vening Bublic Tedger THE EVENING TELEGRAPH

PUBLIC LEDGER COMPANY CTRUS H. K. CURTIS, Pagainant ples H. Ludington, Vice President; John C. Becretary and Treasurer; Philip S. Ceilling, B. Williams, John J. Spurgeon, Directors.

EDITORIAL BOARD CTAUS H. K. CURTIN, Chairman GEN C. MARTIN ... General Business Manager Published daily at Pusite Larges Building, Independence Square, Philadelphia. Press Union Building
206 Metropolitan Tower
403 Ford Building
1008 Fullerton Building
1502 Tribune Building NEWS BUREAUS:

WARRINGTON BUREAU.

N. E. Cor. Pennsylvania Ave. and 14th St.
NEW YORK HUREAU.

London Times
London Times SUBSCRIPTION TERMS

SUBSCRIPTION TERMS
The Evening Public Length is served to suberithers in Philadelphia and surrounding towns at the rate of twelve [12] cents per week, payable to the carrier.
By mail to points outside of Philadelphia, in the United States, Canada, or United States posreasions, postage free, fifty [50] cents per month, iii [26] dollars per year, payable in advance,
To all foreign countries one ($1) dollar per month. Norion-Subscribers wishing address changed

BELL, 3000 WALNUT KEYSTONE, MAIN 3000

Ledger, independence Square, Philadelphia. Member of the Associated Press

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS is exclu olvely entitled to the use for republication of all news dispatches credited to it or not otherwise credited in this paper, and also the local news published therein.
All rights of republication of special dispatches herein are also reserved.

Philadelphia, Tuesday, April 8, 1919

WOMEN AND HOME RULE

WHEN people begin to talk in the churches on Sunday about the need of charter revision it is time that those who say no one is interested in the subject should look about them.

They may say that the meeting in the Universalist Church of the Restoration was "only a woman's gathering." addressed by women, but their memories cannot be so short that they have forgotten how the women of the city interfered in a mayoralty campaign a few years ago with disastrous effect to the plans of the politicians.

The address by Mrs. Nichols, president of the New Century Club, was an admirable summary of the arguments for the revision plan of the citizens' committee. It is as difficult for a woman to understand why a city of about two million people should have to go to the state capital for permission to do things as for her to understand why it should be necessary for a householder in West Philade phia to ask a householder in Germantown for permission to change the heating system of his house from hot air to steam. Home rule is what every woman believes in, both for her own home and for her own city.

The women are demanding an improvement in local conditions and they will make their influence felt before the business is ended.

MAKING READING EASY

HUMAN eyes are too valuable to be imperiled. Thus preach the advocates of safety first in factory and workshop. The fact is indisputable.

The EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER has subscribed heartily to this and many other precepts of the newer ideas in scientific efficiency. We believe in practicing what we preach.

All of which is preliminary to an expression of thanks to the many discernmg and observant readers who were new type dress in which the paper appeaced for the first time yesterday We appreciate the quickness with which our readers appreciated the change and said so in pleasant messages of encouraging

The larger, clearer type in which all solid text will be printed hereafter was adopted after careful study and experiment. We are convinced that it will meet unanimous approval by our readers since it will facilitate reading under all changing conditions of lighting-in street cars, on trains, in the home orbow that the outdoor season is nearon the front porch.

Somebody with a turn for figures has declared the American people rapidly are becoming a nation half-blind in the physicals sense, however far-seeing we may be mentally, and the Evening Pub-LIC LEDGER intends to do its best in the future to avoid responsibility for fostering eye-strain.

APRIL AUGURIES

ALMOST any festivities in April can readily be made commemorative if the history book is consulted. The choice of the nineteenth day of this month for the opening of the Victory Loan campaign may not, for instance, have been nsciously made with regard to the one nundred and forty-fourth anniversary of the battle of Lexington, yet there is fruitful patriotic stimulus in the thought. Philadelphia's picturesque mummers, who will turn out in much greater force than on last New Year's Day, have an excellent opportunity to revive Paul Revere. His resuscitation for pageant rposes would be entirely in keeping th the spirit of the occasion.

Other anniversaries abound. nish War began in April and the American civil conflict opened and closed that month. Shakespeare was born April 23 and he and his great conorary, Cervantes, died on the same in 1616. The United States enthe titanic world conflict on April here is nothing sluggish about April. on the weather, with its assortment of hine and rain, is apt to be lively.

There is, then, full precedent for anition in the loan drive. It is historiy seasonable. So also would be a decisive peace drive in Paris. In est of slarms the calendar at least the optimist.

