Plea for Armenia

Sir—The promises are forgotten! The justice and the rights are crucified! Only hope is America! Great land of liberty! Land of illustrious Washington and Abraham Lincoln! Yes, only hope that we have as my personal and independent opinion, is the United States of America, because her government is honest and didn't betray the principles for which she went in the most horrible war of humanity.

In the first day of this great war we Armenians, like a single man, stood with the Allies. We sacrificed our blood, our resources for the justice and for this heroic and sublime cause. The microbes of civilization, the Turks, massacred one million innocent Armenians. No nation could stand in our position to such tortures without being despaired, but we, with all kinds of miseries, heroically fought on all battlefields.

In Palestine we Armenians played greatest decisive blow to the Turkish army and General Allenby's words are the immortal document to explain that how the Armenians made themselves one of the most sincere friends of Allies. In the Caucasus the Armenian army was the bulwark against the Turkish army and prevented their going to India. This explains the Lord Cecil's official announcements.

Yes, we fought, having the motto "Nil Desperandum" and heroically sacrificed our blood on the altar of justice, hoping that after the victory our Allies would help us to have our unquestionable and traditional right—the united independent Armenia. But, alas! because the events clearly show us that our Allies are not sincere as we thought. I need not mention the shameful treaty of 1918 to explain the betrayal of the principles for which they were claiming to fight; it will be enough the following reality to explain the purposes of European unscrupulous diplomats. Why after the victory are the Turks not disarmed? Why are the Turkish monsters again massacring the Armenians before our friends' eyes in Aleppo? Why the French present government blinded by selfish interests want to annex Silesia? Why are the Allies so slow to do justice in the Orient?

Shame! Shame! Indeed that the Allies are betraying their promises. The barbarous Turk should be chased out of Armenia as the German army has been chased out of France and Belgium. Let the selfish diplomats understand that the justice is inviolable. They cannot play more easily their rotten game because the champion of liberty and justice, great land of rights, U. S. America, wouldn't satisfy until the rights of small nations are not adjusted.

God will destroy all buildings which are founded on injustice. Armenia's voice asks help to her dear and great sister, America. "There is only one hope for Armenia," says William Allen White, "if the American people should realize the situation and act to help Armenian. Dear people of great land, because our European friends are blinded with their selfish interest! Justice and the rights are crucified! America, raise your voice!"

MAY EBREY HOTZ IN SONG RECITAL

Philadelphia Soprano Gives Difficult and Attractive Program in Excellent Style

May Ebrey Hotz gave a song recital at Witherspoon Hall last evening before an audience which, while it fairly well filled the hall, was by no means so large as the gifted singer deserved. Mrs. Hotz is so well known in Philadelphia for her beautiful soprano voice and fine artistry that extended comment on her concert is almost unnecessary, except to say that she was in unusually good voice and had perfect control, not only of the technical resources, such as long and accurate skips, true intonation and clear enunciation, but also of the more difficult dynamic effects, the crescendos, which uendos and especially the sforzandos, which were given with just the right amount of emphasis. Added to her fine singing were an attractive stage presence and an equally gracious manner.

The program opened with four songs of the older composers, Handel, Campre, Spohr and A. L., which is the pseudonym under which the mother of Lisa Lehmann wrote. These, however, were in the manner which is least suited to Mrs. Hotz's style of singing and musical temperament, although they were all well sung. The second group was composed of four of the lesser known songs of Schumann and Brahms, and each two, while strongly contrasted, were veritable vocal gems. The soloist sang each with a true realization of their musical and emotional values. The songs were "Resquien" and "Spirit Presence," by Schumann, and "Ines" by Mendelssohn, "One" and "How Free and Fresh," by Brahms.

The third group was composed of the Russian song writers. The songs were "Little Star," of Moussorgsky; "Cradle Song," of Gretchaninoff; "Eastern Romance" and the well-known "Hymn to the Sun," from "Coe d'Or," both by Rimsky-Korsakoff. In these Mrs. Hotz showed her versatility and brought out the melancholy, not to say morbidity of the Slav composer, with excellent taste and judgment, but without overdoing; no easy matter when the extreme emotional qualities of the works are considered.

