Nancy Wynne Talks of the Groome-Teague Wedding—Captain Hamilton Cheston Returns to America—Easter Dance to Be Social Affair

WELL, I suppose the Groome wedding party contingency arrived safe and sound in Augusta yesterday afternoon and the ushers' dinner took place all right, otherwise we probably would have heard that they had not arrived. Jack's two sisters, Martha and Agnes, went down with their mother, Mrs. John C. Groome. Martha, you remember, married Leland Thompson, and Leland, by the way, is to be one of Jack's ushers. Agnes, his other sister, who was named for her mother, married Dal Dixon.

It is too bad that Colonel Groome and Captain Dixon could not be here for the wedding. The bride is Gladys Teague, and Jack met her down in Augusta when he was there with the Twenty-eighth Division last year. He was transferred to the M. P. over in France, you know, and returned to this country a lieutenant about Christmas time.

He went down to Augusta shortly after that, and his engagement to Gladys was announced in January. The wedding will take place tomorrow at the Church of the Good Shepherd, down there, at noon. Gladys is going to have her sister as maid of honor and one of Jack's small nieces as a flower girl.

There are not to be any bridesmaids, but certainly the number of ushers makes up for any lack of bridesmaids, for there are to be twelve ushers and a best man. I asked Jack what Gladys was going to wear, and he said: "Oh, white something or other that is soft and shiny. You know what they all wear. Satin, isn't it?" I suppose the Harry Dissons will go from their southern plantation to Augusta to attend the wedding. Mrs. Disson, you know, was Edith Roberts, a sister of Mrs. Groome.

POOR Effingham Perot 2d! He was to have been married on Easter Monday, you know, to Helen Paist, of Norris-town, but he's been taken very ill; in fact, was taken ill at his fiancée's home, and the doctors say he will not be sufficiently recovered even by Easter to have the ceremony. In fact, they will not allow him to be moved from the Paist home. They have been engaged for two years, and it was announced in 1917, but they did not marry sooner on account of their youth. Even now Effingham is but twenty-one. The invitations were out and have had to be recalled until some indefinite date, and in the meantime he is being cared for in the Paist home. Let us hope he will very soon be well.

WE MAY be sure that Cornelia Leidy Cheston is a happy person these days. You remember she was married to Hammy Cheston just a few days before he had to sail for France, and it's been the greater part of two years since their wedding. Well, Captain Cheston came home yesterday on the Leviathan. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cheston and a first cousin of Captain Radcliffe Cheston, Jr., whose attractive young wife, Sydney Ellis, died just a few weeks ago. Did you know that Mrs. Cheston's sister Helen Ellis Payne's baby died since Mrs. Cheston? Sorrows never seem to come singly, do they?

I am glad that this return has no sorrow connected with it.

EVIDENTLY the women on the board of the Reed Street Neighborhood House mean to make the dance on Easter Thursday a big social affair. Certainly they have about everybody who is anybody (socially speaking) interested in the affair. It's a subscription dance, and it's to be held at the Ritz-Carlton. And it's to raise a fund for a clubhouse for men and boys in the neighborhood of Reed street, where there is a neighborhood house.

Mrs. Alexander Cox Yarnall is chairman of the committee that's getting it up, you know, and some of the patronesses are Mrs. Thomas G. Ashton, Mrs. Alexander Biddle, Mrs. Livingston Biddle, Mrs. Sidney Brock, Mrs. Bonsal Brooks, Mrs. William Clothier, Mrs. Benjamin F. Clyde, Mrs. Alexander Brinton Cox, Mrs. O. Eaton Cromwell, Mrs. Joe Du Barry, Mrs. George H. Earle, 3d, Mrs. Benjamin W. Frazier, Mrs. Robert E. Glendinning, Mrs. Charles C. Harrison, Mrs. Ledyard Heckscher, Mrs. W. Barklie Henry, Ellen Lathrop Hopkins, Mrs. Sidney W. Keith, Mrs. Francis A. Lewis, 3d, Mrs. Thomas McKean, Mrs. Norman MacLeod, Mrs. J. Willis Martin, Mrs. Paul Denckla Mills, Mrs. John Kearsley Mitchell, Mrs. Robert L. Montgomery, Mrs. Randal Morgan, Mrs. Edmundo B. Morris, Jr., Mrs. Charles A. Munn, Mrs. Richard T. Rowland, Mrs. Harold Sands, Mrs. R. Penn Smith, Jr., Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, Mrs. Edmund Thayer, Mrs. John B. Thayer, Jr., Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Mrs. Heckscher Wetherill, Mrs. Charlton Yarnall and so many others that I can't possibly get them all in here, but they're all people you know. Some bunch, don't you think?

