartisan League of North Da-kota, and its complete control of that state as now recently evidenced in its consumua tion of government ownership and control of or formation of a state bank, grain mills and elevators, and home building association. from every business man, every politician and every student of popular government. As one of the latter only, I respectfully give you my opinion straight from the shoulder, and All hall the power of the Non partisan League of North Dakota! over, may this "center of contagion" in the ereat Northwest spread until it dominates rest of the Union, and the world if needs

You dismiss as "a mere incident" the in-You dismiss as 'a mere incident the in-dictment of this league for pro-Germanism and its leader. A. C. Townley, of disloyalty. Very easy to dispose of that in such simple fashion, but the fact remains that it was nothing more or less than an attempt of special privilege to "get them." the same as they think they got Debs and Berger, etc.

The question is, when, oh when, will you otherwise liberal special privilege backers succumb to the inevitable? Is it not about time the rubber band snaps its vicious sting on the cheek? Color Line in Coatesville

Philadelphia, March 17,

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir-Articles which have appeared in various newspapers, including yours, relative to the so-called deportation of negro workers from Coatesville, have placed this city in a wrong light before the public, and we would fund, is in charge of the entertainments.

ask that you present the following facts in your paper, in order that our position here may be made clear.
Coatesville does not draw the color line.
Since the Civil War it has had a large colored population, made up of good citizens,
As evidence that there is no discrimination against the colored people, we need only point out that one-third of the members of our local police force are colored men.

The deportation, which has been mention in some of the newspapers, included whites as well as blacks. The men who were or-dered from the city by the mayor were of the wondering class—men who had formerly been employed elsewhere and simply came into our city as they were going from place to place. When they sought lodging at police headquarters it was furnished them, but they were informed the next morning that they must leave for home, as it was not

In addition to these men who were or dered, and rightly ordered, we believe, to leave the city, there were a number of un-desirables, both black and white, caught in the drag-net of the State and mill police, following the start of what promised to be a reign of terror in the outlying districts of Robbertes and holdung became re numerous that it became necessary to take action to protect life and property, and as a result of this about a dozen men who were not only idle, but who refused to work regu larly, were rounded up and informed that the space which they occupied was desired for more useful purposes. The me corted to the city limits and ordered not to

As evidence that the right men were iered from the town we need only state that since their departure there has not be single robbery or holdup in or around the

These are the facts in the case. Coates. ville is not deporting men who were brought here and given employment in the mills. While there has been a suspension of workers, due to a decline in the steel business, Coatesville expects to do in this instance as it has done in other instances during duli times—that is, feed and clothe every one of its citizens, black or white, who are unable to provide for themselves

The following statement by A. H. Swing. mayor of our city, explains briefly just what has been done:
"The handling of undesirables, both black and white, who have been requested to leave the city of Coatesville, has been in accord-ance with the plans as outlined herein by the Chamber of Commerce," We sincerely trust that you will give som of your space to this letter, in order that the truth may be placed before persons who have read some of the misleading articles which have been published.

By C. H. HEINTZELMAN, Secretary March 17.
