Advises Letting Her Go Into the Kitchen to Prepare a Whole Meal—Gives a Sunday Breakfast She Could Manage

Plan a menu as follows: Grapefruit Cereal and Cream Broiled Fish Grilled Potatoes Watercress Coffee

THE nicety and elegance of a meal depends not only upon the food itself, but rather upon the manner in which it is served.

Wash and pare the potatoes and then cut into thin slices—paperlike—the width and length of the potato. Place in rows, slightly overlapping. Brush with shortening and broil or bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes.

Breakfast is entirely an informal meal and it may be served entirely from the table. See that the table is covered with a silent cloth or table pad, not only for the protection of the table, but also to prevent noise and to give a good, firm appearance to the table linen.

Spread the cloth smoothly on the table. A fern dish or a low, flat dish with a fern or vine or even a small vase with a few green leaves may be placed in the center of the table.

Alongside of the fork place the napkin. Have finger bowls at each place to use after fruit. Place the pepper and salt shakers on the table, allowing one set for every two persons.

Mother may serve the fish and potatoes and leave daughter to pour the coffee. Every mother owes it to her daughter to see that she can prepare and cook a plain, palatable meal.

A COSY LITTLE RACK FOR BOOKS

The living room that has plenty of informal little nooks and corners for books and magazines is always an inviting place. The picture shows a way to find room for one of these informal little bookcases.

Adventures With a Purse

HERE is a set for the table you keep beside your bed that combines really unusual beauty with real every-day use.

THE hostess who likes to serve different dishes for her dinner or luncheon comes a soup that will warrant few if any of her friends have ever served. It is equal soup, looks delicious, and costs but twelve cents a dish.
