Nancy Wynne Speaks Regretfully of the Death of Dr. Reath.

Reception Today at Arbory Arboretum, Washington Lane—Other Matters

THERE is something particularly sad in the death of Dr. Ben Reath on Tuesday. He had been ill since the spring, but after spending some time at the hospital and taking a trip South for several months he was considered to be convalescing. I remember seeing him on the Saturday before Easter and being struck with the change in his appearance wrought by his illness. He went West for the government last year, you know, and contracted some disease, and there which caused the trouble, and yet on Tuesday he died from a sudden attack of pneumonia a very few hours after he was taken ill.

Doctor Reath was one of the best liked men in town, and before his illness was in most splendid health. He married Miss Florence Pancoast about sixteen years ago. She is a sister of Mrs. Joe Widener, you know. They had two children, Alberta Pancoast Reath and Joseph Pancoast Reath, who is a pupil of St. Paul's School in Concord. The Reaths spent several years abroad, sending the children to school in Switzerland before they were broken out of the country by the influenza epidemic. Reath was most congenial and devoted couple.

Doctor Reath was an uncle of "Robbie" Reath, one of the "Fighting Five" boys from here who joined the marines early in the war. He was killed at Chateau-Thierry in the early summer.

HAVE you seen the window at 724 Chestnut street, just crammed with things to buy? Well, that's to be a rummage sale to-morrow from 9:30 until 5:30—and oh, won't it be a fired place at 5:35! For the benefit of the Rush Hospital and also for a country week for Girl Scout Troop 73. The aides are all girls you know—Katharine Len, Sarah Penrose, Elizabeth Packard, Mrs. C. Newbold Taylor, Mrs. Robert Hare Davis, Frances Tyson and Rachel Fidler. Speaking of rummage sales, I heard something awfully funny about one at the home of Mrs. Cheston.

Some one that you probably know met some one else that you probably know with a strange-looking bundle. She had just been fixing up a store for a rummage sale, and although she didn't explain, it looked very much as if she had bought a few things that appealed to her before the crowd got a shot at them. And the first some one, gazing curiously at the bundle, recognized with great glee a well-known pair of white buckskin pumps that she had sent to be sold at the rummage, "because maybe some of those people will think they're good enough to wear, and they're undoubtedly too good to throw away, but I can't wear those heels any longer."

Now maybe the second some one was taking them home to be cleaned so that they would sell better; but as they really were in perfectly good condition, wouldn't it be a scream if those pumps, that used to be hostesses at the first some one's house should come there as guests some rare June day?

DID I tell you about the beautiful party the president and board of managers of the City Parks Association will give this afternoon at the Arbory Arboretum, with a reception and tea at the home of Mrs. William Draper Lewis from 4 until 6 o'clock? The association has cultivated that part of Germantown into an ideal park, you know, and it's perfectly beautiful out there. The grounds are right at the Washington Lane station, and there are any number of trains from the Reading Terminal to get there.

The hostesses of the afternoon are Mrs. Louis Henson, Mrs. John Chidwelder, Jr., Mrs. Sam Clegg, Mrs. Michael H. Jones, Mrs. Alexis Cox, Mrs. Walter Cox, Miss Caroline E. Cope, Mrs. Brinton Cope, Mrs. Andrew Wright Crawford, Mrs. Theodore Eiting, Mrs. Jonathan Edwards, Mrs. Henry Middleton Fisher, Mrs. Howard W. Lewis, Mrs. William Draper Lewis, Mrs. Eli K. Price, Mrs. Theophilus Stork, Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer and Mrs. Clarence Clark Zantinger.

WELL, my dears, I went to the women writers' meeting last night, and believe me the circus at Nineteenth and Hunting Park avenue had nothing on that circus last night. The performance started at 8:15, and the parade through two small rooms was headed by the most fearful beast it has ever been my happiness or unhappiness, as you wish, to hear. They played on combs, on pans, on whistles, books and drums. And nothing was too excited for them; even a Dutch fugue was not too high for them to try to play it on whistles. For I assure you your hearers were well tried.

Then the circus started. The ring leader advanced with cracking whip and gave the history of each animal and freak in the show. To be sure, she spoke these words and again by laughing at her own remarks, but one cannot expect perfection. There were nine altogether, including a cottie hound and a waffen poggie, which last fearful and wonderful animal almost escaped from its keeper and caused fearful disorder among the spectators, who were munching peanuts and drinking lemonade back of the sidelines.

