

BLUE LAW FIGHT OVER LOAN MOVIE

Sunday Night Screen Shows by Campaigners Give Mr. Rorke Hope

MUTCHLER TO FIGHT

Believed People Will Support Educational Films—May Be Entering Wedge

Announcement that the Victory Loan committee will show a moving picture on Sunday evenings in connection with the last war loan drive, has aroused both factions of the recent fight against Sunday blue laws.

Representative William Rorke, sponsor of the "open Sunday bill," which was recently defeated at Harrisburg, declared today that the fight for educational entertainments on Sundays has not been lost, and that further steps will be taken toward getting entertainment on Sundays, should the showing of the Victory Loan committee picture meet with the approval of the people.

The Rev. Dr. T. T. Mutchler, chairman of the League of Nations League to Enforce Peace, declines to believe the showing of the picture will be organized and intimated that his organization and the churches would strongly oppose the proposal.

Permit Granted

A permit to show the picture has been obtained from the Department of Public Safety by Frank W. Buhler, chairman of the moving picture committee of the Victory Loan committee.

No admission will be charged so that the project may not run contrary to the city ordinance, which prohibits exhibition or entertainment for paid admission on Sunday.

"Sunday movies in support of the Victory Liberty Loan will demonstrate whether educational entertainment on the Sabbath is desired by Philadelphians," said Mr. Rorke today when told of the plans of the loan committee.

"Such a showing as this is just what the city needs," he continued. "It will offer a definite example to the people that such legislation as the 'Open Sunday Bill' did not seek to break down any sacred observance on the Sabbath. Sunday movies and entertainments of the right kind are essential in upholding the morale of the community as the church itself. I feel confident that had this picture been shown before the vote upon the 'Open Bill' was taken, the public would have demanded that it be passed.

"The fight along this line has not been lost yet. Should the presentation of this picture on Sunday evenings, for the benefit of the Victory Loan, meet with the approval of the people, further steps will be taken toward getting respectable entertainment for the working man on the Sabbath. They are soldiers of peace, and it is important to furnish them with the means of getting needed recreation as it was to divert the minds of our soldiers from the horrors of war."

Opposed by Churches

Doctor Mutchler refused to believe that such a picture might be presented when interviewed last night, and intimated that it would be strongly opposed by the churches and his supporters, if it was sanctioned by the authorities.

"The Christian men showed what they thought of the 'open Sunday' idea of Mr. Rorke when he introduced his measure brought up at Harrisburg very recently," he said. "Why does he insist upon renewing a losing fight?

"All during the war the churches have loyally supported the administration in the prosecution of the war, and they have liberally subscribed in all of the loans and other financial measures. They certainly deserve some recognition, and such a move as the showing of moving pictures on Sunday would be a direct slap in the face to them. It would be a very great insult to the religious organizations in this city and state."

"I have made no plans as yet to combat this latest menace for I do not believe that it will be carried out, but I am very much opposed to it."

The purpose of the "Price of Peace," according to Mr. Buhler, is to give the public a graphic account of the American part in the war. Secrets of the State Department will be divulged for the first time, and activities of the government, both at home and abroad, will be shown, bringing the gigantic history of the struggle up to date.

Mr. Buhler asserts that the picture is one of the most spectacular ever produced, and shows such notable figures, he says, as President Wilson, delegates to the Paris Peace Conference, former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury Glass, General Pershing, Admiral Sims and the boys of the American expeditionary forces.

Rotary Club and Many Other Bodies Join Movement to Cure Civic Ills

The Rotary Club will enter the fight for a "better Philadelphia" when it meets on Tuesday evening. Members announced today that better schools, clean streets, clean police and clean government is not politics but common sense, and that the club has decided to swing into line with the other organizations in the coming campaign. Schools will be tackled first.

KOREAN AGENT HERE TOLD OF MASSACRES

Japanese Soldiers Butcher Thousand and Torture Women, Says Cablegram

New massacres of Koreans, in which more than a thousand people—women among them—were killed in Seoul in a three-hour fight with the Japanese, are reported in a cablegram received by Dr. Syngman Rhee, secretary of state of the Korean provisional government, now in Philadelphia.

The message, originally from Shanghai, sent to delegates of different powers at the Peace Conference reads as follows:

"Japanese began massacring Koreans. More than thousand innocent people killed in Seoul during three-hour fight with 28 Japanese troops and civilians have been ordered to shoot, beat, bayonet Koreans indiscriminately throughout Korea. Thousands have been killed. Schools, churches and homes of leaders destroyed. Women, especially of leaders' families, stripped and beaten before crowds, the imprisoned being tortured. Doctors are forbidden to care for the wounded. We ask foreign Red Cross for help urgently. We are determined to fight for freedom until last Korean is killed. Entire population in dire distress. You people of humanity are implored to help us. Send our delegate Kim Kyu-sic, now in Paris."

