CLUBWOMEN OF CITY PLAN MANY EVENTS
April and May Calendars Are Crowded and Activity Gets Impetus of Spring

Clubwomen are finding that their calendars for the months of April and May are crowded with events which have accumulated to make the end of the present season a notable one. Under the impetus of warm weather and relief from the tension of war work and restrictions, the programs of the various clubs about the city are moving rapidly ahead.

One of the most interesting and important features of club work which is to come during the first part of May is the city house-cleaning week, a campaign in which all of the clubs take special interest, and in which they participate in conjunction with the Mayor's office. It is their aim to impress upon the housekeepers of Philadelphia the sanitary value of ridding their houses of all of the rubbish and dirt which has accumulated during the winter.

The week of May 5 has been designated as "clean-up" week, and on the regular collection days of that week the city will carry away free of charge from the houses all of the refuse which has been accumulated for that purpose.

Preceding this event is the third annual public health day, held under the joint auspices of the Department of Public Health and Charities, the College of Physicians, the Child Federation, the County Medical Society, the City Club, the Babies' Welfare Association, the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, the superintendent of public schools, the Board of Recreation and the Civic Club. This meeting will take place in the College William Penn High School on the evening of Wednesday, April 20, at 8 o'clock. The speakers will be Colonel Edward Martin, Commissioner of Health for Pennsylvania; Dr. S. Josephine Baker, director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of New York City; Dr. Wilmer Krusen, director of the Department of Health and Charities of this city; Dr. James M. Anders, who will be chairman of the meeting, and there will be an exhibition drill, in charge of William A. Stecher, director of physical training.

SEEK MISSING MARINE

Sergeant "Jerry" Magill Disappeared in France November 17

Does any one in Philadelphia know the whereabouts of Gerald P. Magill, sergeant of the Forty-ninth Company, Fifth Regiment of the U. S. Marines?

A nation-wide search is being made for "Jerry" Magill, who disappeared in France and from all official records on November 17. His mother, Mrs. Anna Magill, 221 Greene street, Brooklyn, N. Y., has appealed to President Wilson, the War Department, the War Relocation Authority, the War Relocation Service has distributed posters concerning Sergeant Magill in all the camps in the hope of reaching some friend of the marine or some member of his regiment who can throw light on the mystery.

Gerald Magill left this country May 20, 1918, with a replacement battalion of marines, and was later assigned to the Forty-ninth Company of the Fifth Regiment. He fought in all the big battles of the marines to the end of the war.

Letters were received by his family every two weeks until October 13. Since then information has been received from the marine headquarters at Washington that Gerald Magill was promoted to a sergeant on October 17, and on November 17 was transferred to a replacement battalion via hospital.

Inasmuch as Sergeant Magill was reported alive long after the fighting ceased, his mother believes that he may be suffering from amnesia or shell shock and may be in a hospital.

CALLS ALUMNI PAPER AS BAD AS TRUSTEES

Harrison Morris and Wharton Barker Answer Register in Penn School Row.

"NO KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS"

Efforts of the University of Pennsylvania Alumni Register to justify the action of the board of trustees concerning its conduct of the Wharton School indicates that the Register is "in the grip of the same hidden forces which have made the institution the mere diagraph of monopoly," according to Harrison S. Morris.

Wharton Barker, a trustee, and nephew of the founder of the Wharton School, declared today that the Register's reply was apparently made without knowledge of the subject matter under discussion.

Mr. Morris replied today to an editorial published in the Alumni Register, which seeks to justify the policy of the trustees, a policy that Mr. and Mrs. Morris declared in a statement last week to be responsible for mismanagement and disruption of the Wharton School.

Mrs. Morris is the daughter of Joseph Wharton, whose endowment of $300,000 made possible the founding of the school. Wharton Barker, a trustee and nephew of Joseph Wharton, also criticized the conduct of the trustees.

The Pennsylvania Gazette will carry an editorial from the pen of Edward R. Bushnell, which attempts to refute the Morris allegations, made following the resignation of Dr. J. Russell Smith.

Mr. Morris's View

"Like the University of Pennsylvania itself, the Alumni Register is in the grip of the same hidden forces which have made the institution the mere diagraph of monopoly and does not represent the alumni, but only the trustees of the University," Mr. Morris said.

"The real facts in the matter are that the Wharton School teaches modern principles, and the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania don't want that kind of teaching.

