SOUTHERN SUN GREETS MACKS

Warm Weather for A's in First Practice of 1919 Season

14 PITCHERS REPORT

They're off (

C. Mack wiped the cobwebs from his eyes and looked over his squad of fourteen pitchers and three catchers. They were the advance guard of the 1919 season in the first practice of the year at Shibe Park. The sun shone brilliantly on Shibe lawn and overhead a clear sky looked down on the ball players, the battery candidates for the 1919 A's. C. Mack was happy.

The first day of spring practice is the North was a success. Better wearher could not have greeted Mack in the South than was on tap for the A's.

There was no real hurling at the Shibe home this morning, due mainly to the cautioning of the tail tutor. The men took things comparatively easy and confined their practice to limbering up. The drill started at 10.30 and continued for an hour and a half.

From now on two practices will be staged daily. The first will begin at 10:30 a. m. and the second at 1:30. Each drill will last ninety minutes.

The following exhibited their ability before the lean leader:

McAvoy and Berger.

Mack was prepared for rain. If the well-known J. Pluvius should decide to tosa a few drops on our town during this northern training period, there will be no halt in the drilling of the battery candidates, although it will stop the prac tice of the other candidates if it should come after next Monday. In case of rain, Mack intends to have his men throw baseballs about on the upper

Maxwell to Write Who's Who in Major League Training Camps

With the departure of the teams for the South the 1919 baseball season has officially started. The great national game is awakening from its three-year war period of hibernation, and the result will be history's greatest revival of sports.

There is unusual interest in baseball, and the fans are eager for news, not only of the Phillies and Athletics, but the other big league clubs as well. The Evening Public Ledger, with its usual enterprise, will furnish its readers an expert review of every big league ball club in Florida, Georgia and North Carolina, and has sent Robert W. Maxwell, sports editor, to seven training camps,

He Will Visit

Tampa, Fla.-To size up the Boston Red Sox. Gainesville, Fla .- To run his eye over the New York Giants. Jacksonville, Fla.-To see the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Nationals.

Augusta, Ga .- To inspect the Washington Americans. Macon, Ga .- To pass Judgment on the Detroit Tigers. Columbus, Ga.-To study the Boston Braves. Charlotte, N. C .- To analyze the Phillies.

From each of these camps he will send a story, setting forth in his oungent, humorous stlye what the club in training has to offer in its chances for the 1919 pennant. Each article will carry the opinion of the manager, captain and trainer of the club as well as the views of Mr. Maxwell himself.

The first story will appear in the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER next Saturday, March 29, and will be continued daily. Order your copy from your newsdealer NOW
