HOTEL BANDITS ASSAULT CLERK: OVERLOOK HAUL

Rifle Petty Cash Drawer, But Miss $2000 in Compartment Nearby

The police began today a city-wide search for armed bandits who entered the Belgravia Hotel, 1811 Chestnut street, and robbed the cash drawer of $40 after beating the clerk into un-consciousness early yesterday morning. The thugs bound the clerk to a chair and then gagged him. They overlooked $2000 in a drawer.

John Cullen, the night clerk, says the men got close to him under pretext of finding out the time. Two of them covered him with revolvers, while the third jumped the counter separating him from the trio. The latter, who bore a big scar on his left cheek, demanded to know where the money was kept. After Cullen pointed out the petty cash drawer he was knocked unconscious by a violent blow behind the ear.

In their hurry the bandits made no effort to find any money other than that designated by Cullen. As a result they overlooked the larger amount in an ad-joining compartment. Cullen's pockets were searched and several dollars were

The clerk recovered consciousness in time to see the three men escaping through a rear window. They had bound and gagged him, however, and he could make no outcry until some time later when his assistant returned from his midnight supper and released him.

Philadelphia has been adopted by the man who "started" the British part of the world war.

Arthur J. Wilkensin, who claims to have placed the first shell in the gun which hurled Britain's first message of death into the ranks of the Germans at 2 a. m. on August 5, 1914, is the guest of the Benedict Service Club, 1919 Market street. What is more, he is going to find a job and stay here, now that he has been released from the British army.

Barely twenty-one years of age, Wil kensin has a record which exceeds the wildest dreams of the dime novelists for thrilling experiences. He lost his father by drowning when the vessel on which the elder Wilkensin served was tor-pedoed. His mother was killed in an air raid on London. He personally accounted for seven Germans and cap-tured forty; was wounded and gassed on the field of battle and shipwrecked at sea, finally to be picked up off the American shores. These are only a few of the incidents of his experiences.

Has Several Medals for Valor Wilkensin, who wears several medals for bravery, enlisted in the British army in 1912 from his home in Wales. He says the town's name has fifty-six letters in it and is pronounced somewhat like a whistle. The story of the service in the war follows in chronological order:

June 16, 1914—Stationed on H. M.
S. Lance.
August 7—Transferred to H. M. S.
Invincible.
August 28—Saw action at Helgoland, then transferred to Royal Naval Division in France.
September 2—Participated in the battle of the Marne, in which there were ninety-seven survived out of a division numbering 1200. After this battle he returned to the fleet for sea service.

December 7—Received a shrapnel wound in the naval battle at Falkland March 15, 1915—Went to France with the Hood Battalion. March 16—Transferred back to the Invincible.

May 21, 1916—Received another shrappel wound in the battle of Jutland, in which the Invincible was sunk, and he was one of eight survivors, this time out of 1081.

FARE PROTEST TONIGHT

Camden Count Citizens to Voice Objection to Zone System Camden County trolley riders will coice their protest against the "zonefare" plan of the Public Service Railway Company at a mass-meeting to be held tonight at the Camden Y. M. C. A., 566 Federal street. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Camden

Chamber of Commerce. Trolley riders within the present seven-cent fare limits declare the propo-sition to charge five cents for the first mile and one cent for each additional mile to be "unwarranted, unjust and an imposition on the riding public."

Those living beyond the present seven-cent fare limits, however, except those few communities where the second fare limit will be increased beyond fourteen cents, are showing very little interest in the meeting. These riders are contending that they will not have to bear the whole burden of the double-fare system as it now exists and that there will be a nore equitable distribution. They favor, nowever, an extension of the first zone.