LONEL LOSES AN AUDIENCE retirement of Henry Vi. Watterm all connection with the Courier-Journal is directly nations. "Marse Henry's" pen is still brilliant, but it is old. It writes phrases that are as archaic today as would be any brief in support of the exploded southern doctrine of state rights.

The situation is illuminating not so much for its exhibition of the truism that wise men grow old as for its emphasis on the heartening that the vital spirit of any period is ever young. Ideas march when even distinguished men stand still. The real reason why Colonel Watterson will not continue to write for the paper in which for more than half a century he addressed thousands of persons is that the majority of his readers do not care to hear him when he opposes a worldague covenant.

Objections to details of the pact abound, but antipathy to its general principle is exceedingly faint.

THE GREAT AMERICAN SNOB. AND U. S. PEACE POLICIES

Misunderstanding of This Country's Aims Unusually Conspicuous Among

"Unfinished Americans" SNOBBERY isn't peculiar to any country. But unquestionably it is a mental habit that recently has been revealing disagreeable aspects in the United States.

Among snobs nothing, whether it be an accent of speech or a pair of trousers or a theory of art or politics, is considered fit unless it happens to be imported. The snob of old could be conveniently disregarded. He-or she, for women snobs are the most hopeless-usually evolved as an overdressed globe trotter with a habit of servility in the presence of foreigners.

The snob in America has expanded his field. He has become a critic of government since the war ended and a voice in the affairs of nations. He is doing a great deal to confuse public opinion in a time when clear thinking is a fundamental obligation of decent citizenship. It is questionable whether a streak of the snob may not be largely responsible for the incredible abuse which certain erudite gentlemen who like to pose as publicists have been heaping upon the President. Certainly they would not think of speaking in a similar tone of Premier Lloyd George or M. Clemenceau. But as critics of our foreign policy in the present crisis they are less astounding in view of the present attitude of mind of the rank and file of Unfinished Americans.

"What?" cries your snob. "Say unkind things about our dear France? Question the motives of our brave Allies? America was saved by the British fleet! What man can be so ungracious as to utter an ungenerous word and now that our soldiers are in Gerabout England?"

There are few men in journalism or in politics who, being essentially pro-American in their utterances and their point of view, have not had outraged inquiries such as these huried at them fre-

So long as valor and sacrifice are honored and so long as men esteem limitless courage and devotion no one in America will ever say unkind things or question the motives of the French and the British and the other peoples who fought with us. But definitions should be clear at a remarking, "Let's talk in English." enough to congratulate us upon the time like this. Most Americans when they think affectionately of France think of the French of the Somme and the Marne, of the patient millions in the background. Similarly they think of the British of the North Sea and the fighting armies; of the men and women who stayed at home and carried on through years of unutterable stress with an unconquerable spirit. But your snob isn't discriminating. If he were he wouldn't be a snob. And he is the last man alive able to realize that the financial and imperialistic cliques who have done most to confuse the affairs of the Paris conference and invite the criticism of honest observers are seldom representative of the masses who won the war.

If there is once duty which presses more heavily than any other upon Mr. Wilson and the American delegates and every American at home whose desire is to see a permanent peace, it is to recognize invariably the point at which the just interests of the nations are abandoned and sinister intrigue begins at Paris. Snobs are usually ignorant of history and its lessons. They do not know, for example, that the tirades of criticism aimed at the Americans in Paris and read with avidity through cable dispatches to this country emanate as a usual thing from a newspaper frankly edited in the interests of a group which wishes to upset the republic and establish a king in Paris.

Nor can they be aware that the one newspaper in London which has most consistently opposed the American peace policy is the cherished organ of the sleety toryism that is doing its utmost blindly to run the British empire on the rocks. They read these criticisms and take new heart. The incurable snob, who persists in drawing rooms and smokers, and now and then in journalism and letters and politics in the United States, will always find one unforgivable fault in Mr. Wilson as a statesman and diplomatist. The President happens to be an American.

Snobdom in America endured its greatest agony when the President first sailed for Paris. There were editors without number who blushed violently in print for their naive President and their native land and prayed (in ink) that we should not be made to appear too ridiculous by a stubborn novice with a headlong diplomatic method.

What would they say in England? What would the French think? Here indeed was a lamentable side of traditional America!

Ladies and gentlemen who are not yet management concerning the league of determined to endure the catastrophe and live it down in the long years ahead.

