All the glories of spring appear at Easter. The enraptured songsters put on new plumage and warble blithely in the warm sunshine the bright-hued flowers and fruits lift up their pretty heads and send forth fragrant messages of joy and hope; and, patterning after Nature, the belles and the gallants, who have done their Easter purchasing in the Chestnut Street Shops, step gayly forth resplendent in their new attire and screne in the knowledge that what they wear follows the latest and best dictates of Fashion.

And if you think the choice is limited, drop in at Bailey, Banks & Biddle Company and look over their magnificent collection, the finest and largest in America, if not in the world. The Dinner, Tea and Coffee Services alone occupy case after case, to say nothing of the individual pieces, and all are the work of the most skilled designers and silversmiths. Many of the sets are accurate copies of historical pieces, and what bride would not like to start housekeeping with, for instance, the Paul Revere Tea Service, a beautiful reproduction of a set made by the Revolutionary patriot whose famous ride "kindled the land into flame"?
