Nancy Wynne Chats of Various Matters-She Hears That Captain McCall Was Awarded a D. S. M. Before His Death-Mi-careme Dance for Day Nursery

McCall was killed in action last July, and I think all Philadelphia mourned for him. He was such a splendid man and a wonderful soldier, and so many of the men who were under him have expressed their admiration and affection for him. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. McCall, of the Wellington, and his sister is Lenore and his brother is Lieutenant Joseph B. McCall, who married Louis Davis. The D. S. M. is not easy to win, and this proves more than ever that he was all that his friends claim.

I HEAR there's to be a Mi-careme dance this year, on Wednesday, April 2, at the Bellevue, in the ballroom. And before the dancing there will be an illustrated lecture by Dr. George Earle Raiguel on "Personal Glimpses of England, France and Italy," : howing our men in the field. These pictures are some that have been taken by Burton Holmes, and I have heard they are well worth seeing. The affair is in aid of the Joy Settlement Day Nursery, and the executive committee which is in charge of it includes Mrs. Joseph M. Dohan, Mrs. Walter S. McInness, Mrs. Thomas E. Coale, Mrs. Fielding O. Lewis, Mrs. James Large and Miss Marguerite Weston. The board of managers consists of Mr. Thomas E. Coale, president; Mr. G. A. Pfeiffer, vice president; Mr. H. H. Barton, Jr., second vice president; Miss Esie MacIntosh, secretary, and Miss Weston, treasurer. The Joy Day Nursery, you know, not only takes care of hundreds of babies during the year while their mothers are at work, but it also instructs the mother how to clothe the children properly, the proper food to give them and how to better their living conditions ir. all sorts of ways.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS is getting very, very popular these days, it seems to me. And the greatest number of Philadelphians are down there and going down. The Harry McKeans, who have been at Asheville in North Carolina for most of the winter, went to White Sulphur last week, and the Powell Evanses and their daughter Anita, who, by the way, will debut next year, are down there, Anita and her father spending much of their time in the saddle. Anita rides wonderfully well and is a perfect wiz on her horse. Charlotte Brown is down there, too Charlotte has not been looking so awfully well. Her brother Henry Houston's death and the absence overseas of her flance. Ned Law, have made the winter very hard for her; but lately she is looking much better, and with the return of Captain Low I guess the wedding bells will soon be ringing. Mrs. Jeanes and Margaretta are still at the Springs; they've been there for several weeks now, and as I tola you once, are devoted horsewomen, and Margaretta has been playing a lot of golf, too, I hear. Mrs. George Willing, Jr., and her mother, Mrs. Joshua Ladd Howell, have been down there. . too, but Mrs. Willing is crazy about her gardens and had to come home early to see about the planting. She and Mrs. Howell gave a tea at one of the hotels just before she left. The J. Barton Townsends and the F. Corlies Morgans are going down to White Sulphur some time soon for about ten days, and the Rodman Griscoms, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ellison, the Frederick Rosengartens and lots of others ture" or stop there on their way up from Florida or the Carolinas.

ALL these days of summer weather make you turn hatwards, don't they? I told you about the wife who would not buy her hat without her husband because "he has such decided views about my hats," she explained. Well, now I'll tell you about one who thought she would buy a hat without her husband's taste being consulted, and so she did. When F--- came home she showed it to him with great gusto. He enthused. Oh. yes, it was a pretty hat; but wasn't it a little quiet? It was a sort of gray, you know, and had one of those two-story shaving brush fancy ornaments which was shaded from gray to purple, but not any one color that you might notice. When Mrs. F- went off to see about something in the house husband, who has an artistic soul, snitched the hat, and opening a bright red tube of paint which should have been mixed with oil to tone downsthe color, he held the stiff ends of ament together and rubbed the hat on them; then he dabbed both ary supports to the faney, brilliant touch. Then was th, for after all Mrs. Fat at all. In fact-oh, horrishe might hato it and be and demand another hat at once. Pe country was saved. She liked it, and liked it extremely well, and when I saw her in it on Saturday I'd have sworn that it was right from Paris with at least a fifty-dollar tag on it. NANCY WYNNE.

