

CAPT. J. H. POTTER HOME HERE SOON

Army Officers Landing in New York Also Include Chester Men

MORE NURSES ALSO BACK

Captain John H. Potter, who went to Europe in January, 1918, as a lieutenant in charge of construction work, has returned to the United States and is expected in his home, 228 South Broad street, in a few days.

He was aboard the Mauretania, which brought back 2700 repatriated Americans and Admiral Sims and his staff. Captain Potter, who is a cotton merchant and member of the Racquet Club, was commissioned a captain in February of last year while stationed near Winchester, England. He went to France a few months later and in August was assigned as an aide to Major General John Biddle, who commanded all of the troops in the British Isles. He took charge of consolidating the welfare activities and organized the baseball, boxing and football contests and supervised entertainments in various camps.

While in England Captain Potter met the King and Queen, frequently came in contact with the Prince of Wales and attended the wedding of Prince and Princess. He was relieved of his duties by Lieutenant Alexander Biddle, also of this city.

Chester Corporal Decorated

Also among the returning soldiers was Corporal E. N. MacDonell, who was awarded the military cross for valor. He left his home in Chester to join Sir Douglas Haig's 51st Highland Division, the famous Black Watch, in September, 1914. He was wounded three times, but always returned to his unit and continued to fight until the armistice went into effect. He would answer any questions except those pertaining to how he won the medal and these he evaded by simply stating that "every fellow was entitled to one, and, any way, it was a" considered anything to get a citation."

Glendon's former assistant fire chief, now Altracraftsman W. Capstick, arrived. He volunteered in January, 1918, and was assigned to the 8888 Central Postal Directory, where he served as an observer. In 1917 the machine in which he was a passenger made bad landing and he received two broken ribs and a fracture of the skull, which put an end to his flying career.

Lieutenant Claude E. Fox, returning on the Mauretania, enlisted in the British army in August, 1917, after he had been rejected by the local draft board in Philadelphia near his home, 4526 Richmond street. He had an exciting voyage across the Atlantic, the vessel on which he was a passenger twice being attacked by U-boats.

Lieutenant Pierce B. C. Burgwine, formerly associated with the Taylor Wharton Street Company, returned after a year and a half service with the Royal Flying Corps patrolling the waters in the vicinity of Dover.

No one on the transport was more anxious to get back to his home than Harry Derbyshire, who has a wife and a two-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, awaiting him at his home, 2316 Margaretta street.

Fifteen Minutes at Front

Only fifteen minutes in the front lines was the experience of Richard B. Fox, of 6113 Germantown Road, Philadelphia. He became a member of the Royal Field Artillery in November, 1917, and on December 6 of that year he was in the barracks at Halifax when the terrific explosion occurred as a result of the crash of two munitions vessels. He was injured at that time by falling glass and timber, but was only confined to the hospital a short time before he sailed for France.

Lieutenant L. P. Sharpless, of West Chester, who was with the 20th Infantry Corps also returned. He saw no action. He was in France on a business trip in November, 1917, when he decided to join the American forces and attached to Base Hospital No. 9, where American and British soldiers were treated. The base was situated at Rouen and had accommodations for 1200 men.

B. Z. Lippincott Funeral Thursday

Funeral services for Benjamin Z. Lippincott, seventy-four years old, Mount Holly, N. J., will take place Thursday in the home of his son, Oliver C. Lippincott, president of the Cumberland Sand Company, 6087 Lincoln drive, Germantown. Benjamin Lippincott came of the old Quaker family of Lippincott. Until a few years ago, when he retired, he had been directing the Lippincott farm on Rancocas creek. Church services will be conducted in the Church of the Epiphany, Germantown avenue and Carpenter lanes.

Jury Annuls $8000 Damages

After awarding $8000 damages to Mrs. William Bishop, of Clementon, N. J., for an alleged injury resulting from a collision between Mrs. Bishop's automobile and a trolley car of the Public Service Railway Corporation last January, a jury before Judge Wood, of the Camden Circuit Court, agreed to take back the damages today. The corporation presented two witnesses at the trial, which began three days ago, who testified that the Bishop car was not struck by a trolley, but turned into a ditch. The car was demolished and Mrs. Bishop injured.

SHOP WINDOWS IN GALA DRESS GLOW IN EASTER COLORS

Pretty Gowns and Gay Millinery Fill Milady's Eye, While Candy Bunnies and Rainbow-Tinted Eggs Stir Yearning of Children

BONNETS, bunnies, chickens, eggs and the glad riot of spring flowers all proclaim that Easter is less than two weeks off.

The children are being kept mighty busy. Those whose heads are doomed are being fed up on the greatest delicacies that appeal to "fowl folk." And the hen that lays the colored eggs in the candy factory is busier than she has been for many years. Her vacation days, when sugar was scarce, are over, and now she is making up for lost time. Never have the shops displayed a more inviting array of egg-like sweetness. There are the chocolate ones with the osseous filling and there are creamy ones of myriad colors that melt in the mouth. From tiniest bird size to prettily large eggs that probably would have astounded some prehistoric folk, they present their prettiest sides for the benefit of longing children.

