And So They Were Married By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

START THIS STORY TODAY PERVERSE spirit entered into Rita that day because she was and affected during the entire trip. made it appear as if Ruth and Nawere the veriest babies with absolutely no experience at all. One might have thought that they were silly school girls out with an older woman.

Now, any one who understands the heart of a woman will realize that it is impossible to receive this treatment sanely. An older woman considers it a compliment if she is treated like a child, but a young woman resents it, particularly a young matron.

Natalie had always been sophisticated. She had known the life at good hotels from a child. Ruth, too, was experienced and heartily resented fact that any one should consider her capable of being patronized. Rita's treatment was heartily resented by both girls. Ruth was puzzled and hurt by it. Natalie simply arriving at the conclusion that she did not see what Ruth exw to rave about in this girl. Hownow that she had begun this thing.

In the car squeezed tightly together as was necessary in the case of crowding three in a car meant for two, Ruth could see that Rita was quite obviously up. There were blue shadows under her eyes, and her long black lashes had been touched with some cosmetic that made them stick together and exaggerated their length. The and commonplace, pretty as she was.
Ruth could not avoid looking at Natalie be heard but accommon. His greeting could and inwardly comparing the two girls. Natalie's usually too pale face touched with pink, even the lobes of the ears were healthily colored. Her closely twisted blond hair was held tight against her head by her veil, her lips were healthily red, her little flower toque inconspicuous and yet beautifully appropriate was more than usually becoming. Natalie had everything that Rita had tried to get without half try-ing. She looked the thoroughbred, while Rita looked the sham. Much as loved Rita she was forced to get out of her motor coat, take off her hat, all but do her hair entirely over, powder carefully, touch her lips with carmine and make herself generally gorgeous before anouncing that she was ready to go into the dining-room. Ruth and Natalie did no more than the cursory powdering of their noses that girls indulge in after they have been unpowdered for more than five minutes at a time. Rita acted as though she had been on a long journey, while in reality they had not been more than twenty

They were about half finished with lunch and the conversation that Ruth had tried to keep natural and to include Natalie was languishing when a gay party of young people came in and took a table near their. They were talking and laughing loudly and they immediately ordered drinks, Ruth, looking at them, did not see Rita pale suddenly and then flush and turn away. She did see, however, one of the men swaying blue earrings and the pert little at the next table rise and come over hat took Rita's aristocratic look quite to their table, a rather loud person in privileged to call her Jennie because she called my eighteen-year-old daughter Mary the first day she worked for me. I came down the second morning we had Jennie and found her calmly se marmalade out of the jar by means of first sticking the spoon in the jar, then in her mouth and then back in the jar again. I thought perhaps Jennie knew no better and asked her to please dish the marmalade out when she wanted to eat it. Three mornings later I found Jennie repeating the performance. I asked her to go, and I don't think I was unfair. I would not allow one of my boys or girls to eat this way, why should I run the constant risk of having a stranger use the food we eat in such unseemly manner.

I have had girls scratch all the brass beds through their carelesaness in scraping buttons on them as they passed. have had them ruin white woodwork by careless washing in spite of my repeated right. I have had the pleasure of going completely over a morning's work I had ordered done while I was in the kitchen fixing sandwiches for a little party I was to give that afternoon. By the way, f have never required my girls to appear in the afternoon at these little affairs because I do not believe women of average means like myself should attempt such "airs." That is all very well for Dear madam-Whereas I am willing the woman who can afford two girls, but Dear madam—Whereas I am willing where there is only one and she must to be convinced that there are some servant girls in the world who will live up make an ornament out of her, too.