Besides these two freakish animals there was a monkey with the most remarkable face, a teddy bear, an extraordinary cat wearing a Buster Brown costume, a giraffe with a very sore throat, a bearded lady, whose story was one of the saddest told; a stunted lady, who was the noblest; and with a copy of Pershing's noble face, and upon whose left shoulder smiled the noble countenance of the founder of the league of nations. The fire-eater ate steadily all through the performance, and I must say she was some eater.

PRACTICE, NOT THEORY, URGED BY SCHOOL HEAD

Physical Conditions and Activities Here Reviewed by Dr. John P. Garber

There is little use trying to teach children in school the importance of ventilation if they are required to sleep in bedrooms with their windows all closed, or allowed to sit in places of amusement where the ventilation is even more questionable for them than the late hours and the excitement involved.

The title of the lecture of Dr. John P. Garber, superintendent of public schools, is contained in an article on the physical conditions and activities in the schools. He believed that the schools are doing good work along health lines, but he suggests various places where improvement is needed.

"Efforts on the part of the school to obtain the benefits of free play are of little avail," he says, "where the playing must be done in the cramped space of a small schoolyard or in the midst of the dangers and unwholesome influences of the city street."

In suggesting means by which the best health practice may be brought about, Superintendent Garber included safe and sanitary school buildings with ample space for both in and outdoor play.

"The type of health instruction in the schools that combines health, knowledge with health practice, is also essential," he declared. "This, we believe, is being accomplished in the Philadelphia schools. Systematic physical training which has for its object not only the development of vigor and endurance but also the remedying of such defects and weaknesses as will yield to well regulated exercises, is another thing needed.

Another essential is the careful inspection for safeguarding pupils from the spread of disease, for keeping buildings and grounds in healthful conditions and for periodical examinations of all pupils to learn their physical defects as well as general physical condition.

"Owing to the close connection between proper nutrition and educational growth, school lunch counters have been established in a number of schools. The counters are self-supporting, and the pupils are able to get appetizing and nutritious lunch at low cost.

"I believe there should also be systematic plans for keeping parents informed of the physical condition of their children and the proper means of safeguarding health in the home and the community. Ample provision must be made, too, for safeguarding the leisure time of the young people who have gone to work. The period of relaxation following a day of tension is one of the severest tests of moral stamina that comes to adolescent youths. Imagination and aspirations are then at their peak, they are in need of safety and facilities for recreation, and both safe and appealing. No place is better for this than the school building.

"We need also to remember that there is much in modern life that is highly antagonistic to physical welfare. The sedentary, inactive life of the clerk and business man, the automatic machinery which is increasing the tendency toward a muscled, inactive life in the mechanic, the excitement and drive of life and its amusements, rich and highly seasoned foods, and many other things are doing much toward nullifying the benefits of a commendable tendency toward out-door life. The remedy lies in adequate provision for establishing health knowledge and health practice, that events in proper health habits, in furnishing the expert inspection that will fully inform and safeguard all concerned, and in the intelligent and sympathetic co-operation of all the educational forces. This means larger expenditures for this important work, but it will also mean a richer return in welfare and true prosperity than we can otherwise secure."

Assails Sedition Law

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—Allow me to express my approval of the sane and sensible editorial in Saturday's Evening Public Ledger condemning the proposed sedition law. You are absolutely and incontrovertibly right in denouncing the attempt to convert crimes into political offenses.

The people of Pennsylvania when they ordained and established their government refused to surrender to the power of that government certain rights. That there might be no dispute or question between the people and their government concerning these rights they were defined and set forth in the very first article of the constitution under the title declaration of rights. And after enumerating these rights the people said: "To guard against transgressions of the high powers which we have delegated, we declare that everything in this article is excepted out of the general powers of government and shall remain forever inviolate."

These are the rights which were reserved to the people and over which the government has no control whatever. One of these rights has to do with the government itself. The second section of the declaration of rights asserts: "All power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority and instituted for their peace, safety and happiness. For the advancement of these ends they have at all times an inalienable and indefeasible right to alter, reform or abolish their government in such manner as they think proper."

While that section stands in the charter of the people's liberties the government of Pennsylvania has no power to pass a sedition law.

It is not, therefore, for the Legislature, the Governor, nor the courts, nor for all together, to tell the people how they shall "alter, reform or abolish their government." That right and that power is inherent in the people and they can exercise it "in such manner as they think proper."

Knowing their rights and knowing that they can only be maintained against government by perfect self-defense, the people have by perfect self-defense safeguarded these inalienable rights in the seventh section of the declaration of rights by declaring: "The printing press shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the Legislature or any branch of government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof."