When Mr. Wilson and the other delegates firmly crowded some of the shiftier statesmen of Europe and continued to crowd them in order that they might not violate solemn pledges made to this nation and to the rest of civilized mankind in the most perilous days of the war, all snobdom in the United States endured actual pain. How crude it all was! How raw and unconventional!

When the plain people of Europe rose and did homage and applauded the sort of Americanism which our peace delegation represents the snobs on this side of the world didn't understand the phenomenon. They never will understand it. They do not understand the sort of peace that America is endeavoring to make, and they wouldn't like it if they did understand it. The American theory provides justice and consideration for inferior and helpless people. The snob can find no world complete that isn't filled with people whom he can patronize and offend for his own pleasure.

Arts and letters, politics and literature and even the pulpits of the United States have their sprinkling of snobs. These are the Americans who have come through the last few years without perceiving the light. The magnificence of our aims means nothing to them. They do not know that we have done our utmost not only to win the war but to save the world from the utter ruin invited by the men and women of their worship. They do not know that we have actually supported rational philosophy as a novelty in the science of government.

Perhaps the snob is himself helpless. He inherits his mind. He is made as he is and in the final analysis may be blameless, and even pitiful. In heaven, doubtless, he will lift a nimble eyebrow and assume a cool and superior manner, and do his utmost to make it appear that he doesn't reside there-that he has just dropped in for a short stay during his

THE COMMONEST LANGUAGE

TVERY indolent American will indorse the proposition of Arthur Elliot Sproul, made before the Poor Richard Club, that English be adopted as the international language.

It is much easier to ask foreigners to learn to speak English than for Americans to get a speaking knowledge of a foreign language. Mr. Sproul has been in Russia, where he discovered that Americans equipped with only one language had difficulty in making themselves understood. Every American soldier in France would have been delighted if he could have talked to the French in English, many they are regretting that the Germans speak German.

The way to solve the language problem is for Americans to learn other languages. Even our diplomatists go abroad without a knowledge of the country to which they are accredited.

The late Curtis Guild, that distinguished linguist of Boston, apologized to the Czar for his inability to speak Russian when he was sent to St. Petersburg as the American ambassador, but he offered to talk with Nicholas in French or Spanish or Italian or German. The Czar, however, solved the problem by President Wilson himself knows so little French that he has to speak to the Frenchmen through an interpreter at the Peace Conference. But the Chinese, Japanese, French, German and Italian diplomatic representatives to this country and to England speak English with fluency.

Yet, after all, English is the prevailing language of the western world and is spoken by more than 150,000,000 people. German comes next with 120,000,000. It is followed in this order by Russian, French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese. Persons who can understand English can be found in every corner of the globe, so that even the indolent Americans, who will not take the trouble to learn another language, can find some one who can understand them.

NATIONAL RIVALRY AT ITS BEST

AN ECHO from a distant era rever-berates through the current rumor that the Olympic games will be revived next year. Few more cheerful sounds have been heard since the whistles blew on November 11.

A revival of the great international contests would mean that the world had really returned to civilization and it was fit once more to express national rivalries in terms neither military nor naval. Fears that a league of nations will make patriotism obsolete would quickly vanish if the series of brilliant athletic carnivals is resumed.

There was a time, be it remembered. when Italy thought more of Dorando than she did of Fiume and when Greece exulted almost as proudly over her victory in the Marathon race as she did more than two millenniums ago over the original battle.

A sane and normal reconstruction of affairs on this planet will be appreciably stimulated by the revival of competitions involving skill and brawn by the sort of clean and wholesome contests on which a really healthy civilization thrives.

Another lively race for the America's cup should contribute to the recovery of the world's sense of proportion, so maimed and distorted by the war. The Olympic games would be an additional potent factor. Antwerp is said to be most favorably considered as the seat of the carnival in 1920. There could be genuine pride in a peace pointing to such a reassuring accomplishment.

No. Ermyntrude, dry wines are not permissible under the "dry" law.

A five-year-old boy found a loaded revolver in his house and killed his seven-year-old brother with it. And yet parents still keep loaded weapons where children can set them.

THE SCHUYLKILL PLAN CONDEMNED BY PENNELL

The Artist Says in a Peppery Letter That Broad Street and the Parkway Now Serve All Practical Purposes

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger Sir-I am glad you find me still sprightly. I fear many wish in this town I was or would be less so. It would be to their advantage. It would benefit their schemes and games which it has been my pleasure to expose since my return to my native city.