SOLDIERS IN GERMANY ANXIOUS TO RETURN

Philadelphian Takes Exception to Writer in Overseas Paper Stating Men Are Contented

There is at least one American soldier in Germany who wants to get home and doesn't care who knows it.

He is Corporal Walter N. Thompson, 51s Company, Fifth U. S. Marines. He writes from Segendorf, Germany, under date of February 27, and encloses a clipping from the Stars and Strips which aroused his wrath and the wrath of his friends among the "leathernecks."

The clipping is of an article to the effect that "American soldiers are not all yearning to discard kaliki."

Paragraphs of the clipping which Corporal Thompson has underscored are worth quoting. The writer opines that neither the average American office nor private is anxious to "be shunted immediately out of the service."

"Why should they be?" asks the writer in the Stars and Stripes. "Take the case of a private. He is clothed, he is fed, he is elaborately and well cared for, and then, in addition, he has, minus any insurance money he may pay, his thirty dollars per month, with his extra ten per cent for oversea ser-Those thirty dollars plus-what are they? ### SENATOR SPENCER EXPLAINS

Does Not Oppose League Idea, but Wants Monroe Doctrine Ringingly Reaffirmed To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir-My attention has just been called to the editorial in your great paper of March 12, concerning myself, in which you indicate that my being "heart and soul in favor of a league of nations" is a change of heart since the signing of what you are pleased to call the "Lodge round robin."

I hope it may not be unwelcome to you to allow me to correct the inference which you have thus inadvertently made. There was never at any time anything but a cordial desire for a league of nations in the hearts of the great majority of the signers of the so-called "round robin." The purpose was not to hinder or destroy a league of nations but, on the other hand; was intended to advance and make possible a league of nations which would be acceptable to the American people. It was the only opportunity to indicate clearly that certain features of the proposed constitution of the league of nations were impossible and required amendment. Since then, every man who has spoken with any degree of authority upon the question has frankly admitted the necessity of amendment. Mr. Taft has so declared himself; Mr. Bryan suggests a number of vital amendments; Mr. Lowell, in his debate with Senator Lodge, definitely commits himself to amendments, and this was precisely the attitude of the Senate.

The reasons that require a league of nations that in its operation may lessen the chances of future war are many and great. It is equally important, as we said in onnection with The Hague convention in 1907, to again clearly and in unmistakable terms provide in any covenant to which we are a party that nothing therein shall "be onstrued to imply a relinquishment by inited States of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions."

This is not an amendment either technical in character or captious in spirit. It is abso itely fundamental.
Should Mexico, which now owns lower Call-fornia, with its potential naval bases and its wide stretch of territory, sell to Japan (and it must be admitted that Mexixco would rather like the money and Japan would ather like the territory) what would follow under the proposed league of nations as it

Section ten of the proposed constitution of the league would require every one of the high contracting parties to preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity of Japan in its newly acquired pos-

Japan has as much right to buy from Mexico lower California as we had to buy the Islands from Denmark, except for the Monroe Doctrine, which stands in the way and under which this nation in any such contemplated purchase would make it clear to both Mexico (the vendor) and Japan (the vendee) that under our traditional policy we could not permit Japan to acquire terriory upon this hemisphere,

For a hundred years, the world has acquiesced in this traditional principle which has been interwoven in our history, and we annot and will not depart from it now. The English press are publishing, not as a mat-ter of speculation, but as a statement of fact, articles, of which the following from he Yorkshire Post, published at Leeds, is an

"Mr. Wilson has definitely abandoned the Monroe Doctrine. It is admitted that unless the Monroe Doctrine is finally abandoned by the United States, the for-mation of a league of nations is impos-sible. It would be ridiculous to attempt

The need, therefore, of writing into the proposed constitution, not by mere infer-ence or interlineary interpretation, but by a positive ringing declaration and reaffirma-tion our undoubted position with regard to the Monroe Doctrine is vitally essential. Believe me, with great respect. Very truly yours, SELDEN P. SPENCER. Washington, March 26.

(Mr. Spencer, a Republican, was elected last fall to the Senate from Missouri to succeed Senator. Stone.)

Emil P. Albrecht Writes to Members of Board of Education Favoring Courses

IN SCHOOLS URGED

Strong advocacy of universal military training for the youth of America is embodied in communications sent by Emil P. Albrecht, president of the Philadelphia Bourse, to members of the Board of Education and Prof. R. T. Shaw, in charge of the student cadets' corps at the West Philadelphia High School for Boys.

