C. the very latest fashion; and incidentally, unless you happen to look like Mrs. Widener, that is, as petite and dainty and pretty. don't try to copy it, for it just suits her; but I don't think it would suit everybody. But then that is the beauty of it. bodice is made entirely of a sort of black chantilly lace and is perfectly plain in front. oming straight up and across from shoulder to shoulder in a perfectly straight line, so that you would scarcely think it an evening dress until you see the back; and lo and behold, it has a very low-necked V back!

The frock has long, tight-fitting sleeves, rather parrow skirt and a streamer sash. It's wonderfully becoming to her.

It opens with a sort of prologue or mono logue in verse by one Benjamin Franklin. the comments on the things that have happened to his University since it was a school at Nigth and Market streets until the present day. Mr. and Mrs. Corlies Morgan are staying at the Greenbrier and Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Griscom. The Griscoms are always at the Casino for tea and bridge after Mr. Griscom's round of golf. I hear that Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker has gone there, too, now, with her brother, Lieutenant F. R. Cruger, and Mrs. Cruger. You know Mrs. Cruger was with Mrs. Wanamaker at her house, the Priscilla Cottage, at Palm Beach, until Mrs. Wanamaker de cided to give up housekeeping and went to the Poinciana for the rest of the winter. Mrs. Cruger went on up to New York to shand, who was coming back from France, and now they are all three at the Greenbrier.

LITTLE Barbara, aged five, sees no difference whatever in class; so they be good and kind is all she asks. The other day she electrified her family. It happened thus: The side wall of the cellar was being whitewashed by one who was sad indeed in ap-pearance. His complexion was not of the cleanest ever viewed and he was macked deep with smallpox pits. Besides this, he had a wooden leg. Be that as it may, he knew how to whitewash and that was the point. Barbara, however, did not think it ended there. And when she was called to lunch she said to her mother: "Poor George, he's hurt his leg, it's so sore, and it hurts bim. I asked him in to lunch with us, but he said his was coming to him."

PHILHARMONIC GIVES ITS SECOND CONCERT

Philadelphia Violinist Has a Hearing, as Well as Good Local Orchestral Composition

The Philharmonic Society of Philadelphia gave its second Sunday evening symphony concert before a large audience at the Shubert Theatre last evening. The orchestra consisted of about seventy musicians, under the direction of Walter Pfeiffer. Sara Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Young at her home on Sumae street, Wissahickon, in honor of Miss Mildred Holt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Z. Holt, also of Wissahickon, whose marriage to Mr. William Walter will take place this spring, the guests included Miss Ethel Cope, Miss Alma Cope, Miss Gladys Howe, Miss Eleanor Erwin Miss Minnie Schrader, Miss Hazel Birkmire, Miss Dorothy Mecke, Miss Eleanor Bromley, Miss Florence Whiteside, Miss Daisy Lindauer, Miss M. C. Young, Mrs. Albert Smith, Mrs. Dorothy Adams, Mrs. Godwin Stevenson, Mrs. Frank Haimbach, Mrs. De Witt Holt and Mrs. Winfield De Hayen. In this concert the organization started o carry out some of the things in which it can be of the greatest possible value to the music of the city, for it gave a talented oung Philadelphia soloist the opportunity of being heard, and also presented a com position of one of the representative musicians of the city.

The concert opened with the Vorspiel from the "Meistersinger," played by the or-chestra with good effect. This was followed by the E mingr (New World) Symphony of Dyorak, of which Mr. Pfeiffer gave a vigorous reading. The work was creditably per, formed when the very limited amount of rehearsale is taken into consideration.