And the army isn't content to study eggs, either. There are hollow, painted, board eggs of rainbow hues, that may serve as gift boxes for saintly handkerchiefs, collars, flowers or other Easter gifts.

Eggs of Ancient Laying These are the old-fashioned, edible eggs that the growers have been hoarding in readiness for the extra demand these last days. The children have already started buying supplies of dyes and mixtures that can be transferred to the egg shells.

Rabbits, too, are surprisingly prominent in the Easter parade in the shop windows. Just why Brier Rabbit should have a part in the celebration few have ever stopped to figure out. But there is a legend that says the idea originated in Germany, when that was a land of poetry and holy things, rather than of bloodshed and crime. It had long been the custom to hide the colored eggs where children could find them. One Easter, just as Gretchen approached the spot where her own particular treasures were hidden, a rabbit jumped from the nest and ran across the fields. Nobody could ever make Gretchen believe the rabbit didn't leave the beautiful colored eggs. She told other children about it, and so the story came down through the years.

There is another more learned and occult reason for the association of the rabbit with Easter, but that has nothing to do with this story.

Shops in Mad Whirl Somebody forgot to hang out the "Do your shopping early" sign for Easter, consequently the shops are one mad whirl. Almost as brilliant as the Easter eggs and flowers are the new gowns and hats that fair ladies are getting in readiness for the eventful Sunday.

Even the book shops are crowded and the dainty colored invites, cards of greeting and decorations are going out to brighten thousands of homes that haven't been so gay and happy since the war started. For this will be an Easter of thanksgiving and in many homes there will be returned heroes to take part in the rejoicing.

CAMDEN WILL FETE RETURNING ADMIRAL Wilson, Navy Veteran, to Get City-Wide Greeting While Visiting Mother

When Vice Admiral Henry T. Wilson visits the home of his mother, Mrs. H. B. Wilson, at 345 Mount Vernon street, Camden, on Thursday, April 17, virtually the entire city will be out to greet him.

At the meeting today of the victory jubilee memorial committee, of which Mayor Ellis, of Camden, is chairman, arrangements were made for a 200-voice band to play in the afternoon at the Mohican Club at Morris station, just outside of Camden, and for a public reception in the evening at the Third Regiment Armory, Haddon avenue and Myrtle street. An automobile parade led by the New Jersey state militia reserves will precede the dinner.

Rear Admiral C. F. Hughes, commander of the Philadelphia Navy Yard at League Island, and Lieutenant Commander Francis W. Hoffman, former commander of the Camden battalion of the New Jersey national militia, will be the two other guests of honor at the dinner. At the evening reception a chorus of several hundred school children will occupy the galleries and sing for Admiral Wilson.

The jubilee committee this morning also decided upon a big celebration for Camden on the day when the peace treaty is actually signed.

Rail Pilot Becomes "Sky Pilot"

D. J. Fant, of Atlanta, Ga., the "railway evangelist," who preaches the gospel on off days when he is not running his locomotive on the Southern Railway, will begin a ten-day evangelistic campaign this afternoon in Mount Helton Tabernacle, Twentieth street above Spring Garden. Fant's sermon topics include "His Last Run," "An Emergency Run," "The Man That Lost His Axe," "The Way Home and How to Find It" and "On the Limited to the Great Terminal."

Motorist Who Hit Woman Held

Samuel Koplin, Eighth and South streets, was given a hearing at the Seventh and Carpenter streets police station today on the charge of reckless driving, and was held under $200 bail.

Koplin was driving an automobile yesterday when he struck Mrs. Caroline Cappola, of 1008 South Eleventh street, at Eleventh and Kinbold streets. The woman was taken to the Howard Hospital.

Motorist Held When Child is Hurt

Robert McCallum, seventeen years old, 3021 West Fletcher street, a chauffeur, was held under $500 bail today charged with having struck fifteen-year-old Thomas Burleigh, of 3502 Jane street, at Agouty avenue and Lincolnton pike, yesterday afternoon. Burleigh is in the Jewish Hospital with a fractured skull and a broken leg.

"STICK BY SOLDIERS," URGES WAR CHIEF

Need of Camp Workers Greater Than When Battle Raged, Says Baker

VOLUNTEERS ARE ASKED

Soldiers and sailors, lacking the inspiration and excitement of actual warfare, have greater need now for community service work than before the armistice was signed, according to the war camp community service.

The national headquarters of the service is sending out a country-wide appeal for community service volunteers to "stick to their posts."

"The need for care of the soldier," the organization points out, "is greater than ever because it must follow him through demobilization back into civilian life. Already the problem of locating employment opportunities calls for many more volunteers than are now available. Moreover, the cities are themselves calling for community service and this call must be answered."

