Reading Shore Express Threatened by Broken Connecting Rod

Twelve crowded carloads of passengers on the Reading express which left Atlantic City at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon for Camden, had an escape from what might have been a serious wreck.

The connecting rod from the piston to the driving wheels on the right side of the engine broke as the train had passed West Collingswood, and broken pieces were flying into the road-bed.

Some of the pieces weighed fifty pounds and were sunk into the ballast to a depth of ten to twelve inches.

The engineer noticed the break as soon as it occurred and brought the train to a stop in about 100 feet. The mishap resulted only in disabling the engine and delaying the train half an hour.

The passengers knew from the sudden jarring the quick application of the airbrakes something was wrong. Even in the last car the passengers were forward with a lurch against the seats ahead.

The train makes no stops between Atlantic City and Camden and speeds along in several stretches at sixty miles an hour.

If the break occurred at that speed the possibility of a serious wreck was imminent. The train was getting close to the Camden yard and the speed was slackened to less than thirty miles an hour.

An extra engine was sent to the train, but it took nearly half an hour to get the rest of the broken rod disconnected. The broken part remaining was hanging but a few inches off the ground when the train was stopped.

THEATRES BUSY IN DRIVE Actors Here Will Play Active Role for Loan

Leonard Blumberg, general manager for the Messrs. Shubert, of the Lyric, Adelphi, Sam S. Shubert theatre and the Chestnut Street Opera House; J. Fred Zimmerman, Sr., of the Lyric, Love, general manager of the Forrest, Garrick and Broad Street theatres, and Harry Jordan, manager of Keith's Theatre, have issued a joint announcement that plans for the Victory Loan campaign in the theatres of this city have been completed.

It is estimated that more than 200,000 persons will visit the leading theatres of the city during the period that the loan campaign is being conducted. It is the determination of the theatrical Victory Loan workers to obtain the subscriptions of at least 50 per cent of that number.

The amount of subscriptions in dollars and cents which it is hoped to obtain has not been announced, but it is known that it runs into several millions of dollars.

The leading theatrical stars of the country—both men and women—who will be playing at the various Philadelphia theatres during the campaign are being depended on to carry out the major portion of the plans arranged by the managers.

Some of the most noted stage folk in the country are billed for this city during the three weeks of the loan campaign, and already the majority of them have been informed of the part they will be asked to take, and are rehearsing for the work.

SHOW SUNDAY LOAN FILM IN KENSINGTON

Photoplay in Victory Drive Depicts War as Seen From Other Side

PROTESTS ARE REPEATED

Victory Loan motion pictures were shown last night in the Kensington Theatre. The picture will be shown again next Sunday at various picture houses and theatres to stimulate interest in the fifth and last of the great war loan drives.

More than 500 enthusiastic residents viewed the reel, which has led to severe criticism by Saboteurs. No admission fee was charged. The exhibitions next week will also be free.

The photoplay, which was produced under government direction, depicts vividly the war as seen from the other side—not staged reproductions, but the genuine battle scenes. It takes the "Yanks" were battling with the Prussians.

Lieutenant John Ridgeway, of the Eightieth Division, addressed the audience, and Joseph Crouse, one of the four-minute men, pleaded the cause of the Victory Loan.

Dr. Tomkins' View Addressing members of his parish at Holy Trinity Church at the Eastern morning service, the Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins said:

"In a certain sense the Victory Loan is a religious thing, because we give thanks to God for the victory which has come, and as a church we should do all we can for the land we love."

"The Rev. Mr. Thomas T. Muteher, secretary of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association, reiterated last night that the Sunday motion picture would hurt the Victory Loan campaign."

"In making my protest against the use of these films in the moving-picture houses on Sunday nights I had in mind the welfare of the Victory Loan," Doctor Muteher said.

"The Victory Loan committee has seen fit to ignore my suggestion, so I have nothing more to say—just at present."

The Rev. Dr. Carl E. Grammer, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Tenth and Chestnut streets, said he could find no argument against the Victory Liberty Loan picture. The government's action in showing the picture, he said, was undoubtedly backed by the nation.

While a majority in Philadelphia might disagree from this view, he declared this was no reason for opposing the Victory Loan itself.

View of Doctor Conwell "I am steadfastly opposed to anything which will take away the essential characteristics of the Sabbath day," declared the Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, at the Baptist Temple in discussing the Sunday showing of the Victory Loan picture.

"The time has come," he declared, "when there must be absolute separation of church and state. The question as to what activities should be indulged in on Sunday and for what purposes, should be determined by asking ourselves whether greater good is to come from it than harm."

Doctor Conwell urged those present to liberally subscribe to the loan.

Sunday motion pictures, even when used to advertise the Victory Loan, were criticized as a "desecration of the Sabbath" by the Rev. Dr. Clarence H. Woolston yesterday in the East Baptist Church, Kensington.

Reiterates Opposition The Rev. Dr. William B. Forney, in an Easter address in Mount Vernon Baptist Church, Manayunk, again announced he would use his influence to prevent an exhibition of the pictures in the Manayunk-Roxborough district.

Before a congregation yesterday morning in the Northminster Presbyterian Church, Thirty-fifth and Baring streets, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. W. Courtland Robinson, protested against the Sunday picture. At the close of the service the congregation met and unanimously approved the protest and authorized its publication.