The government is forbidden to place any restraint whatever upon the press in its examination of the affairs of government. Section seven further declares: "The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and every citizen has a right to speak, write and print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty."

What is an abuse of that liberty? Is it the abuse to bring the government into contempt if the thing spoken, written, or printed about the public officials be true? Not at all. For the seventh section still further declares: "No conviction shall ever be had in any prosecution for the publication of papers relating to the official conduct of officers or men in public capacity, or to any other matter proper for public investigation or information when the fact that such publication was not maliciously or negligently made is established to the satisfaction of the jury; and in all indictments for libel the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts under the direction of the court as in other cases."

It is only when a citizen maliciously or negligently libels a public official, or any other person, that he abuses the liberty of the press and lays himself open to punishment. Or if he maliciously and wantonly slanders public officials he may be prosecuted under the laws of slander. But there is no offense in either spoken or written or printed word against the government as such.

The government of Pennsylvania has existed for nearly a century and a half without a sedition law. During that period it has witnessed many serious disturbances among the people, but it has survived them all without a sedition law.

This is no time for panic or resort to arbitrary power by way of usurpation. It is a time for cool heads and a strict observance of the inalienable and indefeasible rights of the people. There is ample law, as you have so clearly pointed out, to punish all crimes of violence whether against individuals or the government. It only remains for those in authority to enforce the law and not seek to deprive the people of

OLD-TIME PICNIC FOR PENN SENIORS

Class to Spend Day, May 14, at University Farm on Unique Outing

A real old-fashioned picnic—the kind you dream about when you call to mind the happy days when you were young—will be held by the senior class of the University of Pennsylvania on Wednesday, May 14, at Green Lane, where the University farm is situated.

This affair is advertised as the last real get-together of the graduating class, and is being planned with all the "fixings" which generally go with affairs of this kind. A social train has been chartered on the Reading Railroad to leave the Terminal at 9:30 a. m. From Green Lane Station over to the farm an old-fashioned livery wagon will be employed, and no sooner will the party have arrived before they will indulge in a true country-style dinner, guaranteed to make all those who forget the closest lobster palaces in the city.

Swimming, boating and a baseball game between two picked teams will serve to pass away the afternoon for those who do not take the opportunity for a good, sound sleep. An appetizing meal will be followed by a period of story telling around a huge fire, when those telling the wildest tales will receive the largest applause. This mellow evening talk-fest will finally be brought to a close in time for the old livery-wagon to get the party before midnight.

All seniors are excused from classes for the picnic, and it is expected that it will be the most extensively patronized of all the month's many functions.

MOVE FOR GREEK-LETTER PEACE

Provost Heads Pennsylvania Interfraternity Harmony Procedure

An attempt is being made at the University to patch up the differences between the Interfraternity Council of the Delta Psi fraternity, which recently withdrew a huge fire, when those telling the wildest tales will receive the largest applause. This mellow evening talk-fest will finally be brought to a close in time for the old livery-wagon to get the party before midnight.

This unusual step was considered necessary because of the rather bitter feeling which has grown up in regard to the agreement concerning "pushing" and general interfraternity conduct. It was believed that when another "pushing" season came open warfare would be precipitated between the two factions.

An entirely new agreement was tentatively drawn up under the direction of the provost, but this is merely the first step in the attempt at reconciliation. The new agreement must be submitted to all the fraternities in the council and must be voted upon at their regular meetings. If the return is favorable the agreement will be formally drawn up and voted upon by the council. If it is passed it is believed that the dissenting fraternities will come back into the fold.

The charges made by Delta Psi against the council and which finally led to withdrawal were in the nature of an accusation of favoritism by the council against nonfraternity men. This was generally supposed to be a pretext, with the fraternity agreement itself as the critical focus of the quarrel.

"WELCOME HOME" SMOKER

Germantown Cricket Club to Honor Returning Military Members

A "welcome home" smoker will be given by the members of the Germantown Cricket Club tonight in honor of its members who have returned from military service. Addresses will be made by Major Jerome Wilner, Major M. L. Noyce, Major J. N. Henry, Lieutenant Colonel W. M. Schwartz and Captain I. C. Wister.

Members of the club will also pay tribute to the memory of those of its members who sacrificed their lives. The names of these men follow: Lieutenant Richard Foulke Day, Lieutenant Norton Downes, Jr., Captain James Roy Frazier, Lieutenant Paul Borda Kutz, Lieutenant Ward Man, Major Edgar T. Scott, Lieutenant Edwin Thorp Van Dusen.

After playing such an important part in the world war she has a right to demand from the Peace Conference freedom for her sons in strange lands who are constantly calling for her helping hand.
