NEEDLEWORK GUILD IN ANNUAL MEETING

Mrs. Newberry, President, Opens Session in Academy, Welcomed by Mrs. Wood.

The annual meeting of the Needlework Guild of America is being held today in the Academy of Music. It will continue tomorrow.

Mrs. Truman H. Newberry, national president of the guild, presided and made the principal address at the morning session. Mrs. John Wood Stewart, who founded the guild, greeted the delegates on behalf of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce.

Following the addresses, the annual report of the chairman-treasurer, Mrs. George Fales Baker, was made and reports from the various committees were presented.

A luncheon was held, followed by community singing. Miss Anne McDonough, associate director of community singing of the war camp community service, was leader.

Edward James Cattell, city statistician, welcomed the women on behalf of the city. The balance of the afternoon will be devoted to state and branch reports, "Extension Honor" and the opening of the question box.

Tonight a reception will be given the national officers and visiting delegates at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. George Fales Baker, national vice president, at "Old Oakes," Rosemont.

PENN SENIOR CLASS AT LUNCHEON TODAY

Occasion Will Be Used for Big Welcome to Lt. Sidney Thayer, Jr., a Member.

The senior class at the University of Pennsylvania will hold its final luncheon of the year today in the Houston Club, and the occasion will be used for a big welcome to Lieutenant Sidney Thayer, Jr., a member of the 1919 class, recently discharged from the marines.

Mr. Thayer won a Croix de Guerre and was just recently awarded a Distinguished Service Cross. It is expected that he will tell of his experiences on the other side.

Horace M. Lippincott, of the class of 1897, and treasurer of the general alumni association, will deliver the principal address. He will bring a message to the outgoing class in regard to their obligations when they become alumni.

The jazz orchestra, which recently scored such a hit in the Mask and Wig show, will be a special feature of the entertainment. Reports of the various committees on activities during class day week, the senior picnic which will be held next week, and the caps and gowns which must be worn by all members of the graduating class beginning about the middle of May, will be made before the luncheon.

FORM NEW GROUP IN PHILHARMONIC SPLIT

Faction, Alleging Domination by Germanism, Organizes Symphony Society

PFEIFFER DENIES CHARGE

Organization of a new musical group—the Philadelphia Symphony Society—has followed a factional row in the Philharmonic Society, which reached a climax last night at the annual session of the Philharmonic.

Determination to pursue a community music program as an entirely separate group resulted directly from a breach among members of the Philharmonic, which had been impending for the last few months. One faction of the 600 members, which rallies around Mrs. Ernest Toogood, former president of the society, accused the other, which adheres to Walter R. Pfeiffer, musical director of the organization, of trying to convert the organization into a German singing Verein.

The Pfeiffer faction makes flat denial, and counter-charges that followers of Mrs. Toogood would transform the society from an educational institution into a "social affair."

Toogood Faction Withdraws. Immediately following the annual election in the Fuller Building, Eighth and Market streets, last night, when an almost entirely new group of officers was named, Mrs. Toogood and thirty-one of her followers left the meeting. They retired to the studio of W. Le Roy Frain, former secretary of the society, and under the direction of Mrs. M. D. Edmonds organized the new society.

Officers were immediately elected. Mrs. Toogood was made president and a vote of confidence in her was given. The meeting was attended by all the retiring officers of the Philharmonic Society. The vice presidents of the new Philadelphia Symphony Society are Samuel Laclair, Mrs. Joseph M. Gazam and Colonel Sheldon Potter. Thomas Martindale, Jr., is treasurer; W. Le Roy Frain, secretary; Miss Angela Marie, assistant secretary.

The executive committee includes Gustav Loeben, Mrs. Ralph Mellor, Dr. A. A. Jones, Mrs. Thomas Martindale, Sr., and Mrs. M. D. Edmonds.

"Our new society is assured of the co-operation of at least three strong musical organizations of the city," said Mrs. Edmonds, chairman of the meeting. "And our program will be a broadly educational one, such as Mrs. Toogood and our group have always wanted the Philharmonic to have."

"But our attempts to make it so were frustrated by the German group. This group has been devoting its time to campaigning against us. For the last week or so, a committee of forty with a kind of German poison-gas propaganda, has been electrioneering by telephone and motorcar. They have been rounding up votes against us."

"At the election they would not permit Mrs. Toogood to read her report under old business, although that was her privilege as the retiring president. But they changed the order of business and the elections were hurried through first. They were afraid there was a possible chance that the report might influence the balloting."

Report is Read. The atmosphere of the earlier meeting was tense. Mrs. Toogood presided until the election hour. Then she gave way to Dr. Paul Voigt. The ninety-seven members of the Pfeiffer faction present fought against permitting the reading of the outgoing president's report. The report was read, however, just before Mrs. Toogood left the meeting.

It summed up the purposes of the society and regretted that they had not been carried out. "I have worked wholeheartedly because I believed that there was among the members of the society a serious effort for educational purposes, the orchestra concert on Sunday to be but one of its many activities," said Mrs. Toogood. "Mr. Pfeiffer and I, before we secured the privilege to hold the Sunday concerts, took oath that this serious effort was entirely altruistic. But when Mr. Pfeiffer asked to be paid $250 by the society for directing each concert my faith was shaken."

The report was accepted with elaborate politeness "as read."

The nominees for the Philharmonic Society were chosen by a committee composed of Edwin Romig, chairman, Otto Rust, H. B. Keech and Albert Heinrich. The committee presented but one nominee for each office. They presented fourteen names out of which to elect twelve directors. The assembly was given the privilege of adding nominees to the list, but the indignant group which remained loyal to Mrs. Toogood refused to nominate as well as to vote.

The officers of the Philharmonic Society elected to serve for the coming year are: President, George S. Cox, vice president, Dr. Frank C. Hammond; second vice president, Paul Voigt; recording secretary, Edwin L. Romig; corresponding secretary, Dr. Howard A. Sutton; treasurer, Dr. S. Hirsch; musical director, Walter Pfeiffer.

The twelve directors are: Dr. Valentine R. Manning, H. M. McCaughey, Albert Heinrich, John Louis Haney, H. B. Keech, Louis Schuck, David Rorton, Otto Rust, Henry Fleer, Frederick Bauer, Vincent Brecht.

Have you looked over Our Stock of New Spring Suits Yet?

Were showing some of them in our windows, of course. But they are only a moiety of those inside on our tables. (And, besides, just at present, one of said big windows is devoted to a Victory Loan Display that is worth seeing.)

First of all, the patterns. The big thing about them is that they are NEW! Designed since the Armistice; loomed since the first of the year. New, fresh wools that have the life of youth in their feel and in their color.

And you know that this store doesn't have to preach about the all-wool quality of the fabrics in them. We've told you before that we'd rather shut up shop than sell you suits for something that isn't so.

And then the Models. Our Men's Suits were never more comfortable, never cut on better as well as easier lines. For the fashionably inclined—our waist-seam Suits are a knockout! We've put proportion into all their parts. The waist-seam isn't merely an excrescence in the cloth—it is artistically tailored and made to justify its existence. Cut in both single-breasted and double-breasted, with the usual Perry variations in pockets, in lapels, in straight and rounded fronts.
