

SCOTT PERRY HAD PLENTY OF STUFF, BUT JUST THE KIND THE ST. LOOIE PLAYERS LIKED

POOR PITCHING DEFEATS MACKS

Perry, Grevell and Watson Fail to Halt St. Louis Team

CONNIE IS OPTIMISTIC

By EDWIN J. POLLOCK Special Staff Correspondent Traveling With the Athletics. St. Louis, Mo., May 15.—Eleven to nothing! What a game! The Browns looked like champions and the A's made more mistakes than Trotsky.

The men of Mack made their 1919 appearance in the West billed as a reformed and much-improved ball club and looked as good as J. Hoover's north side professionals. The only thing that the A's had on Hoover's club was that they are a fully uniformed team.

But it was just one of those days that pop up now and then in the life of every big league club, when everything goes dead wrong. The weird exhibition given by the Shibe family was another vindication of the oft-peated adage that a ball team is as good as the pitchers. And the pitchers were bad.

The lean leader sacrificed three batters to the flagging paroled out by the Browns, and among them was Scott Perry, hero of 1918, and the bone of contention in baseball and civil courts between C. McGillicuddy, of the first part, and G. Stallings, of the second part, last year. Perry was not there.

Plenty of Speed "I never had more stuff than I had in those first two innings," Scott confided after the game as he went about to leave to pay a visit to relatives in the suburbs. "I had more speed to my fast ball and more of a break to my curve, but after that I had trouble with control, something that never bothered me last year."

"I'm not trying to alibi my way out. The Browns hit me and hit me hard, but there were a few breaks against me, and then the whole club went wrong."

Perry is not entirely to blame for the showing he made yesterday against the St. Louis reformers, for he has had very little work this season between games, and Perry is a man who needs work to be good. Adverse conditions have prevented him from having more than one workout between each of his five starts. The big Oklahoma flinger has yet to break into the win column for 1919.

In the first two innings Scott was the Scott of yesterday. He retired the side in order in the first and, although Sisler and Jacobson led off with singles in the second, he tightened up with men on the runways.

Austin Triples With one out in the third, Jimmy Austin whanged a triple to deep center and then the first break went against the blood-haired Mack twirler. Gledson hunted on the squeeze to Burns. The 'Toga youth might have tried a throw to the plate, but he didn't, and when he turned to first there was no one covering the bag, which bone can be laid at the feet, or head, of Red Shannon.

Perry's control got him in the fourth, when he walked Jacobson to start. Sloan sacrificed and the big St. Louis center fielder counted when Joseph Dugan chucked wild on Gerber's grounder. A walk was called up in the two Brown tallies in the fifth. Gledson was passed and Sisler got an infield single. Both scored on Jacobson's clean rap to left for a base.

Grevell batted for Perry in the sixth inning for no worthy purpose, for he popped to Gerber, and when the A's took the field for the Browns' half of the same chapter Bill Grevell was in the firing pit. The former Main Line League flinger gave such a good exhibition that if he repeats he will be back in Charley McCre's circuit in time for the Fourth of July double bill. Grevell walked three of the four men to face him and then strolled to the dugout.