The soloist of the concert was William Greenberg, a young violinist of this city, who appeared in Sarasate's well-known "Gypsy Airs." There is not much in an interpretative way that can be done with this thor oughly violinistic composition, as it is writ ten for the instrument in a purely solo capacity, and the main requirement in its presentation is a sure and fluent technique. This Mr. Greenberg has and, in addition, played with a poise rare in so young and (with orchestral accompaniment) inexperienced a player. During the finale he broke a string, but quickly exchanged violins with the concertmaster. Mr. Witzemann, and carried the piece to a successful conclusion, in spite of the fact that he was playing on a strange instrument. He was heartily encored and responded by playing the closing movement of the Sarasate number again. with equal success.

The original composition presented was the introduction and scene from "Aucassin and Nicolette," by Mr. Hedda Van den Beemt, a member of the Philadelphia Orchestra and one of the leading musicians of the city. The music in based upon a medieval pastoral, but there is none of the Oriental color which is so frequently used in sim ilar works and generally with a forced of feet. Mr. Van den Beemt has wisely re frained from this doubtful experiment, and his work as a whole follows the classic

It is melodious, well orchestrated, especial ly in the use of the more unusual instru ments, such as the English horn, bass clari net, et cetera, and carries out with fidelity the spirit of the story which was printed on the program. The composition was written some years ago and was first given at the concert which the Manuscript Music Society gave in conjunction with the Philadelphia Orchestra. The following season Mr Stokowski put in on the program of the regalar symphony concerts. It was well per formed last evening under the baton of the composer, who conducted with skill and re-

The concert closed with the brilliant and tuneful "William Tell" overture of Rossini, of which Mr. Pfeiffer gave another vigorous reading, taking the closing movement at terrific tempo, which some of the members of the orchestra maintained with some dif

ENGLISH COLLECTION AT ART ACADEMY

"Pictorial Record of War," From Overseas, Will Be Opened Next Wednesday

"England's Pictorial Record of the War," reached Philadelphia at the Academy of the Fine Arts next Wednesday.

The pictures, made by noted artists under the auspices of the British Ministry of Information, include portraits of famous generals and scenes at the front and among the munitions workers of England, and have at tracted much attention during their tour of the United States. There are oils, water-colors, etchings and drawings, and they came here from the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh.

The pictures will occupy all of the northern galleries and will remain in this city for one month. The exhibition will be open to the public without charge. A private view will be held on Easter Monday evening and several addresses will be given during the

Twenty-four artists are represented, among them Sir William Orpen, Sir John Lavery, James McBey and Muirhead Bone, who were officially appointed war painters. There are also C. R. W. Nevinson, who enlisted in 1914 as a motor transport driver was invalided after two years and went again to the front as an artist; Frank Brangwyn, Rothenstein, Spencer Pryne and Augustus John

EMERGENCY AID GIRLS CONTINUE WAR DUTIES

Aides Should Not Be Criticized for Wearing Uniforms, Mrs. Norman MacLeod Points Out

A defense of the right of girls in the Emergency Aid corps and the motor service corps to continue to wear their uniforms is contained in the report of Mrs. Nor-man MacLeod of the work done by these organizations during the last month.

"If persons who have taken occasion to criticize the aides for wearing their uniforms should take the trouble to investi-gate, they would discover these girls with their many duties should not discard their uniforms," said Mrs. MacLeod. ganizations are conducted under strict military regulations." Scores of charitable associations are be ing helped by the organizations, and the majority of the girls are now preparing to take an active part in the fifth Victory Loan campaign, it is pointed out.

During the last month, according to Mrs MacLeod's report, the motor corps visited the homes of 200 persons who had suffered from infantile paralysis, in order to make investigations for the infantile paralysis committee of the Emergency Aid. Twice weekly some of the members use their automobiles to convey wounded officers from Mrs. Richard Cadwalader's Convalescent Home, at Camp Hill, to theatres in Phila delphia. They also have taken a number of wounded officers and enlisted men from railroad stations to hospitals.