The board of managers of the Neighborhood House includes Mrs. Charlton Yarnall, who is president; Mrs. Theodore Cramp, Mrs. Alexander B. Cox, Mrs. Eckley B. Cox, Mrs. Henry B. Cox, Mrs. Alexander J. Cassatt, Miss Faulkner, Miss Mae Gibson, Mrs. Lincoln Godfrey, Miss Hunter, Miss Lower, Miss Julia Sinker, Mrs. John M. Scott and Mrs. Alexander C. Yarnall.

CLUB MEMBERS BUYING TRIANGULAR DEBATE AGAINST PROHIBITION ON RAILROAD CONTROL

Golfers in Doubt Whether They Will Be Allowed Locker "Wet" Stocks

"To be or not to be?"

The question of whether members of the various country clubs will be allowed to maintain stores of liquor in their lockers after the abolition of the well-known "nineteenth hole" on July 1, when wartime prohibition goes into effect, is agitating those privileged to visit the nearby links and knock the elusive golf ball around the landscape.

The problem is exceedingly important, and not one steward in the country clubs will commit himself on the action considered at this particular club. The reason is plain.

What regular golfer will continue to pay dues at an organization where there is no possible chance for irrigation when other local clubs allow the storage of "25 per cent beer" and other stimulants?

The question of the sobriety of the individual golfer is not considered. The one of privilege is concerned, and all who don't freak out as they discuss some particularly named and other stimulants.

Club members are said to be buying freely of favorite beverages to store in the lockers should the clubs extend that privilege. Bills for these stores resemble bills for construction work on battleships, but the members are purchasing cheerfully in the hope of being allowed to camp around the lockers and imbibe as they discuss some particularly named and other stimulants.

New York clubs have already decided the question. Stewards there say that the tolerance of liquor in the lockers would be a violation of the spirit of the law and that it will not be allowed.

Among the stewards who refused to commit themselves today are those at the Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia Cricket Club, Stenton Country Club and the Torresdale Golf Club.

Carl G. Harrison, captain of the affirmative team, is a junior in the college, matriculated at the Frankford High School, where he was prominent in athletics and other activities. Since coming to the University he has taken an active part in debating, at the Frazier Debate Club, in the 1918-19 season, and was captain of one team last year. He is a senior in the Wharton School, and holds the office of president of the Christian Association, Paris is also a winner of the Frazier Debate Prize. Besides his debating activities, he is also a member of the Germantown Athletic Club, and is president of the debate council and also of Delta Sigma Rho.

Walter Selzer, matriculated from the Frankford High School, is a sophomore in the Wharton School.

S. M. Heilbron was a member of the Central High School debating team in his preparatory school days, and has kept up his interest in the forensic art since coming to the University, where he is now a junior in the college. Heilbron also did excellent work in the 1918 Mask and Wig production.

T. J. Murphy is the only freshman on the varsity team, and is the only first-year man that has won the Frazier Prize. DeLoach Murphy came to the University from the Commercial High School, Brooklyn, and entered the Wharton School.

CYNWYD WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

President of Browning Society Reads Appreciation of Joyce Kilmer at Meeting

Mrs. L. H. Dick, president of the Browning Society, spoke before the Woman's Club of Cynwyd on Wednesday morning on "An Appreciation of Joyce Kilmer, Soldier-poet." A sketch of the life of Mr. Kilmer at home and in France was interspersed and illustrated with his poems. His next to the last poem, "Rouge Bouquet," was read as the most radiantly beautiful of his verses. Mrs. Dick said that war would doubtless be the subject of poems for years to come and that it had been conceded that since the war more notable work had been produced by women than by men's ("Christian Standard").

GIRLS' TRADE SCHOOL FINDS PUPILS EAGER

Even Boys Show Interest in Talks Given Daily to Sixth, Seventh and Eighth Grades

"Say, can boys go to that school?" asked a boy who waited to hear one of the talks at the Girls' Trade School, Pine Street above Eleventh, given by Miss Muriel Brown each day to pupils of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the city.

"I know now I can't money that makes me rich," said a little girl after she learned the actual money advantage of training for a trade.

The purpose of the Girls' Trade School, which is under the Board of Education, is to give definite training for a definite trade, to show the worker how she is headed, what she is to expect in the trade she enters, and what she may demand. The talks are held in groups of girls and boys if they care to listen—who are contemplating leaving school for work. So interested have the girls been that Miss Brown is kept busy answering the eager and intelligent questions that the girls ask her concerning hours, costs, materials and the wages that may be expected by a trained worker.

"There are more opportunities for trained workers in Philadelphia than there are applicants," says Mrs. Nannie Belle July, principal of the school. "In millinery alone, this year, the aim of the Trade School is to teach as many trades as the city has employment for; and, as a matter of fact, the war has shown that there are few trades a woman cannot enter."

The employers themselves are much interested in the Trade School. We have been impounded by any number of trades to institute training courses. Some of the men have even offered to install the necessary machinery for teaching their particular trade, provided we do the teaching, and they will take all the trained workers we graduate.

