

GREAT HOG ISLAND TERMINAL PROPOSED

Possibilities of Port Here Pointed Out by Head of Shipyard

TALKS AT TRAFFIC CLUB

"It is a crying shame that newly built ships at Hog Island must leave the yard empty and sail to New York for their cargoes when we have right here in this port adequate facilities for handling the largest volume of sea-going freight shipments along the Atlantic coast."

Matthew C. Brush, president of the American International Shipbuilding Corporation, made this statement yesterday at a meeting of the Traffic Club of Philadelphia at the Bellevue-Stratford last night.

FARMER'S HEART SOFTENED BY COUNTRY WEEK CHILDREN

He Warned Poor Lads From City Not to Enter Orchard, but Relented When They Caught His Unruly Swine

THE farmer promised all sorts of violence to the boys of the Children's Country Week Farm if they came into his orchard for apples. But when they captured and returned to him two runaway pigs his stony heart crumbled and he told the boys they could have all the apples they wanted.

The boys filled pockets, hats and blouses and altogether carried away more than three hundred apples. The latest reports received by the Children's Country Week Association are that the farmer is giving due consideration to the question of open door for the coming season.

This year the association is hoping to take care of six thousand women and children, double the number of last year. In fact, last year the association was not sure that during the war it could continue the work, which is supported by voluntary contributions.

Each house on the several farms operated by the association is guarded over by a house mother, and there are counselors for both the boys and the girls, who teach woodcraft and the names of trees and birds and generally acquaint the children with country life.

At Paradise Farm, near Bradford, all the trucks used by the visitors are raised. Cows and chickens are on all the farms. During the season of 1918 the Bellevue house at Paradise Farm served 7434 meals.

Many of the children come to the farms half fed, and virtually all come from congested city districts. The sight of open country and the taste of fresh fruit and vegetables are treats to them.

The association aims to be both educational and recreational and has special teachers for the kindergarten children. There are also counselors who can tell stories and entertain the children. Mothers who come with small children are given a rest when the kindergarten teacher gathers up the little ones in the morning and takes them

SAW GERMAN TRAINS TURNED OVER TO U. S.

Lieut. Harper, of West Philadelphia, Tells How Enemy Kept Agreement

How the Germans handed over the rolling stock as required by the terms of the armistice was related today by Lieutenant Samuel Harper, of 6119 Spruce street, who has just arrived from overseas.

Lieutenant Harper went overseas in August, 1917, with the Nineteenth Engineers as an enlisted man and was gradually promoted in rank until a year later, when he was granted a commission. During most of the fighting he was engaged in railway construction work in the Toul sector and in the vicinity of Nancy.

After the signing of the armistice he became a member of the Inter-Allied Railways Commission and was employed in inspecting German material received by the Allies, according to paragraph seven of the armistice terms.

The commission inspected about 480 locomotives and 400 cars. The rolling stock was brought from Germany by regular train crews and upon their arrival at the destination American crews were ready to take their places. The trains were then switched to the French tracks and taken into the interior of the republic.