"The Alumni Register does not represent the alumni, but only the trustees of the University.

"The General Alumni Association is in the grip of the same hidden forces that have the University in their power. It is run in the interest of reaction, and only those acceptable to the reactionary will of monopoly and high finance can be elected as trustees.

"We have had interviews with most of the professors of the Wharton School, who are suffering from the oppression of the dean, who represents the hidden forces. The phrase 'sitting on the lid' was quoted by us from the lips of a professor. We have received letters from many of the faculty who have been freed from the grip of the monopoly. We are told that many of the students contemplate entering other universities because of the treatment they have received and because of the loss of professors whom they deeply admire.

Like Monopoly at Bat

"The ridiculous statement that the family of the late Mr. Wharton wants the endowment back is characteristic of monopoly at bat. If the sum were ever returned, it doubtless would be conveyed to a less medical university, where freedom and justice are respected. If the University gives up the endowment, it will write itself down for what we have accused it of being—simply a diagraph for monopoly.

The original Morris statement declared that Dean William McClellan of the Wharton School received his $7500 salary illegally; that he had never performed the functions indicated in the deed of gift of Joseph Wharton and that he "sat on the lid."

The Barker Statement

The statement of Wharton Barker follows:

"If the public could read the deeds of trust of Joseph Wharton, in which the purposes of the school are declared, the extract from the Alumni Register would be seen to be one made without knowledge of the subject discussed.

"If the deeds of trust of Joseph Wharton were published and read with attention, the high standing reputation of the Wharton School of Commerce and Finance would be understood, because the public would know that the investigations and teachings of many of the professors, which often have been believed to tend toward establishing a new order of the relations of men to each other and to the nation, almost all of which have been, in accord with the purposes and demands of Joseph Wharton.

Science of Man

"Some critics forget that on the reverse of the great seal of the United States are Latin words translated: 'Facts accomplished produce a new order of the ages.' And they forget that in the evolution of the last hundred years social science—the science of man—has taken the first place among the sciences.

"Those who have special privileges encourage chemists, physicists, metallurgists and the engineers who make practical the discoveries in these sciences, to make as much research and discovery as diligent study and consideration require. Because they know, or perhaps only believe, that they will be able to buy these discoveries and use them for the development of the special privileges they have. And so, no interference is made with all teachers of what are called the exact sciences. But when the great social and economic questions approached by the professors and instructors tend to disturb the established order of society, a hue and cry is raised, and these professors and instructors are often hounded with an almost mad-dog cry."

Reply in Gazette

The reply to the Pennsylvania Gazette, in part, says:

"There has never been any discrimination against members of the Wharton School faculty in the matter of salaries. On the contrary, the teachers in this school, through the evening and extension schools, have means of supplementing their incomes not available to those in other departments. Neither has the University, through its property, trusts or donations, ever attempted to curtail the activities of its teachers in any department, nor has it interfered with the free expression of their opinion on any occasion."

WOULD SELL CLOTHES TO "MAKE GOOD" $100

Soldier Spurned Offer, However, and Alleged Thief Is Held for Court

Appropriating a $100 bill to one's personal enjoyment and appearance is not forgivable in the eyes of Albert J. Houck, a soldier, of 1012 Mr. Vernon street, even though the offender offers to dispose of all personal belongings, including clothes, to make it good. Robert Tully, who lives at Franklin and Noble streets, learned this to his regret today.

Houck, accompanied by Miss Margaret Sullivan, of North Lawrence street, visited the home of his friend, Tully, one day last week, according to his testimony before Magistrate McClerny in the City Hall today.

Refreshments were in order on the reunion, he said, and suggested that Tully obtain same in a can. He tendered the $100 bill to Tully, he said, but neither the bill, refreshments, can nor Tully returned.

Yesterday the police picked up Tully, neatly attired in a $10 suit, a new pair of shoes and other regalia. He admitted that he had obtained them, in addition to a good time which was had in New York, with the $100. All that was left of the bill was $25.

This morning he pleaded for leniency. "I'll look the clothes, shoes and my watch and the $25 will be returned," he declared. "If Houck will only give me another chance."

But Houck shook his head. "Once is enough," he declared, "you didn't make good then." Magistrate McClerny held Tully under $800 bail for court.

