AMBASSADOR MORRIS HONORED BY JAPAN

Tribute Paid to Diplomat and Our Army—William Potter a Guest

Tokio, Friday, May 9.—(By A. P.)—An impressive celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of the imperial capital from Kyoto to Tokio took place here today. The emperor and the crown prince participated, and the occasion was marked by a historic tribute from official Japanese to American Ambassador Roland S. Morris and through him to America and the valor of the American army.

War Minister Tanaka and his entire cabinet were present and among the eighty prominent guests was William Potter, of Philadelphia, president of Jefferson Medical College.

In addressing the assembly, Mr. Tanaka said the world had already recognized the high-minded attitude of America in the world war.

"If America's citizens had not been loyal and brave, and if her national power had not been so great she could not have planned what she did. Even though she did not marshal her entire strength on the battlefield America must be regarded as the nation which humbled the enemy and reduced him to helplessness," he said.

The minister of war thanked Mr. Morris for his great efforts in behalf of the friendship existing between the United States and Japan.

In responding, Mr. Morris said Mr. Tanaka had voiced the feelings in the hearts of all men as the "supreme product of the war" and emphasized the new spirit of international cooperation.

"No one," he declared, "dare ignore the intensity and significance of this feeling on the realization of which rest all our hopes for an ordered national and international life. In the relations of Japan and America are found the first efforts to express this larger spirit of co-operation in the unselfish service of reconstruction. If questionings, even suspicion and distrust, have arisen through differences of language, environment and methods, I rejoice that they have been met with a spirit of friendship and frankness and solved."

PROBE LUXEMBURG DEATH

Suspected Slayer Tells of Throwing Body into River

Berlin, May 10.—(By A. P.)—First Lieutenant Vogel, suspected of having fired the shot which killed Rosa Luxemburg, the radical Socialist leader, was called to the witness stand today in the trial of the murderers of Fraulein Luxemburg and Dr. Karl Liebknecht. He testified he was instructed to convey Fraulein Luxemburg safely to prison, but found this impossible because of infuriated crowds.

"Fraulein Luxemburg," he said, "was given two violent blows on the head with the butts of rifles by helmeted soldiers. She collapsed and when we arrived at a bridge the thought came to us all to throw her body into the river."
