GOSSIP OF THE STREET

BANKER HITS "BUGABOO" OF GERMAN COMPETITION

Local Financier Calls It "Humbug" and Quotes Hun Press Statements as Evidence—Gossip of the Street

THE bug-s-boo of German competition, it would seem, is as much of a humbug as the bug-s-boo of the invincibility of the German army and fleet from which a good many people were suffering about a year ago." was the remark of a banker yesterday as he called attention to an important article copied from the Koelnische Zeitung (the Cologne Gazette) and sent through diplomatic channels. It is only a few years since the Cologne Gazette was considered the most powerful paper in Germany. Its articles were considered semiofficial and it was common knowledge throughout Germany that its editor in chief was the only man in all Germany the kaiser feared when he was at the zenith of his power.

This article from the Cologne Gazette advocates a strict enforcement of the law of March, 1917, giving the government power to confiscate all foreign securities in German hands as the only means available to pay for the food which Germany, it says, needs badly. It goes on to say that 400,000,000 marks will be required to pay for the most necessary food supplies. Further on the article states that "Germany's export trade is gone, accumulated stocks are exhausted, machinery is worn out or damaged and the national debt has assumed enormous proportions,"

"Erzherger," it says, "assumes that we have reached the lowest chb commically and that our prospects are now on the upgrade." The Gazette adds. "We cannot agree with him." It then advocates "work" and "ordered conditions" to produce such a result. The enormous prices of coal are then taken up, with the remark that the proposed socialization of the mines will not produce the required results. In the matter of coal competition, the Gazette evidently fears Holland, whose coal trade with Germany during the war made enormous strides, and advocates the leaving of the coal export trade to business men who understand it, rather than to the socialization advocated by the present German government.

The banker who called attention to this statement said that if the whole affair is not German propaganda for a purpose it certainly shows Germany in no condition to offer any serious competition in trade for several years yet, and he was inclined to believe the article was a statement of facts.

Another banker said he believed the article from the Cologue Gazette was underdrawn rather than overdrawn. The imperial health commissioner of Germany, he said, has published recently the chormous cost of the to Germany, and this cost was largely due to the effective blockade of German ports by the British and United States navies. The commissioner. leaving out those killed in battle, said that 763,000 civilians died of star vation and 150,000 of influenza chiefly because they were undernourished for lack of food. The money loss due to the blockade he estimated at

Buying Steel for Investment, Says Broker

It was evident yesterday for a time that many buyers of United States Steel common were not particularly concerned as to what action the directors of the corporation might take at today's meeting on the dividends. As usual recently, opinions were strongly divided on the outcome of the meeting, with majority opinion inclined to the belief of the dropping entirely of the

A broker said he believed the heavy buying of the stock was by people who are buying solely for investment, as there seems to be a well-defined impression that the immediate future of steel is very promising.

They believe, he said, that the prices agreed on at the recent stabilizing conference will stand, and should there be any change it will be upward and not downward. It makes little difference now, he remarked, whether the steel market is an open one or not. The big fellows claim they cannot make steel for less and the little ones, it is well known, cannot, have been instances reported, he said, of price cutting, but it is said there is no foundation for such stories, but there does seem to be some foundation for the reports that if the minimum prices established by the stabilization conference had prevailed many of the smaller producers would have been obliged to suspend business.

Notwithstanding opinions to the contrary, there were many who believed the United States Steel directors will follow the example of Bethlehem when it created a precedent by splitting the extra, and there is no question that the number who came around to this view yesterday was steadily gaining