WILL START BRIDGE SOON

Spanning of Delaware to Start This Summer, Says Commissioner

Samuel T. French, a member of the New Jersey bridge and tunnel commission, announced today he is confident the bridge over the Delaware river, between Camden and Philadelphia, will be begun early this summer.

Mr. French called attention to the passage of a bill by the New Jersey Legislature providing $500,000 for preliminary work of construction. He expects the Pennsylvania Legislature to pass a similar bill to cover its share of the building operations on the Philadelphia side.

"Things are rapidly shaping themselves," said Mr. French, "to where the project will no longer be confined to discussion, but work is actually about to be started."

SEEK BOY'S GUARDIAN

Naval Hospital Treats Child Found Unconscious From Diphtheria

Efforts are being made to locate the relatives or guardian of eleven-year-old Leslie Davis, of this city, who is recovering from diphtheria in the naval hospital at Annapolis.

According to a letter received by Detective Charles Schwan, of the missing bureau, from Captain James P. Field, in charge of the hospital, the boy was found unconscious outside of the institution on April 2 suffering from the disease. He said his parents were dead and a Mrs. Beard, of Tenth and Chestnut streets, was his guardian. The police have been unable to locate the woman. The boy, Captain Field's letter says, has been following troops around the various encampments.

CLEAR FIRE MYSTERY

West Chester Plant Blaze Caused by Spontaneous Combustion

Spontaneous combustion caused the fire at the plant of the Sharples Sewerage Company and Dairy Specialty Works, at West Chester.

This announcement was made today by R. B. Weiler, factory manager, following the report that the blaze was of spontaneous origin. The fire was discovered last night at five o'clock by P. M. Sharples, head of the firm, had announced the impending removal of the factory from West Chester because of the antagonistic attitude of the borough council and the citizens.

The fire started, according to Mr. Weiler, among some bales of excelsior, stored in the end of the shipping room. The damage, which was mostly done by water, does not exceed $3000.

530,000 TEACHERS CALLED UNTRAINED

Schoolmen's Convention Hears 30,000 Never Went Beyond Eighth Grade

CRISIS IS NOW FACED

"Thirty thousand school teachers in the United States have never gone beyond the eighth grade in the training for their profession; 200,000 have had less than a high school education and 300,000 have gone no further than high school."

This statement was made by Dr. Hugh S. Magill, field secretary of the National Education Association, at today's session of the schoolmen's week at the University of Pennsylvania, held at the starting of these figures, he continued, Doctor Magill, "when we consider that the average salary paid to teachers in this country last year was only $630, we must conclude that in only the richest countries in the world, the public schools are being held down to a low standard and the future of the teaching profession gravely imperiled by inadequate salaries."

"A careful study of the situation throughout the country shows that good teachers may be secured and kept in the service when the people are willing to pay them reasonably good salaries, and that poor schools are almost invariably the result of inadequate salaries. The situation is particularly serious in rural communities, where the salaries of teachers are appallingly inadequate."

Low Salaries Lower Profession

"The outlook for the future is a matter of serious concern. Low salary standards are driving many good teachers out of the profession, and the ranks are being filled with the immature, inexperienced and untrained. Normal schools and teacher training schools, which should come out of our supply of teachers for the future, have fallen off alarmingly in attendance.

"The problems which I have called your attention are public problems and those who shape the public schools do not belong to educators. They belong to the people. If they are good the public gets the benefit and, if they are poor, the public, particularly the rising generation, must suffer. Those problems should be considered in relation to the welfare of the more than 22,000,000 children in America who must get their training and equipment for life from the public schools."

Confident of Public Support

"I believe that it is the particular duty of educators to bring these questions to public attention. If the situation is fully understood and appreciated by the people we may expect that they will bring about a satisfactory solution."

Indorsement of the movement for an increase in teachers' salaries and approval of Governor Sproul's plan to select a man of highest qualifications for the post of state superintendent of public instruction was expressed in resolutions at the close of the convention.

Approval of the teachers' salary increase was expressed in the following resolution:

"That we indorse the movement for an increase in teachers' salaries in the state as now embodied in the Woodruff bill and that we urge the support of the bill on all state legislatures. We further believe that the school men must urge that higher standards of teaching and teacher training should follow this increase."

In the resolution expressing approval of the Governor's plan for a good state superintendent of public instruction, the association urged that the one selected should have untrammelled power of administration and as soon as possible arrange plans for a helpful survey of the schools of the state.