Now for a concrete example. I do not imagine for a moment there would be any engineering difficulties involved in making a parkway or embankment on both banks of the Schuylkill from League Island and Fort Missie to Fairmount Park. But have these art park people ever tried to walk-it is the only way-on either side of the river

Have they even studied a map of the river? I advise your readers to invest fifteen cents in the Rand-McNally map, as the art people should have done before they brought forth their scheme. Have they ever been to Chicago and navigated the river of that name?

I have done both. No, there would be no engineering difficulties whatever. But the Schuylkill river, like the Chicago river. is a winding river of nooks. From the mouth of the Schuylkill to Callowhill street bridge have been built during the last fifty years endless plants of endless sorts-oil, paint, steel, steam, gas, two railroads, one on each bank—they can easily by capable engineers be wiped out and the Bartram Garden and part of the University demolished to carry out the plans by intelligent the necomplishment of such a scheme half prosperity, half the commerce of the city, would vanish too, and the uncarned increment of some members of the Fair-mount Park Association, their families and relations would disappear also. I am not sure the latter would be a serious loss to the city, as I have no doubt they have canned enough to survive. But the city would perish. There is now, though these art people don't know it, an avenue called Broad street which leads from League Island straight to the Parkway, and that leads to

If they studied the map, as they have not, it is evident, done, they would discover that even though endless bridges were built to cut off curves, even though the river were turned round, the distance would be twice at least as long as coming up Broad street or coming to it by the numerous arteries that now lead to it. Would any one of our wideawake citizens use such a method of getting anywhere that would compel them o go half a square out of their way?

And what would they see if the roads were built? The back yards of Philadelphia all the way on the east side and on west the ruined Bartrams and the Botanic Garden and the back side of the Commercial Museum. This is the kind of rot Philadelphia is fed up on. This is the kind of rot one has to listen to day after day from art business men.

We have a splendid avenue in Broad street. We can have a splendid Parkway. If it is wanted it can be lined with splendid memorials — a part of a splendid memorial, in which we shall have our part, stretching from Portland, Me .. * to Portland, Ore., over which the commerce and the pleasure of the world will pass-a highway which would bring millions annually to the That is possible, practical.

The Fairmount Park Art Association's scheme is ridiculous, imbecilic, and would cost the city the price, in order to buy out the owners on each side and their rights, about as much as the war debt or the income tax and no one would use it. And yet this report of business men, art men and lawyers in the association issued and editorially discussed is a verdict on the men and women who run this city-or want to. Mr. Vare is quite right. We want practical people.

And are the waterworks to be ruined, too —one of the last memorials of the once beautiful Philadelphia? What a town, what a people! Yours. J. PENNELL. what a people! Yours, Philadelphia, April 5.

P. S.-Valley Forge! Oh, shades of George Washington! He would have pre-ferred Conshohocken and Ivy Rock. They are real and vital. Valley Forge is whitened sepulchre, a desecrated shrine and even now the highway lending to it Philadelphia don't know it!

The Trifle Needed to needed to make that Make Perfection sedition bill perfect is one which would prohibit under penalties any utterance or writing tending to arouse discontent with the city government. It already forbids utterances tending to create dissatisfaction with the state or national government. With the change suggested the measure would be perfectly ridiculous.

Congress managed to Essentials Versus worry along with the President in France, Nonessentials but the State Legisla ture is taking a recess because the Governor has had to leave Harrisburg for his health. Which shows how much more nearly essential Mr. Sproul is thought to be than Mr. Wilson. Or doesn't it?

A. E. Sproul suggests Would American Be the selection of Eng-Understood? lish as a world language and a key to peace, and right away he sows the powerful eeds of dispute. Would he have folk saying "tram" for "street car." "sweetments" "candy," "lift" for "elevator"?

For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the importers of Chinese labor are

Judging by the government in Moscow, the real champion prohibitionists are th

Speaking of international languages, money talks in a tongue that every one Luckily for the boys fretting to come home, hope springs eternal through the gloom in Brest.

Brazil denies that there was a volcanic eruption at Pernambuco. Perhaps it was a misprint for Paris.

The warm weather yesterday and the baseball scores in the afternoon papers made one believe that spring is already here. The neutral zone proposed by General Smuts to now mollified Hungary seems to have been the temperate zone as well.

Lloyd George says in effect that the buzz saw of the Peace Conference is run-ning so fast that the careless observer hinks it hasn't any teeth.

The proposed conversion of the Traylor shippard into a road-machinery plant augments that, although American machiners was brilliantly exemplified in our steel vessels, it comparisonly was "not in the word."