The national organization makes public a letter written by Secretary of War Baker. The letter follows:

"It has given me considerable concern to learn that numbers of the volunteer workers assisting the war camp community service and other organizations engaged in welfare work are not only relaxing their efforts, but in some instances, are discontinuing the work altogether.

"In calling this to your attention permit me to express to you the sincere appreciation of the War Department of the work of the war camp community service. The commission on training camp activities has made a careful survey of your activities, and its reports are most gratifying. A noteworthy feature of the work of the war camp community service organizations and deserving of the highest commendation is the assistance rendered by thousands of volunteer workers, both men and women, who give their services, prompted only by the desire to serve their country, and the men who gave the service they wished to give but could not.

"A feeling prevails that there is no longer a necessity for continuing this volunteer work, and to correct this impression is the task I am suggesting to you. I want you to bring home the realization that this work is not finished, and that the War Department desires it to continue with renewed effort and spirit if it is within their power to do so without too great a personal sacrifice.

"It is not possible for me to convey to you the great value of this work to the morale of the men in and out of the service. Our soldiers will not forget the generous work of those who met them at all hours with smiles, with hot coffee and warm food, who have opened their homes, clubs, hotels, provided quarters and have done a thousand other things for the comfort of men in uniform."

HUMANE OFFICIAL PLEADS FOR DOGS

Work of Animals in the War Should Save Them From Visecision, He Says

"Needless suffering of dogs for questionable scientific experiment" was developed today by Robert H. Logan, president of the Anti-Visecision Society, in a statement regarding a bill recently introduced in the House to prevent experiments being made on living dogs.

Mr. Logan said that, considering the work done in the war by the dogs, "the faithfulness, the cheery comradeship and the keen intelligence displayed, it seems the least we can do to show our appreciation is to prevent further experiments embodying useless and unnecessary suffering."

Dr. W. W. Keen, chief exponent of the visecision theory, declined today to comment on the measure. The bill has been introduced by Representative Mehring. It makes it a misdemeanor "for any person to experiment or operate in any manner whatsoever upon any living dog for any purpose other than the healing or curing of said dog or of physical ailments."

PROTEST UNVEILING OF DOUBTFUL ART

Pastorius Monument, With Germania Rampant, Still Blushes Unseen

BOARDED UP 2 YEARS AGO

The Pastorius monument in Vernon Park, Germantown, which has been boarded up since April, 1917, may be the topic of discussion at the meeting of the directors of the Site and Relic Society of Germantown at their meeting on April 25. Talk of unveiling the monument has caused a dispute that may result in Secretary of War Baker acting as mediator.

American citizens of German extraction caused the statue to be erected in honor of Francis Daniel Pastorius, the first farmer of Germantown.

Opponents of the unveiling declare that the statue is not strictly a work of art to Pastorius, but a memorial to the Germans who came to America, and that it is an insidious form of pan-German propaganda.

They object to the statue of Germania in her militaristic glory dominating the monument and throwing Pastorius into a subordinate position. Among those opposing the unveiling are William J. Campbell, a director of the Site and Relic Society, and C. G. Nicholson. The latter believes it time to destroy the statue and erect another.

John B. Mayer, chairman of the unveiling committee, declared, on the other hand, that nothing but purely patriotic motives actuated the erection of the statue, and that he is waiting for peace to be signed to unveil the monument.

The statue was designed by Albert Jaegers, a New York sculptor. It stands about thirty feet high and the most prominent feature is an effigy of Germania surmounting the whole. The artistic merit of the figures has never been questioned.

The unveiling was originally planned for May 28, 1917, but on the advice of Secretary Baker, requested by the committee, the ceremonies were postponed and the monument boarded up.

Personalities filed today were as follows: Ellen A. Harding, $48.34; William A. Wiedersheim, $21,248.81; Mary Rohrheimer, $16,255.

HEIR MUSTN'T BUY CAR

Troublesome Luxury, Man Warns Cousin in Will

Automobiles are troublesome luxuries, according to the will of Beal M. Gruber, of 1318 North Redfield street, who admonishes his cousin, Earl, not to purchase any with his share of a $4000 bequest. The document was offered for probate before Register of Wills Sheehan today.

After asserting that it would be against his wishes should the cousin purchase an automobile, the will states: "They are troublesome and they are costly. Earl, experience is the best teacher."

Requests of $200 each are left to the Spruce Street Baptist Church and to the Philadelphia Branch of the National Baptist Bible Institute.

The wills of Henry E. Sommerville, 2007 Green street, and Julius Christian, 1920 Race street, each leaving $5000 to relatives, also were probated today.

Personalities filed today were as follows: Ellen A. Harding, $48.34; William A. Wiedersheim, $21,248.81; Mary Rohrheimer, $16,255.