He said in part: "I especially deplore the action of the Treasury Department in permitting if not promoting, this sort of thing."

"Patriotism is a species of sin, and if the Victory Loan falls short, which I do not expect, it will be because God did not bless it. I do not advocate boycotts against it in the least, but I do express dissent."

TRAIL OF BAD CHECKS TAKE YOUTH FROM JAIL TO JAIL

"Rum Did It All," Moans Son of St. Louis Contractor, Arrested Leaving Washington Prison on Charges Here

Life is just one jail after another for George Fry. A trail of bad checks which lead from all parts of the United States, has been the means of keeping him behind prison doors.

Fondness of the bright lights, the glittering cafes and a carefree existence is responsible for Fry's downfall, he says. He was brought here today by a check on New York for $1,000, which he passed on J. A. Harris, vice president of the Franklin National Bank, on May 29, 1916.

Fry is the son of a prominent contractor of St. Louis. Before he passed into City Hall today he paused at the door in South Penn Square as though to join a few moments of the spring sunshine. He took a fleeting glance at the street, gaily bedecked for the Victory Loan campaign and scores of charging automobiles. "None of this is for me," he said with a sigh.

Fry was arrested as he was leaving jail in Washington. He stepped out with some hesitancy for he had a dim recollection of other offenses. When he saw Ayres waiting nearby he walked directly to him.

"Here to?" he asked. "Philadelphia," replied the detective. When informed of an indictment for passing a bad check here, Fry readily admitted, the detectives say, and he was eager to serve his time.

The prisoner has the appearance of a young business man. Even a series of jail terms have not robbed him of the atmosphere of refinement. It was this asset which enabled him to pass the check on Mr. Harris, of the Franklin Bank. Fry posed as a nephew of Myron T. Herrick, former governor of Ohio. His manner was most convincing and he had little difficulty, it is said, in getting the necessary cash.

Before serving several months imprisonment in Washington, Fry served a year in Blackwell Island for passing a bad check in New York. As he was leaving Blackwell's, there too was a detective waiting. A fleeting liberty, as he rode from New York to Washington, was all he enjoyed at that time.

Fry doesn't know how long he will have to serve here, but he has little hope for clemency. Even when his sentence is completed, no matter how long it may be, the ends of justice will not have been met.

Since Fry's imprisonment in Blackwell several bad checks turned up in Chicago. About the same time still more checks were discovered in Washington and Philadelphia. They were traced to Fry. Washington managed to get first claim on Fry and this city came next.

When the steps from the Eastern Penitentiary here, instead of being welcomed into the world, he will again see the lurking form of a sleuth nearby to take him to Chicago. And after Chicago—well Fry doesn't know. And rum did it all—he said.

TRAIN KILLS BOY OF TEN VOORHEES MEMORIAL SEEN

Second Engine Strikes Lad as He Cheers Passing Soldiers

Standing within sight of his home yesterday while cheering the soldiers on a passing troop train, James Connelly, ten years old, was struck by a train approaching from another direction.

He was taken to the University hospital, but died before the ambulance reached the hospital.

The lad delighted in standing near the P. B. and W. Railroad tracks in the vicinity of Fifty-fourth and Paschall avenue to wave at the boys on the troops trains which frequently passed. Yesterday morning, however, he crossed.

Nearby in his home at 1830 South Conestoga street, his fifteen-year-old sister Alice, who has assumed the role of housekeeper since the mother died, was preparing the Easter dinner. The father, James Connelly, is a fireman on the railroad.

PLAN STREET DECORATIONS Committee Will Arrange for Displays When 28th Division Marches

The decoration committee of the welcome-home committee will meet this afternoon in the office of John T. Windrim, chairman, to devise plans for decorating the Parkway and other thoroughfares for the reception to be given the troops of the Twenty-eighth Division upon their return from overseas.

It was announced by J. Jarden Gantner, secretary of the general committee, that plans will be formulated for the erection of a court of honor along the Parkway and for triumphal arches at the upper end of the Parkway. Sites for the erection of the various reviewing stands will be decided upon, also the type of decorations to be used.

Today definite information relative to the number of units to return to this port will in all probability be given out by officials of the War Department.

EASTER CASUALTIES LIGHT Though Many an Ankle's Aching, to Go No Further

Blistered feet, heavy eyes and large heads were casualties reported today from the Easter display of fiery and good fellowship.

Saunterers on the Boardwalk, straining for better views of that new skirt, caused most of the losses of effectiveness in this morning's resumption of grim daily life. Farewell Easter eggs slipped sadly on Saturday and tossed off frequently all day yesterday account for heads that spin and totter.

A few instances of crippled stenographers who found the long hike of Easter display a trial on legs (limbs, rather) cramped in the new skirt, appear in the reports. Speedy return to duty is expected for 90 per cent of the casualties.

Marks played the child in his machine and started for the Episcopal Hospital. The axle broke on the way, causing the auto to collide with a Kensington avenue trolley car. Both were thrown out of the machine and taken to the hospital in a passing newspaper delivery truck. The child died soon after being admitted.

After receiving medical attention, Marks was arrested by Patrolman Hensbury, of the Belgrade and Clearfield streets station. He will have a hearing today.

This is probably true, and more's the pity. If the man can afford to buy fashionable raiment for his family, why shouldn't he be entitled to good clothes himself?