"SOMETHING NO FROST CAN TOUCH!"

THE CHAFFING DISH

and a supplication of the supplication of the

- Carlott Hall the Land Control of the Control of t

A Printer's Love Song THE first time that I met my wife I simply could not keep from hinting had not seen in all my life Such an example of fine printing.

Her type is not some bold-face font, Set solid. Nay! And I will say out That no typographer could want To see a better-balanced lay-out,

A nice proportion of white space There is for brown eyes to look large in And not a feature on her face Comes anywhere too near the margin.

Her nose, in fine ITALIC CAPS. Too lovely to describe by penpoint: Her mouth is set in pearl perhaps. Her chin is comely Caslon ten-point.

Each car, a pink parenthesis, Makes my heart come to heel and stay so: For such typography as this Is easy reading: well, I'll say so!

Of all typefounders I have met Her father's best, in my opinion: She is my NONPAREIL, you bet. And I, in lower case, her minion!

Walt Whitman Gossip WE HAD the pleasure of a call from David H. Wright, the lawyer, who knew Walt Whitman and is thoroughly in accord with our hope that Philadelphia will do something to celebrate the centennial of its greatest poet. Mr. Wright was a schoolboy when first met Walt, in 1876. They happened to be standing side by side at the gate of the Camden ferry, waiting for a boat. David, who was on his way home to Riverton, had his books under his arm and the bearded poet asked him, with a twinkle, "What is a noun?" "The name of a person, place or thing," replied the boy promptly. They had a friendly chat on the ferry and David was much impressed by the dignified bearing of the philosopher. When he got home he told his parents in excitement that he had met an immensel wealthy man, who would probably leave him a million dollars in his will. "Instead of which," says Mr. Wright, "he left me a number of ideas which are always interest-ALITTLE later the boy and the poet met hand poaching an egg and the boy expressed polite sympathy. He told Walt about a lit tle play that had been given out in Riverton in which four of Shakespeare's beroines were represented-Juliet. Ophelia, Rosalind and Katherine. Walt was much interested and a cordial friendship grew up between them. Young Wright used to visit the lit-tle house on Mickle street where Walt lived in placid simplicity, surrounded by his papers and books. They used to have tea together under the wisteria vine in the back yard. "Walt was always calm, dignified yard clean." says Mr. Wright. "I never yard. "Walt was always calm and clean," says Mr. Wright. heard him swear or use a word that might not have been uttered in Friends' meeting. For seven years I had charge of the Quak Mission at Beach and Fairmount, and Walt used to enjoy hearing the details of my work there among the drunks. I re-member his giving me his stage ticket to hear Sir Edwin Arnold speak in Camden. I was over at Mickle street just after Vic tor Hugo's death, when Walt had Hugo's picture pasted up in the window with a little wreath around it. Walt was a great admirer of Hugo. 'He was huge like his name,' he said. 'Huge like the ocean.'

The other evening I heard Ilya Tolstoi speak, and it seems to me that he and Bishop Leighton Coleman, of Delaware, and Walt were three of a kind—big, elemental

ONE of my dreams." says Mr. Wright, of a little twenty-five-cent volume of 'Leaves of Grass' that could be used in the public schools. It's a great pity that the editions of Walt's poems cost so much. Ninety cents or $1.25 is too much for a book of poetry, anyway. Over in Eng. I have seen nice little paper-bound edit. of our American poets seiling on the neutannis for four cents rach. That's regulate people know Thilann as the better than we do. Those to whom Walt's poems would mean most very often can't afford to pay a dollar for a book.' MR. WRIGHT is happy in having been able to be of considerable service to the young French newspaperman who trans-lated the French edition of "Leaves of Grass." He met him in Paris some years ago when the Frenchman was working on the translation and was able to explain many of Walt's colloquial Americanisms which puzzled the foreigner greatly in his search for the corresponding French word.

Mr. Wright's own plan for celebrating the centennial of his boyhood friend, shows how well he has absorbed Walt's kindly, all-embracing philosophy. He has just written to Warden McKenty, at the Eastern Peni tentiary, offering to give a reading of Walt's poems to the prisoners on May 31, Walt's 100th birthday. It seems to us that this would have pleased Walt more than any pian we have heard.

We suggested a year ago that a pleasant memorial for Walt Whitman would be to have one of the Camden ferry boats named after him. Another idea has occurred to us. Name a hotel for him. This is a practice that is already begun. The leading hotel at Haunibal, Mo., is the Mark Twain and Greensboro, N. C., is now creeting the Hotel O. Henry.