Seven crippled children are taken three times weekly by these volunteer drivers to the Polyclinic Hospital for treatment, while eight others are conveyed to the Univer-sity Huspital. MISS ELEANOR STEWART CARSON

THE READER'S VIEWPOINT Letters to the Editor on Topics of General Interest

Mr. Pennell Admonishes Mr. Miller

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger. Sir-Might I call Mr. Leslie W. Miller's attention to the fact that if his association s working on n map, scheme or plan drawn up in 1905, that even in this city there have been some changes in the last fifteen years especially in the last four, and they might be taken into account.

Mr. Miller cannot and does not attempt to contradict a single one of my statements. I have the interest of this city - my city as much at heart as he has and I would ad ise him and his art association to confine their energies to Fairmount Park, which in endless ways is sadly in need of practical supervision, care and protection,

If the art association, for example, would emove last year's leaves, repair the walks, take down the disgraceful electric light poles, which is said to be the largest collection of they would show they had some appreciation contemporary art brought from overseas, has of usefulness and their action would make park more presentable. After that they might see it would be well to remove some of the statues and memorials they have put up or allowed to be put up. But they are an art body and such matters do not concern

I have just learned that the old water works are to be improved. If the art association would clean out the rubbish and filth all about them and flush and gather up the planks in the basins which are an evesore to any one with any artistic sense. hey would prove that the Fairmount Park Art Association had more right to its name. JOSEPH PENNELL. Philadelphia, April 11.

"Waste Not Your Waste"

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:
- Sir-I wish to add a suggestion prompted by an editorial brief on "Waste Not Your Waste." Many people collect and sell or give away their waste paper, but there is a much larger waste, it seems to me, in these days of canned goods, from the discarded finned cans. Here is a waste of iron, tin, and soldier which could and should utilized. The waste of metals in this way is greater than would be that in carrying out the foolish idea of sinking the German submarines and warships.

Writes of Fools and Fogies

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger Sir-Your editorial stand in relation to the tremendously important issues of the peace treaty and league of nations strikes me as admirable. No one can ever measure the evil that has been done or that may result from the lack of a united stand by all Americans to back our representatives in the peace council.

It's an association of nations or war, and more war, and worse wars; and America would not be able to keep out of them safely. It's the fool pacifists and the old fogy feactionaries, men without spiritual vision, who seem not to see the necessity for an associated effort to preserve the peace of the J. A. OAKES.

Pitman, N. J., April 11.

The Cause of Peace Delay To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger Sir-Senators Lodge and Knox, with their eague of thirty-seven Republican senators (Democrats not invited), and George Wharon Pepper, with his so-called "League to Preserve American Independence," have done more to cause delay in the settlement of peace, and to cause division and strife among the peace delegates at Paris than the strongest and most active and effective pro-German enthusiasts could do. I do not believe their deliberate intention was to do this, but I do believe that they intended to do all they could to discredit President Wilson wth the Peace Conference. But in discrediting him they were discrediting the country for which he was the official representative. In discrediting their country they were depriving it of the great and commanding influence for good that it had for settling justly and honorably the great problems of the world.

Let us not allow the politicians to fool us with such silly fears as that this league would imperil our Monroe Doctrine! If it is entering into entangling alliances to join in a world league to maintain the peace of the world, then in heaven's name let us enter into that sort of entangling alliance! I would be most heartily ashamed of our great, big, glorious America were she to be left out of such a league, with such a noble object, and all because America was afraid that if she would join she might be compelled to do what she would expect other nations to do for her if her rights were threatened! I am not that kind of an American!

ARSENAL GRAND BALL AT FRANKFORD FRIDAY

Carnival Planned to Be Held in New Building-First in Three

Employes of the Frankford Arsenal will elebrate the return of peace at a military ball on Friday evening next in one of the new buildings which will be completed and turned over to the government by the conractor in time for the affair

The building in which the ball will be held concrete construction, fire-proof throughout, it has three floors, it is 451, feet wide by 11912 feet long, it has a fire tower at each end, is equipped with a four-ton elevator, electric lights, steam heat and san itary plumbing. It is a modernly equipped work shop, light and airy, special attention being given to ventilation and shop comforts of the employes.

