

COURT OF HONOR NEAR COMPLETION

Atmosphere of Entire City Is Charged With Spirit of Victory Loan Drive

UNVEIL STATUE TOMORROW

Thousands of pedestrians passed today on their way across Broad street at Chestnut street or South Penn square to watch the throng of workmen putting the finishing touches on the Court of Honor.

Above the noise of traffic sounded the hum of hammers and saws as artisans built the new speakers' balcony on the south side of the Victory statue booth and fashioned the great shield above it. Already this booth has been the center of activity in two successful loans.

The statue of Victory, which is replacing the Goddess of Liberty, is almost completed. One shapely arm bearing aloft the laurel wreath and the palm branch can be seen high above the canvas and scaffolding which protects the artists as they work on the statue. From the south side, where the canvas is torn, pedestrians may glimpse the strong serene face of Victory as she looks down on Broad street.

The elaborate plaster of paris bases for the flag poles along the Court of Honor are being put in place today and the poles themselves are receiving their last touches of paint and varnish. As workmen put up the cranes and fitted together the gargoyles that guard the flag pole bases, men, women and children gathered to watch the proceedings.

The national colors are already brightening many of the business houses along the Court of Honor.

Liberty Loan booths are finding their places along the main business streets. They are all freshly painted and decked with the insignia of the fifth Liberty Loan. Posters and slogans are on street light poles and buildings all over the city.

Drive Begins Tomorrow

Under the leadership of Mrs. B. F. Richardson, loan workers of West Philadelphia will start the drive with a parade. They will assemble at 1:45 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Sixth and Arch streets. Several thousand uniformed women, school children, soldiers, sailors and marines will be in the procession. There will be a number of women on horseback, and bands will play victory airs. The parade will move down Sixth street to Cedar avenue, east to Fifty-second street, to Chestnut street, where exercises will be held in front of the West Philadelphia women's Liberty Loan committee headquarters, the Victory Statue there will be unveiled tomorrow evening.

More than 1500 members from Philadelphia and Camden are expected to march in the parade in South Philadelphia tomorrow afternoon under the direction of Mrs. Walter J. Freeman, head of the women's Liberty Loan committee in that district.

Mrs. Frank B. Stockley is chairman of the speakers' and meetings' committee. Other members of the committee besides Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Stockley are Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Frank W. Buhler, Mrs. Thomas S. Boyle, Mrs. J. Hector McNeal, Mrs. Andrew Lippi, Mrs. Charles Henry Fox.

Officials of the Liberty Loan committees and of the city will review the parade from a stand erected in front of the Third Regiment armory, at Broad and Wharton streets.

Fourteen separate parades will be held in North Philadelphia tomorrow evening. Mrs. Chesman Herrick is again chairman in that district. More than 5000 men and women are expected to take part.

RICH COAL MAN DROWNS

Body of Daniel C. Kaseman Found in Creek by Fishermen

Daniel C. Kaseman, fifty-six years old, a wealthy dealer in coal, lumber and real estate, of 2023 Tioga street, this city, was accidentally drowned in Kishacoquillas creek, nine miles east of Lewistown, Pa., on Monday afternoon. Mr. Kaseman, who was looking over some timber property in the vicinity, tripped over a log while crossing the creek and fell into the water. Trout fishermen found the body, and County Coroner Dr. J. W. Mitchell, after an investigation, decided that death was due to accident.

From 1895 to 1908 Mr. Kaseman was a member of the Monroe H. Kulp Lumber Company, and at the time of his death held extensive lumber, coal and real estate interests in the state of New Mexico.

BUSINESS MAN SHOT BY ROBBERS IN AUTO

Hold-Up of Italian Yields No Revenue, However, for Five Men

Charles Crispinito, thirty-five years old, 716 South Eighth street, a widely known business man of the Italian colony, was seriously wounded last night, when five highwaymen, three of whom were in an automobile, attacked him in Fitzwater street, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Crispinito, who owns an undertaking establishment in the southern section of the city, was returning to his home with a friend, Tony Gambel. They had just placed Crispinito's car in a garage.

As they walked on the north side of Fitzwater toward Seventh, an automobile with five men in it drove up along the sidewalk, and two men jumped out. Before Crispinito or Gambel could move one of the bandits struck Gambel in the face with a blackjack, and the other hit Crispinito a glancing blow on the head. Crispinito threw a bottle of medicine at the highwaymen and ran toward the other side of the street.

Five shots were then fired. One of the shots shattered Crispinito's left leg. He dropped. The other four shots went wide.

The automobile, during the fracas, had slowed down, but had not stopped. Before it reached Seventh street, the two bandits jumped in and the car disappeared.

Pedestrians who had heard the shots hurried Crispinito and Gambel to the Pennsylvania Hospital. Gambel has a badly cut face. The highwaymen stole nothing.