Our Military Correspondence

We need not assume that all the American soldiers still abroad are perishing of nostalgia, grinding their teeth in hapless yearning to get home. If Johnny Rans the author of "Poems About God." wi shops (some of the poems were first printed in this department), is any criterion, many of our warriors are having an exceedingly satisfactory time as students at French universities.

Lieutenant Rausom has returned from duty with the army of occupation and writes thus from the University of Nancy:

"I'm in clover now. I'm a student in a good French university, dabbling in letters, reading and writing and doing nothing of a military complexion. Today, for example, it was too snowy for my idea of a March day and I've stayed by the fire in an exceptionally easy chair, what time I was not discussing a particularly fine French menu for my luncheon. This is almost my normal life again if the geography of the case could be shifted a little.

John incloses in his letter a poem enigmatic that we cannot resist printing it. He gives it no title, but we have called it Why Veal is Expensive

Minerva had no pride of pedigree.

And so they shot her, bent of a broken leg, Without a grief; then they looked butcher ingly

On the unprovided babe she left to beg. But who came coursing, like the tall corn slanting.

Beautiful, proud and furious with anger?
It was the farmer's slender daughter, pant-

And pitiful to orphans in their danger. You flew your ribbon from his yellow head.

Managed his bottle over many a meal, Now he is big and tramps the flowerbed, And still nobody dares pronounce him yeal. But I make little marvel of this calf.

Being not the whole of history, not half.

LIEUTENANT JOHN C. RANSOM, A. P. O. 915, A. E. F. Desk Mottoes "Have but little to do, and do it thyself."

-William Penn. It was also William Pens, we are per suaded, who originated a familiar tag of slang, remarking in his "Fruits of Soli-tude," Tempt no man: lest thou full for it,

One of the correspondents who are busy describing the kaiser by hearsay (we would like to describe him by hearse) cables that

'His parchmentlike skin hangs on his brunken frame.''

This is undoubtedly due to his prolonged iteracy labors.

THE LINDENS

THE lindens step so gently up the hill. Like leisured, stately dames of long Waving their fan-leaved branches to They gossip of the rushes and the rill. Whether the breeze has paid the rose's

For perfumes which he lavished on a And if the linnet in the locust tree

Trills love songs to the pink or daffodil.

And when the silver moon slips slowly by To keep her tryst with some awaiting cloud Their green procession heaves an envious

And yows she isn't maidenly or proud.

And when it grows too dark to spy or peep The lindens softly yawn and go to sleep.

-Charlotte Becker, in New York Sun. Wooden ships may not be popular, but when the soldiers return from France look out for a demand for wooden shoes. The German leaders are still trying to shift responsibility for the kaiser's fall.

There is no secret about it on this side of the ocean. Uncle Sam admits that he did it. Yesterday was the anniversary of the day when Greece ceased to bend her knee in suppliance to the Turk, and the local Greeks appropriately made merry over the independence of their native land. Of course the mothers and sisters and fathers and brothers of the men in the Iron Division should have places of honor in the grand stand when the soldiers come march-What Do You Know?

QUIZ 1. Who was Jean Jaures?

2. Sunday was the tenth anniversary of the most notable event in the history of modern exploration. What was it? 3. What is poi?

4. What is a "thunder-sheet"? 5. Where are the Society Islands?

6. What is the correct pronunciation of Saucho Panza, the celebrated comic character in Cervantes's "Don Quixote"?

7. A native of Virginia was one of the blest commanders on the Union side during the Civil War. Who was he?

Who wrote "And still the wonder grew that one small head could carry all he 9. How many prime ministers did Great Britain have during the course of the war? 10. Who was Sir William Crookes?

Answers to Yesterday's Quiz

1. The Philippine Islands were hamed after King Philip II, of Spain. 2. Basalt is a dark green or brownish rock, often in columnar strata. 3. Nescient; ignorant of, agnostic.

4. Bulwer-Lytton wrote "What Will He Do With It?" 5. The "Three Musketeers" of Dumas's romance were Athos, Porthos and 6. Taoism is the religious doctrine of Lactse, the ancient Chinese philosopher.

7. Stephen Pichon is the present French foreign minister. S. Comfit; sweetmeat, sugar-plum.

Consistory; Senate composed of pope and cardinals; Lutheran clerical board; court of presbyters.

10. The largest city in Porto Rico after Sau nan is Mayaguez. The first town in opulation, although not the capital, is never, Ponce,