The last group was of English composers. It was also probably the most difficult to sing, coming as it did at the close of an exacting program. It began with Hornerman's "The Shepherdess," a song requiring almost continuously sustained tones, which was very well done, and was followed by Deis's "Come Down to Kew," a merry little British song, which Mrs. Hotz sang with lightness and grace. The program closed with Ronald's "Away on the Hill" and Bibb's "Tondel of Spring," both sprightly but serious songs, demanding much tonal power and perfection of voice control, both of which the soloist showed. She was engaged after each group and again at the close of the program was obliged to sing again, giving "The Brownies" with excellent effect.

Ellis Clark Hammann was the accompanist and played with his usual fine judgment and skill. He entered into the musical spirit of each song and adapted both tone and style to the requirements of the composition and to the interpretation of the soloist. His work in the Handel number was of extreme delicacy, as it was also in "The Brownies," while in the Bibb song he displayed great power of tone in the difficult accompaniment.

HOG ISLAND SETS A RECORD

Three Ships Delivered in Three Days and Soon Will Receive Cargoes

A record for delivery of completed ships to the United States Government was established at the Hog Island shipyard when three vessels were delivered to the shipping board in three days, went to Marcus Hook to receive their supply of fuel oil and will take their initial cargoes from piers in Philadelphia to be delivered to foreign ports.

This record was established last week when the Saroxia was delivered on Friday and the Schenectady and Sangamon on Saturday. The Saroxia is now at Girard Point loading a cargo of grain. The Schenectady is at Marcus Hook receiving her fuel oil and will tie up at a Philadelphia pier to receive her cargo for a foreign port on Thursday, and the Sangamon will leave the island this morning for Marcus Hook and will probably go to Girard Point on Thursday or Friday.

The delivery of the three vessels last week brings Hog Island's contribution to the new merchant marine to a total of seventeen ships of a deadweight tonnage of 127,500.

Word has been received from Marseilles that the Sagaparak, the seventh vessel delivered from the Hog Island yard, which reached that port several days ago, had been sent to Antwerp to unload her cargo, owing to the congestion at the former port. The Sagaparak sailed from the Port Richmond piers on April 12 with a cargo of packing-house products.

RAPS "UNIFORM PEDDLING"

Calls Men Who Employ Soldiers as Fakers "Hun Cooties"

"Hun Cooties" is the term applied by Colonel Arthur Woods, assistant to the secretary of war, to men who are engaging discharged soldiers and sailors to "peddle" trinkets on the streets. In warning the men to be careful of positions they accept, Colonel Woods explained that investigation should be made of some offers before they are answered.

"The big idea behind many of them is to exploit the uniform," Colonel Woods said in a statement issued today. "These men aim to get hold of some fellow who may be down on his luck and send him out panhandling the public with the kit of a street faker. It's an empty sleeve or trouser leg or decoration or some other thing which is sold to commercial dealers—the pale sleeping in Flanders Field or in the Argonne—the uniform they want a man to sell, in the form of patent lead pencils or badges or war histories or catch-n-sneaker gaiters."

BOURSE INDORSES "FREE-PORT" ZONE

Reported That Congress Will Act at Early Date on Scheme to Benefit This City

Indorsement of a move made more than a year ago toward obtaining a "free port" zone for Philadelphia has been made by the Philadelphia Bourse.

Intimations from Washington are to the effect that a measure looking to the establishment of a so-called "free port" here will probably receive early consideration at the nation's capital as soon as appropriation measures are out of the way.

In January, 1918, hearings were held by the United States Tariff Commission in this city, at which time a committee from the Bourse presented arguments strongly advocating the establishment of free zones in the principal ports of entry in the United States. Opposition to the plan has arisen because, according to those in favor of the plan, protectionists leap to arms at the mention of the word "free," which they take for an indication of surrender to the free-trade principle.

"This is not the case," said Secretary Lockyer, in defending the free-port idea. "The object is to establish a zone where the loss of time and the annoyance of excessive red tape may be eliminated in connection with imports and manufactures from imports which are entitled to a 'drawback' when re-exported."