Dressmaking, power sewing machine operating and millinery are now being taught, including design and academic training in industrial history, textiles, civics and business conduct. As demands arise, the school will enlarge its scope of trades, and may institute a two years' course which will take up the more advanced work in the trades and graduate trained experts.

The work is thoroughly practical and placement is guaranteed at the end of the year, with wages considerably in advance of those given to the beginner. In dressmaking, the Trade School girls start with three to five dollars a week more than the ordinary beginner receives.

Recently the girls at the school, who number about one hundred, have been asked to make up a list of student questions and the problems affecting the relations between the girls and the faculty. A room on the third floor of the school is being fitted up as a study room.

The Trade School is looking for people who want to give real tributes to soldiers by establishing scholarships to enable girls with talent to spend a year at the school. Any one who has a surplus of money, or who has those girls who live at remote distances from the school.

When the pupils enter the school they are first of all made to keep away from factories. Investigations in New York, however, have shown that factories are much better working places than private dressmaking establishments. The factories are usually above ground, well ventilated and have bright lighting, while many of the private dressmaking rooms are in cellars where it is dark and conditions, in general, are unwholesome.

The Trade School has had twenty-two graduates who have been placed in positions. Those in charge of the Trade School are Mrs. Judy; Miss Brown, in charge of educational guidance and placement; Mrs. Christine, in charge of dressmaking; Mrs. Mary Foley and Mrs. Elizabeth Gallagher, in charge of beginners; Mrs. Emma Welch and Miss Sarah Ford, instructors in machine work; Mrs. Ellen Delaplaine, academic and office work; and Miss Gwendolyn Harrison, instructor in art and design.

INDIVIDUAL TEACHING

NEEDED IN SCHOOLS

Few Children Profit From Mass Instruction and Quit Classes Too Early

Most school children are too individualistic to profit greatly from mass instruction and to appreciate the value of education. For these reasons many of them leave school here as soon as they get through the sixth grade.

This is the conclusion drawn by the White-Williams Foundation for Girls, in its 119th annual report, from the fact that in one year the Board of Education issued 7588 employment certificates to 5578 children in Philadelphia public schools.

Economic reasons also are often responsible for children quitting school too early, and for these the foundation is endeavoring to provide scholarships.

Five children had seven certificates each, showing that they had changed their work that number of times during the first year of employment. Sixteen changed their positions six times.

One boy holds a record of seven certificates in six months and no progress registered. Another had seven jobs in nineteen weeks.

The White-Williams Foundation, formerly the Magdalen Society, offered the help of its organization to the Bureau of Compulsory Education in order to solve the problems of employment and to guide the children into positions with a future.

It directed the work of investigating the home and school conditions of some of the 20,000 girls of fourteen and fifteen years of age attending the Philadelphia public schools, many of whom are anxious to quit school as soon as they complete the sixth grade.

Because most of the children who leave school at the end of the sixth grade are fitted for practical occupations, the foundation is anxious to keep the children in school until they are able to undertake work which will lead to advancement. The records show that of the 1233 who went into stores to work, 995 became messengers.

The foundation has found that it is necessary to teach the pupils below the sixth grade and this year it has extended its work to the fifth grade.

TO SELECT PROGRAM OF CONCERT BY VOTE

Penn University Students Balloting on Popularity of Musical Classics

A list of musical compositions from which the University of Pennsylvania students will choose by popular vote those to be given at the second concert to be given by the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Weightman Hall next Thursday evening has been announced by John Lovett, chairman of the Franklin Society committee, which is bringing Leopold Stokowski to the University for a second time.

The voting will continue up to Friday night and the balloting places will be the office of the Pennsylvania and the Franklin Society headquarters. The students' taste will be expressed in the vote and the concert will thus be one of the audience's own choosing.

The compositions are divided into three groups, and one choice is to be made from each of these groups. They are as follows: Symphonies: Tchaikovsky's "Pathétique," Rhapsody, "Symphony in E minor"; Schubert, "Unfinished"; Beethoven's "Eroica" Overture; Rimsky-Korsakov, "La Grande Pagine Russe" (Easter overture); Berlioz, overture, "Le Carnaval Romain"; Wagner, overture, "The Flying Dutchman"; Wagner, overture, "Prometheus"; Beethoven, overture, "Prometheus"; Tchaikovsky, "March a la Slay"; Chabrier, "Rhapsody"; Lalo, "Rhapsodie Norvegiene"; Lully, Suite from the opera.

Balancing of the program is all that Mr. Stokowski stipulates. It is planned to have a series of concerts on the University campus next year, and the scheme of student choice will probably be maintained if it works out satisfactorily on this occasion.

Discussion on League of Nations

The League of Nations will be discussed by prominent speakers tonight at the monthly meeting and speaker of the Business Science Club of Philadelphia at the Hotel Adelphi. There will be a reception and dinner at 6.45, and the addresses will be delivered at 8 o'clock.