HELD FOR HIDING ASSETS

Bankrupt Placed Under Bond for Hearing

Charged with concealing a portion of his assets from a bankruptcy referee appointed to arrange for the payment of creditors, Samuel Lichtenstein, of Camden, yesterday was held in $8000 bail by United States Commissioner Manley. Lichtenstein conducted a dry goods and jobbing business in this city at 28 South Second street and last fall the firm failed. The liabilities are said to have exceeded the assets of the firm by almost $130,000.

Creditors charged that some of the goods bought by Lichtenstein prior to his bankruptcy had disappeared. A specific item of a check for $2385 was seized upon as the basis for the warrant. This check was reported to have been paid to a Camden merchant for a bill of goods, but according to the government agents the bill of goods was never sent nor the check received by the alleged Camden merchant. Lichtenstein, bookkeeper and daughter, Mrs. Minnie Vanier, was held in $5000 last week and Lichtenstein was made a co-defendant. Lichtenstein surrendered to the authorities yesterday and was held in bail for a further hearing.

COMMUNITY CENTERS IN SCHOOLS PROPOSED

Bill Provides Buildings Be Opened to Public for Social and Recreation

Favorable report by the committee on education of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg on the bill, introduced by Representative William H. Martin, of Allegheny, providing for the general use of public school buildings and grounds outside of regular school hours, was pronounced here by Fred B. Barnes, district representative of the Commission on Living Conditions of the United States Department of Labor, today.

The bill specifies that upon the petition of a number of residents of a district in which a school is located equal to at least one-fifth of the number of pupils regularly attending that school, the board of school directors maintaining the school shall equip and permit the use of the buildings and grounds belonging to the school for recreational, educational and social purposes, and that the board may spend a reasonable sum of the school funds for carrying out or assisting to carry out these purposes.

The bill prescribes that the uses enumerated shall not be of a sectarian character or under sectarian control. "The Board of Education here is co-operating with us in every way possible to put the bill through," said Mr. Barnes. "In addition the bill has the endorsement of the Board of Education of Pittsburgh, the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor and the Home and School League of Philadelphia."

TROLLEY KILLS MAN; ANOTHER IS INJURED

Two Accidents Block Apart in Heart of City—Victim Unidentified

TEAMSTER RESCUES CHILD

One man was killed and another seriously injured in two trolley accidents which happened within a block of each other. The accidents occurred within two hours last night near Sixth and Market streets.

The police are trying to learn the identity of the dead man. He was hit as he attempted to cross Sixth street above Market. The wheels of the car passed over his body. Physicians at the Jefferson Hospital, where the man was taken, said death was instantaneous. He was dressed in dark brown clothes and was middle aged.

Jules Osteroff, of 310 Porter street, was struck by a Market street car east of Sixth street. He, too, was taken to the Jefferson Hospital, suffering from cuts, bruises and shock.

Frank Creigh, a teamster, of 234 North Fifty-second street, at the risk of his life, saved a three-year old child from a runaway team.

Creigh was unloading merchandise at the furniture store of H. Goodstein, 325 North Sixth street, yesterday afternoon. Anna Riley, thirteen years old, 6023 Vine street, a nursemaid for Goodstein's three-year-old son, Sidney, climbed into the driver's seat and let the boy hold the lines.

The horse had been removed to feed the horse, and the animal started on a wild dash north on Sixtieth street. Goodstein and Creigh gave chase. Goodstein seized the tailboard of the wagon, but was hurled to the street and badly bruised. Creigh managed to clamber into the wagon, grabbed the child, and instructed the girl to place her arms around his neck. She became frightened and clung to the seat. Creigh was forced to jump with the Goodstein boy in his arms.

The horse ran into a trolley car at Sixtieth street and Girard avenue, and the wagon was overturned. Anna Riley was thrown from the seat, but was uninjured.

The trailer of a motortruck struck Reserve Patrolman Percy Dougherty, 1544 North Alden street, as he was directing traffic yesterday afternoon at Broad street and Girard ave. He arrested Abe Greenfield, the driver, and took him to City Hall. Dougherty was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital, where he was treated for head and leg bruises and a possible fracture of the shoulder.

Driver Burned in Automobile Fire

George Phiner, chauffeur for Harry H. Lapper, 1508 North Seventeenth street, was severely burned last night when Mr. Lapper's car caught fire while in front of a garage at 1321 North Nineteenth street. Mr. Lapper and his daughter, Ruth, were in the automobile as the blaze started from an overheated engine, but jumped out. Phiner was caught behind the steering wheel. He was taken to the Woman's Homeopathic Hospital.