Mr. Afbrecht cites what he believes to be the many advantages derived by boys and young men from such training, and says that its worth is soon demonstrated when they enter business life. At a public hearing to be held in Harrisburg. Tuesday, on the Daix bill providing for military and health training in certain public schools, and in colleges and universities receiving state timuncial aid. Mr. Al brecht's letter will be read in support of the To Edward Wolf, Dimner Beeber and

Simon Gratz, members of the Roard of Ed. ucation, the president of the Bourse wrote

"I have given considerable thought to the suggestions made that a course in military training in the high schools for boys should bject with scholastic credit.

"The idea appeals to me very strongly

From personal observation over a period of years from 1889 to 1914 of the advantages derived from such training in countries such as France and Germany particularly. I have been a warm advocate of universal r training for young men. I advocate this training for young men. I advocate this not simply to train men for possible military service and to perform those duties which are necessarily part of the obligations of citizenship to assist in the common defense if necessary, but also and principally because of the great importance of such train young men when they come to take up busi-ness, commercial or professional life."

MAQUARRE SEXTET MAKES ITS DEBUT

New Organization Gives Fine Concert Before Chamber Music Association at the Bellevue

The Maquarre Sextet made its debut yes terday afternoon at a special meeting of the Chamber Music Association at the Bellevue-Stratford and demonstrated its right to be classed as one of the best chamber music organizations of the country. The concert they gave was one of the most enjoyable and varied of any yet given by the association,

The sextet is composed of Andre Maquarre, flute; Frederick Cook, first viclin; Alexander Zenker, second violin; Harry F. Grover, viola; Victor de Gomez, cello, and Anton Torello, contrabass, Ali are members of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

The concert opened with the B flat symphony of Haydn arranged by the composer for strings and flutes. Then came the Volkman Serenade in D minor for strings alone, Mr. de Comes when the North Comes and the composition of the Comes when the composition when th Mr. de Gomez playing the cello obligate part. Next was the seldom-played screttade of Beethoven for flute, violin and viola, and the program ended with a sextet for flute and strings by Heinrich Hofmann.

The organization displayed a perfection of ensemble that is almost unbelievable when the short time that it has been in existence is taken into consideration. The tone quality was good throughout, the balance almost perfect while the short are received. ify was good throughout, the balance almost perfect, while the rhythms were clearly defined but not overaccentuated, and the templ were correct and in perfect keeping with the moods of the various movements. The sextet showed unmistakably the results of many long and hard rehearsals.

In the Volkman serenade Mr. de Gomez, in the obligate cells part, played with great beauty of tone, elegance of phrasing and a musicianly and sympathetic interpretation.

musicianly and sympathetic interpretation He was deservedly recalled several times at the close of the number. The other parts which are more than mere accompaniment, were discreetly and skillfully played by Measra, Cook, Zenker, Grover and Torello. The Beethoven Trio, or serenade, as the composer entitles it, was played by Mr. Maquarre, Mr. Cook and Mr. Grover. Lacking a bass part, the work is delightful in its charm and in the grace and lightness of its texture. It was beautifully played by all three, and in-cidentally the unwouled prominence of the viola part showed Mr. Grover to be an unusually fine player, with an excellent tone good technique and accurate rhythmic

The Hoffman Sexict proved to be a fine composition. Written in strict form, musi-cianly in its workmanship, with an abun-dance of attractive if not lighly original thematic material, the work will bear re-peating. The scherze, while somewhat Men-delscoping is debsolinish, is especially good, being one of the most effective inovements of the concert. Liker all the other numbers, it was finely played and received with every evidence of enjoyment by the large audience,

The success of the concert should establish the Magnarre Sextet among the permanent organizations of the city, and the Chamber Music Association is to be congratulated for having brought out so excellent an ensemble budy. The sextet is strong in every part, and in none more than in the contrabuse. Anton Torello again demonstrated that he is one of the greatest masters of the instrument in the country. His tone was heautifully rich, but soft, and he did what few bass players can do, namely, did what few base players can do, namely play in the real chamber music style, with faultiess rhythm and a high degree of musi cal intelligence and feeling.
