

PATROLMEN ON HAND TO CURB BOLSHEVIKS

Appeals Made at Academy to Aid Starving and Ignorant Russians

SPEAKERS ARE HECKLED

Seventy patrolmen in uniform and plain clothes guarded every entrance and exit and closely scrutinized all who entered the Academy of Music last night to hear Madame Catherine Breshkovskaya, "little grandmother of the Russian revolution," and Dr. Edward H. Egbert, formerly chief surgeon of the American Red Cross detachment in Russia, speak on the conditions in that country.

The police protection was requested by officials of the New Century Club, under whose auspices the affair was held, because of rumors that local Bolsheviks intended making an effort to break up the meeting.

Only one interruption disturbed the peace of the meeting, although hecklers frequently hurled questions at the speakers.

When, in answer to a question, Doctor Egbert declared that the Bolsheviks in Russia only represented 5 to 10 per cent of the population, some one in the gallery shouted:

"That's a lie!" Applause in the top of the house and hissing in the orchestra pit followed. Doctor Egbert ignored the interruption, however, and continued answering questions he invited from the audience.

"Why don't you let us go back to Russia? This government makes us pay 12 per cent income tax!" was another question, also from the gallery. "Let them go back! Let them go back!" cried hundreds in the auditorium, and Doctor Egbert said:

"You certainly have my consent to go back, and my best wishes, too. From that time on a woman constantly heckled the speaker with intricate, technical questions about the Soviet government, but was entirely ignored.

Madame Breshkovskaya appealed for a fund to support and educate 4,000-5,000 Russian children orphaned and made homeless by the war. She did not touch on the subject of Bolshevism, to which she is bitterly opposed. She declared that 75 per cent of Russia is illiterate and that the bog of ignorance has become worse every year for generations.

"America must help us," she said; "she must send people to us, and bring us books, and pictures, and crafts and arts, all to make our vision wider. Then will Russia be grateful."

POLICE SHOT HURTS CHILD

Investigation Being Made of Injury of Ten-Year-Old

The police are investigating the circumstances surrounding the accidental explosion of a revolver being exhibited by a patrolman to some friends, a shot which seriously injured ten-year-old Isable Stark, of 803 North Twenty-seventh street.

The accident occurred in front of 803 North Twenty-seventh street last night. Patrolman August Lohmiller, of the Ninth District, was exhibiting an automatic revolver of 45-caliber to some friends when it exploded. A shot tore through the ligaments of the right thigh of the child, who stood nearby, and emerged several inches below the knee, the bones of which were shattered. Her limb may be paralyzed.

The child was taken to the Mary J. Drexel Home and Lohmiller was later suspended and placed under arrest by Lieutenant Grant J. Marple.

SECOND OF FAMILY DROWNS

Effort to Rescue Darby Boy Are in Vain

Eight-year-old Roy Scott, of Eleventh and Cedar avenues, Darby, was drowned in a deserted quarry hole near Holy Cross cemetery, Yeadon.

The boy was alone at the time of the accident, and it is not known how he happened to fall in. His screams were heard by James Wilson, a negro, who plunged into the water just as the boy sank. Wilson dived repeatedly and finally brought up the body.

PLANE FORCED DOWN, BACK AT NAVY YARD

F-5L, Great Flying Boat, Had Narrow Escape Near Chester

LEAK IN GASOLINE SUPPLY

The big naval flying boat F-5L, which landed in the Delaware river near Chester yesterday, was towed back to the Philadelphia Navy Yard today.

Examination showed that the airship was forced to descend because of a leak in the gasoline supply pipe. This will be repaired at once and the big ship will again take to the air for its test flight.

The boat is 48 feet long, with a wing spread of 110 feet, and is said to be the biggest flying boat in the world. It is equipped with two motors and carries 465 gallons of gasoline. The machine, which weighs 7000 pounds, has a carrying capacity of 7000 pounds.

The crew of the flying boat taxied the craft to a buoy near Chester, after the boat hit the river, and anchored it there. A launch from the Chester Shipbuilding Company then took the crew ashore. The men aboard the flying boat were Ensign George H. Hesselman, pilot; Roland F. Parker, observer; George H. Stafford and A. E. Farke, chief mechanics, and Morris Adrian, chief gunner.

The big plane developed trouble while above Wilmington. The ship was being maneuvered toward the river at Chester when at a height of about 350 feet an air pocket was struck. The flying boat fell about 150 feet before Ensign Hesselman righted it and landed safely on the river.
