The "Salvation Lass" is 100 feet long and of 875-ton tonnage. It is equipped to travel at the rate of eleven and a half knots an hour.

LOVE CASE IS LOST BY A. C. HARRISON, JR.

Army Lieutenant Gets $150,000 Verdict for Alienation of Wife

Luxuries and gems valued at $70,000 were employed by Alfred C. Harrison, Jr., millionaire and clubman, son of Alfred C. Harrison, of Edge Hill, to gain the affection of pretty Ruby Davies, of New York city.

ENTICED AWAY BY GIFTS

Thus testified Lieutenant La Verne A. Davies, in his $250,000 alienation suit.

The jury listened attentively and returned a verdict of $150,000 in favor of the injured husband.

While Lieutenant Davies was "absent on duty," according to the testimony, Mr. Harrison gave her, in addition to the lavish gifts and attentions showered upon her, to which she was not accustomed, "had a powerful and trying effect" on her love for her soldier husband.

The husband attempted to "square" matters then and there, and was arrested for disorderly conduct, but when the magistrate heard the story of his wretched home he was discharged.

Mr. Harrison is the nephew of Charles Curtis Harrison, former governor of the University of Pennsylvania, and a brother to the Countess Karl von Holstein. He was married about fifteen years ago to Miss Marie M. Gibson, and went at once to live in Cuba where the Harrisons have large sugar interests.

While he is a member of the Ritz-Carlton and Philadelphia clubs, he has not spent much time in this city during the last five years, according to friends, but has been in New York frequently. His wife lives at 200 West Fifty-seventh street.

Mr. Harrison is about forty-five years old. Mrs. Davies is twenty-five. Although Mr. Harrison was served with notice of the action at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel recently, he failed to appear to defend himself. It is said he is now at Escamada de Mora, Cuba, where his sugar plantation is located.

Both in his affidavits and testimony, Lieutenant Davies related an astonishing tale which led to his departure from his regiment in New York from his regiment in Porto Rico last December, intending to have Christmas dinner with his bride. She was handsomely gowned and wore gorgeous jewels when they met, and Lieutenant Davies began to believe statements she made in a letter sent a short time before, that her affection for him had cooled.

The defendant, on November 1, asked his wife what had caused the sudden change in her love, as they were both happy when he left her in September to rejoin his regiment, after a short furlough. He said she replied that a wealthy man was in love with her and was offering her $200,000.

She informed the lieutenant, he said, that her admirer had showered expensive gifts upon her and she had received jewelry worth between $70,000 and $80,000. Almost daily, Mrs. Davies mentioned getting a pearl necklace, which she wore to the court.

Further inquiry by Lieutenant Davies and questioning of his wife revealed that her admirer was the alleged fact that he had maintained costly apartments for Mrs. Davies during her husband's absence. Lieutenant Davies declared she surrendered to the man's apartments he provided in this city when he was ordered from Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., where they were living together, to join the 317th Infantry at Porto Rico, when she made the acquaintance of Mr. Harrison.

The defendant, on November 1, was successful in cutting his wife away from her home by his lavish gifts of jewelry, flowers, money and other luxuries which he could not afford. Through this medium, declared Lieutenant Davies, the plantation owner alienated and destroyed his wife's love and succeeded in accepting her in the name of winning Mrs. Davies for himself.

Previous to December 20 last, said Lieutenant Davies, when he was preparing to join his wife, he received letters from her appraising him that her feelings had undergone a change. While disturbed and worried by the content of the letters, Lieutenant Davies said "I did not divine the true character or extent of the transformation which had taken place.

The real awakening came when his wife confessed her love was totally destroyed because of her association and love with another man during her absence, said the lieutenant. He said she then left him.

Lieutenant Davies explained he entered the military service in June, 1917, being determined to fight for his country.

BOY, 12, SEES MOVIE VILLAIN ROB, THEN DOES IT HIMSELF

Dressed Like Film Star, Youth, With Loot From Burglary, Is Arrested—Sent to House of Detention

Mere love of adventure has brought twelve-year-old Francis Nugent no end of trouble.

He is an ardent "movie" fan. Unlike other youngsters, however, he likes the "villains" better than the heroes. It was his desire to emulate the "villain" he saw in the last four-reel thriller that brought him in contact with the police.

The boy saw the culprit in the play cut a pane of glass and gain entrance to a house. So Francis, according to the police, broke a window at the rear of the home of Robert Wilson, 409 Ripka avenue, gained entrance to the house, tiptoed upstairs and took $20 in cash, some Liberty bonds and old coins. That was on Wednesday night. And now the scene shifts to

BIG PARADE GREET PENNSY SHOPMEN GET 400 TACONY SOLDIERS WARM WELCOME HOME

Holiday Declared and Men of Bands and Flowers for 46 110th Field Hospital Have Pageant Honor Place

FRATERNITIES ALL MARCH BIG RECEPTION TONIGHT

Tacony welcomed home 400 of its soldiers boys today.

They had the places of honor in the big parade which wound through the streets this afternoon and were guests at a reception in Diston Park.

Heading the parade were the officers and men just discharged from Camp Dix as the 110th Field Hospital and Ambulance of the Twenty-eighth Division. Other soldiers were in line from various other units who have come back from France. At least 400 more soldiers from Tacony have not yet come home.

The parade started at Torresdale avenue and Cottman streets at 1:30 o'clock and covered virtually all the main streets of Tacony. It ended at Diston Park where Congressman Peter E. Costello and Director of Supplies Joseph H. McLaughlin were the speakers.