BACKWARD CHILDREN AIDED BY SCIENCE

Penn Psychologist Gives View of Why Public Schools Fail

EXAMPLES ARE PRESENTED

Several children who failed to make any progress in the public schools showed considerable development today when presented before the schoolmen's week conference in the psychological clinic of Dr. Lightner Witmer at the University of Pennsylvania.

Among the children presented at the clinic was Sarah, a ten-year-old girl who had been promoted to the fourth grade in a public school, despite the fact that she could not read or write.

Dr. Frank Twitmyer, assistant to Dr. Witmer, said the child had probably been advanced because she had an affectionate disposition or was well liked.

Plan of Doctor Witmer

Doctor Witmer deplored the fact that the public schools compelled uneducable children to go to school until they were sixteen years old and to take training which did them no good.

"Many children who go to school are not worth educating under the present system because they are congenitally illiterate," said Dr. Witmer. "Such children should have special attention."

Speaking of older children, he said it was absolutely fatal to compel a boy of fourteen or sixteen to take the studies as children of younger age. He said there was urgent need of a trade school for such children.

Schoolmen Amazed by Results

Educators from all parts of the state who are attending the schoolmen's week in the University of Pennsylvania were amazed at the results obtained by the methods employed by Doctor Witmer and his assistants.

Dr. Gladys G. Ida, who is in charge of social services for the clinic, and Miss Alice Jones, an assistant, said they were in Doctor Witmer's description of one of the cases:

"A thirteen-year-old boy bent over a table trying to read a selection in the first reader. His brows were drawn together and his mouth puckered as he struggled with the complexities of a-l-e-y-e and o-s-y-e. The next time he found these words he spelled them out again, and so it happened a third time. First-grade reading was no joke to S.—. At arithmetic S.— did much better, for he had acquired most of the combinations in his mind long over, but spelling—S.— couldn't spell. He had no reason for supposing that one letter was preferable to another in any given instance. S.— was not good in school."

Training of No Value

"S.— is graded 2A. He has repeated at different times all of the classes below that grade, and one or two above, in an effort to get a running start. His school life has been strenuous, but not valuable to him, and S.— is now 'going on' fourteen. It is time he was doing better. S.— thinks so himself, and is eager to quit school and go to work. He has lost all interest in things academic. At the time he was asked in school whether he would like to go to S.—. out. No reason was found for his inability to read. He plans work well. He does tests well, and the metal equipment he uses in his social life seems to be fully adequate for his environment. In attempting to teach S.—, it was found that he lacked the very foundations of reading. Drill in the use of phonics and insistence on accuracy in reading, definite care in the study of his words for spelling and language have improved S.— work so much that there seems no doubt that he could have been taught to read and spell properly years ago. Now that he is almost ready to leave school, about the best that can be expected is that he may learn to read well enough to read the daily paper and to follow instructions. S.— has received here not given him as yet the most necessary tools to be used either in the acquisition of knowledge or as means to the end that he may be self-supporting."

DIES AFTER HER HERO SON

Grief Said to Have Killed Mother of Slain Joseph Heathcote

Grief over the death of her son, who was killed in France last July, is said to have been the cause of the death of Mrs. Mary A. Heathcote, 1333 Wharton street, last night.

The only son, Joseph Heathcote, twenty years old, enlisted in September, 1917, and went overseas with Company M, 110th Infantry. He was reported missing and announcement of his death came shortly after. Funeral services will be held at St. Rita's Catholic church, Broad and Ellsworth streets, Tuesday afternoon in Holy Cross cemetery.

SAYS WILSON AIM IS WORLD RULE

Chief Executive Expects to Be League of Nations Head, Declares Senator Watson

"President Wilson expects to become the first president of the world." United States Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, today gave that opinion as his "confident belief," and said it explains President Wilson's actions abroad and the executive's great desire for the league of nations project as now shaped.

Increases Living Cost

At the Manufacturers' Club this morning, Senator Watson reviewed the railroad situation, said Congress should be reconvened at once, declared the shipment of foodstuffs to Germany is keeping up the cost of living in this country, and stated that not 25 percent of the American people favor the league of nations sponsored by President Wilson.

"The reason Mr. Wilson did not convene Congress before he sailed for France was that he didn't want an open forum for the discussion of the league of nations while he was abroad discussing 'it' himself.

"The President is over there without any authority from Congress or the people of the United States. The constitution merely commissions the President to make peace. There is nothing in the constitution that authorizes him to organize a league of nations.

Demands Immediate Peace

"Peace should be made with Germany right away, then the President should come home and leave the league of nations until later. He should get our boys home, and let Europe do its own police work," said Senator Watson.

"Our boys in Russia, for example, should be withdrawn. The Russian situation is unthinkable. The Allies should either take their hands off or send a big force, large enough to cope with the situation.

"The Indiana senator was emphatic in his statement that Congress should be convened immediately. He said the railroad situation demands it.