The committee on arrangements for the ball has enthusiastic support of the entire personnel among the officers at the Arsenal. Many of them are taking an active interest in the affair. Many of the subcommittees have their work well in hand, the best of music has been procured for the night, the decorations will be beautiful and layish. One floor of the building will be set uside as a grill, where refreshments will be served by capable chef.

As this will be the first time for nearly three years that the general public will be permitted to enter the Arsenal grounds many no doubt will avail themselves of the opportunity to see what improvements and additions have been made within the grounds during the period of the war. Invitations will be sent to many men

FRENCHMAN PLANS 'DAY' | SHUT-IN SOCIETY IN LINDENSTRASSE

Lieut. L'Huillier, Hero of Many Encounters at 22. Wants Revenge on German Major

Lieutenant Andre L'Huillier, a youthful French officer, with incisive terms yesterday carved out a vivid cross-section of the great war's four years and showed it, relieved oceasionly by a touch of humor, to an informa! gathering at the home of Edward W. Bok, if Merion.

The licutenant, who is only twenty-two years old, told how his native village of Somme Py was burned to the ground by the Germans. Its destruction has been cited as one of their typical atrocities and helps to nake one of the counts in the tremendous indictment lodged by the Peace Conference against the former Kaiser.

He told how his mother, his sister and is grandmother were marched into Germany under a guard with fixed bayonets and kept there for sixteen months.

His nunt, seventy-five years old, was sent a prison. "a veritable Calcury."

Even before the war began a nest o pies was lodged in his native village. Four days before hostilities began the secre agents disappeared. When the Germans swept into France the spies appeared again in various positions of official rank. The lieutenant turned aside from his recital of German brutality and treachery to pay a graceful tribute to America and the American Red Cross.

The Jews of France

"The people of France can not see Amer an soldiers without weeping," he said "For the French people remember that it was the money that the Americans gave to the Red Cross that helped them in their greatest need

A dramatic climax to the informal talk was his announcement that he is going to Cologne, Germany, and arrest a German major. Orff by name, who was quartered in Somme-Py in the early days of the war. Orff, he said, directed the systematic brutality practiced against the village inhab itants.

"I know where Major Orff lived," the icutenant explained, telling how, before the war, he had made a trip into Germany, "He lived at 12 Lindenstrasse. I hope he is living now and I hope he is enjoying good health. For I am going over to Cologne Then I shall ask him, as I point to decorations in his home. Where did you find that painting?' and Where did you

"I shall ask him that because he is re sponsible for the atrocities in my village. shall have with me two British soldiers from the army of occupation. We shall escort Major Orff to the nearest British gen eral and I shall ask that he be tried in a high tribunal for his crimes."

Lieutenant L'Huillier smiled satirically.

Plea of French Women

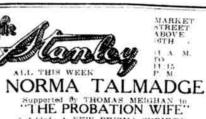

"Every woman and girl in France is praying and pleading that those responsible for atrocities be punished. The French Government knows the name of every officer responsible, for example, for the deportations from Lille. That will be very good for the Allies and for Germany, too. We all hope the Peace Conference will do that."

The young officer wears the ribbon of a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, the Medaille Militaire, and the Croix de Guerre with two stors and two palms. He was with the 151st Infantry of the Forty-second Di vision, the French Iron Division,

His skull has been trepanned twice, bits of shrapuel are in various parts of his body. When surgeons wanted to remove them his answer was:

"Sometimes you ask people to take iron when they are ill. I don't need it. I have it in my system and now I am a real iron man of the Iron Division.

Most of the lieutenant's fighting was don within a few miles of where he was born and educated. When the Germans used liquid fire for the first time he was burned everely. He was removed to St. Mene hould, where his mother and sister, who had een released from Germany, acted as his
