Would Like to Be Nurse

To the Editor of Woman's Poor:
Dear Madam—It is my desire to give all my time over to Salvation Army work or some such other noble organi zation. I have never done any work of this kind before and do not know just exactly where to begin. I believe that for one who has only a high school edueation and only a few hundred dollars nursing would be the best field.

Can you please advise me as to what good hospitals in Philadelphia and vicinity will admit an eighteen-year-old kirl for training? Will you also please advise me as to where to learn sore about Salvation Army work, or it there is some other settlement work in which I could make myself useful?

I have enjoyed reading your Woman' Page for years and have found in it a great deal of helpful advice.

M. H. R

Some hospitals will take girls of eighteen as nurses, but the require-ments differ with the different hospitals your qualifications have a great deal to do with being accepted as a student. The only way to find out about this is to call up the hospital and talk to the superintendent of nurses, because you can judge for yourself how you answer to the requirements. The Salvation Army headquarters is at Broad street and Fairnfount avenue, and there you can find out more about the organization, its requirements for its workers and the work that it does, There are numbers of charities and settlement houses which need workers, and the social service departments of the hospitals are always glad for trained There is a Pennsylvania School of Social Service at 1302 Pine street where you can get your training if you want to go into this kind of work. This pays rather better than either nursing or Salvation Army, if that is a consideration with you, and it is very helpful good work.

Draperies that are warm and lustrous-appearing in cold weather soon become stuffy and depressing when the days grow warm But bright cretonnes; now, well isn't it surprising what a skillful woman can do with some gayly colored cretonne! "But," you object, "the trouble with eretonne is that the patterns I like are always so expensive." Always? Listen to this: One shop has two whole table fuls of cretonne that was originally priced at fifty cents to seventy-five cents a yard, but which has been reduced to thirty-five cents a yard. And most of it really looks like seventy-fivecent quality. You will find subdued patterns, with one color shading into another. And you will find brilliantly relored pieces, each color in strong con-

Place cards for parties are always fascinating. They admit of so many possibilities. And of the most timely are those I found today, cards which will not want to overlook, if you give a dinner or party for a returned mildier or sailor. They consist of three figures, well colored. In the center stands Uncle Sam, benevolent, and smiling as ever. And he links arms with a tawny American soldier on one side and a trim. erect sailor on the other. The price of these most attractive place cards is ten cents for six.