In the parade were five sections headed by the soldiers who were showered with flowers and gifts as they marched. Following them were fraternal orders and societies. Another section was composed of employes from all the mills of Tacony. All places of business had been closed for the day. A detachment of men from the Frankford Arsenal, filled with G. A. R. veterans were in another section of the parade. A delegation of farmers from the country near Tacony was in the parade representing the farmer boys who had gone with the Tacony units.

School children and delegations from all the Tacony churches were formed in another section of the parade. At Diston Park the mass-meeting which had been arranged by the Tacony Service Flag and Memorial Association was presided over by Mrs. Elmer Holme. A salute was fired in honor of the boys who died in the service.

John Brophy was master of the parade. He said that Harry Coblenz and William W. Gable. Arrangements for the welcome celebration were made by a committee headed by A. L. Roberts. Others on the committee were John Henry, Patrick McDonough, William W. Gable, Ross and Michael Nicoletti and William W. Gable.

LOAN FOES SEE LACK OF FUNDS FOR BRIDGE

If $14,750,000 Bill Passes, Money for River Span Will Be Scarce, They Say

Opponents of the $14,750,000 municipal loan say its passage will prevent the city making provision for its share of the cost of the proposed Philadelphia-Camden bridge.

It is contended that by exhausting the borrowing capacity, Councils will be unable to match the state appropriation of $3,750,000, thus delaying the construction of the Delaware river span. Administration leaders believe the necessary bridge funds can be easily obtained in time for their use.

There is a bill in the appropriations committee of the House, introduced by Senator Vare and passed by the Senate on April 8, to appropriate $3,750,000 for the construction of the Philadelphia-Camden bridge, conditioned upon a similar appropriation being made by the Council of this city. The Vare bill provides that $750,000 of this amount will be available on June 1 from the state if $750,000 is provided by the city. Of the remaining $3,000,000, the city must provide $1,500,000 next year and $1,500,000 in 1921 in order to obtain the state appropriation.

With the passage of the bill, the Pennsylvania Bridge Commission, composed of Mayor Smith, Alfred Burk and John T. Windrum, ceases to exist. James E. Lennon, secretary of the commission at $4000 a year and president of Select Council, will be out of his job.

The commission, which will hand over its duties to a similar body to be created under the state law, has been in operation since February, 1918. It has held about twenty meetings. One of the final meetings will be held next Thursday, when it will adopt the report on which the Legislature is hoped to act finally in favor of the bridge appropriation.

CYCLONE ON OCEAN AS HAWKER FLEW

Steamships Report That Storm Raged Which No Airplane Could Survive

London, May 24.—(By A. P.)—As bearing on the possible fate of Harry G. Hawker and Lieutenant Commander Grieve, who have not been heard from since they started from Newfoundland in their attempted transatlantic flight last Sunday, steamships which have arrived at Liverpool report exceptionally severe storms in the Atlantic on Sunday night and Monday. The captain of the Venonnia, which arrived from Boston, said that a cyclone in which no airplane could have lived was encountered by his steamship early on Monday, the storm causing tremendous seas.

The crew of the steamship Tactician, from New Orleans, in describing this cyclone, say that it began just as their steamship picked up the message from the cableless Parady reporting that it had sighted the red light of an airplane in the early hours of Monday in north latitude 50 degrees 28 minutes and west longitude 30 degrees. The storm lasted twenty-four hours.

"PLAYING POLITICS," VON TAGEN INSISTS

"Too Bad Partisanship Should Befog Loan Issue," Builders' Official Retorts

Charles von Tagen, independent Councilman from the Forty-seventh Ward and leader of the independent faction on the floor of Common Council, reiterated today that the Philadelphia Operative Builders' Association was "playing politics" in advocating the passage of the $14,750,000 loan.

"Who is the legal adviser or counsel for the operative builders?" asked Mr. von Tagen. "The answer to that question might tell the story."

John H. McGarvey, chairman of the executive committee of the Philadelphia Operative Builders' Association, replied:

"It is emphatically false that we have any connection with any political organization, or are playing any one's political game. Men on the executive committee of the Operative Builders' Association represent every political faction."

"It is emphatically false that our attorney is a man allied with the present city administration as is intimated. Counsel for the Operative Builders' Association is George H. Detweiler, himself a reformer in politics, and a resident of Mr. von Tagen's own ward. It is easily proven that Mr. Detweiler represents the Operative Builders' Association. He will appear for us at Harrisburg within a few weeks to argue a complaint we have brought before the Public Service Commission concerning the U. G. I."

"I cannot deny too emphatically the insinuation that our motives in advocating the passage of the loan are anything else than a desire to go ahead with the building of houses for Philadelphia. We do not wish to get into any political squabble. But it seems a shame that partisan politics should be allowed to befog the real issue."

Employes of the Day & Zimmermann's several properties have been invited to join the party, including those from the Penn Central Light and Power Company, Eastern Shore Gas and Electric Company and the Municipal Service Company.

Din and Fireworks Expected to Dominate Despite Fire Marshal's Plea

Despite the appeal of State Fire Marshal Butz, urging strict enforcement of restrictive measures regarding the sale and use of fireworks, dealers in this city are preparing for one of the noisiest Fourth of July celebrations in its history.

The unrestrained joy of thousands of persons of the state, who want to "go big" in honor of peace and the return of the soldiers from France, has caused an unprecedented demand for articles of noise and fire.

Dealers here fear that the supply of fireworks will be inadequate to the demand, because the manufacturers have been engaged in war contracts for the government and have had no chance to provide large stocks.

Fire Marshal Butz in his warning to mayors and burgesses in the state points out the menace and danger prevailing in fireworks celebrations, which in 1918 caused several hundred thousand dollars' worth of damage by fire and killed or maimed many persons.

Marshals could have lived with the sale of fireworks, and suggests a community display under municipal control or
