

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE
Nancy Wynne Sees Dainty Dress of Red and White.
Philadelphians Expected Home From Canteen Work in France—Summer Plans and Charity Affairs

I SAW Catherine Cassard yesterday morning, in town for a day's shopping, and she looked so fresh and dainty and pretty that I made me scarce just to look at her. She has a peculiar style of her own, you know, and she always dresses in the most becoming way. Her dress was a red and white barred dimity, made very simply with a surplice waist, and a sash of the material tying in back. The neck and long sleeves were finished with ruffles of white organdie, and that was absolutely the only trimmings.

With this she wore a hat of that big straw (pineapple, I think you call it), in the same shade of red, rose red, as the dress, and just as it made me scarce I wound around the crown. She wore white silk stockings and white pumps, with big silver buckles. Red is very becoming to a person with such dark hair and eyes and faint color as Catherine has, and it was just the right shade to be cool instead of hot.

TONIGHT is the night of the dance at the Philadelphia Cricket Club for the children's welfare board of the Emergency Aid. The Emergency Aid is to continue, you know; it's the aides who were demobilized. Mrs. John Wanamaker, 3d, is the chairman of the committee, and of course, she is most interested in the dance. The Lotopop Orchestra is going to play. It seems a bit too early for them to be able to get away from college, but maybe they are all the kind that don't have to take final exams and aren't like the rest of the crowd.

For you know the Lotopop is no longer composed of Chestnut Hill Academy boys; its members are all college men, and the only time they play now is during holidays when they are home. Dare expected home next week? Of course you know what I mean—the Sanders twins, for everyone calls them the twinnies, Estelle and Anita Sanders. They have been on the other side for nearly two years, and are coming back perfectly splendidly. I should think their aunt, Miss Hattie Sanders, would be delighted to have them back.

I HEAR that John Wanamaker and Pauline Wanamaker have taken a villa at Newport for the season. Last year when John was still in the service and the war baby still very young, Pauline spent most of the summer in Atlantic City and Jenkintown, but now that John is back and the baby old enough not to require so much attention they are going back to Newport. Pauline's mother, Mrs. William Diston, has been going to Newport off and on for a number of years and is a great favorite. Pauline made her debut socially for the first time in the service when she came out here, her father died, you remember, and so the parties planned for her did not take place.

PAULINE is very pretty and is radiantly happy having her husband home once more. They have closed their apartment on Fifth avenue and one at the Ritz for several days before moving up to Newport. ROSE DOLAN has sailed for home. I hear she has been staying in between times with her grandmother in Paris, but has done a wonderful amount of ambulance work. She's been over more than a year, and Alix has been studying nursing. Somehow the horse show this year seemed funny without Rose Dolan and Alexander Hamilton and Jack Valentines. I don't remember a horse show without either Mrs. Valentine or Mr. Valentine, but I understand she has not been very well and has been at White Sulphur for a while.

SPEAKING of last week's show, wouldn't you think the women who took part in the carnival would be proud of it? The last day was really pitiful to see how tired they were. That was work, all right; but, indeed, they were rewarded. They took in a large amount for the hospital. I have not heard the entire proceeds yet, but I know that at the cake and candy table alone they took more than $1000, and that's going some, you will admit. Although I heard yesterday that much more are to be clear about that much or more at the affair in Germantown today. That starts at 2 this afternoon and goes on until the evening. It is a great many people are interested in it, so they ought to make a good deal. I should think.

It would be almost worth the price of admission just to wander around through the grounds of these two houses, the Johnson house and the Chew house, they are so beautiful. The proceeds are for the National Emergency Aid and the National League for Women's Service. And whatever the chicken is for, I can swear to it's being real chicken, whether it's in sandwiches or salad or chicken à la king or what, because by a strange coincidence it has been served twice within the week to be in the same elevator or trolley car or something with people who said: "Well, I've got to go up to the service house all day Thursday to do up chicken for that fair and I don't feel any joy in the prospect, but perhaps they will when they see how well it sells."

STATE MAY BE FIRST TO RATIFY SUFFRAGE

Marylingham, Women's Leader, Says Legislators Are Eager to Beat Illinois

Pennsylvania stands a good chance of beating Illinois in the race to ratify the suffrage amendment. Miss Mary H. Ingham, chairman of the Pennsylvania branch of the National Woman's party, who returned from Harrisburg today, says the Legislature is eager to give Pennsylvania the record. "The members of the legislature," said Miss Ingham, "do not want to see any other state ratify the amendment ahead of the great Republican state of Pennsylvania. Giving the vote to women is part of the Republican policy, and for that reason the Legislature feels that this state should set the pace."

"The fact that 13,000,000 women in other states will vote for president next year, makes many of the members of the Legislature feel that Pennsylvania should give her women the chance to take part in that election. One member of the house told us that the situation with women of other states voting makes him feel as if the 'other man's' wife is running things."

"It is a real responsibility for Pennsylvania. Illinois is trying to be the first to ratify. Pennsylvania will be at a disadvantage if the next Republican convention, unless something is done for Pennsylvania women. Illinois with her women voters will have a larger delegation at the convention than Pennsylvania, because the delegates are based on the number of voters at the last election, and Illinois voters voted."

Governor Sprout announced he would recommend to the Legislature prompt ratification of the amendment. He will do so just as soon as he receives official notification from Washington that the equal suffrage amendment has passed the Senate. "I would be very grateful and proud," said the Governor, "if Pennsylvania should prove to be the first state to ratify the amendment. I believe we must eventually ratify it if we are to continue in the forefront of affairs."

Dr. Alfred Nerinx Speaks at Scene of Historic Battle—Major Edward Acery Harriman Also Will Give Address

The fete was to have been held outdoors, but on account of the rain is being held in the mansion of Mrs. Thomas Evans, at Germantown avenue and Johnson street. Prior to speaking at the fete Burgomaster Nerinx was a guest at luncheon given in his honor by Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Henry, Walnut lane and Pennsylvania Railroad.

Major Edward Acery Harriman, judge advocate general of the United States army, will come from the Walter Reed Hospital at Washington to make a patriotic address at the fete. "The fete is being given by the Women's Permanent Emergency Association and the National League for Women's Service, the oldest and youngest of Germantown relief organizations, for benefit of the after-war work of both bodies."

Because it is being given on the site of the Battle of Germantown and is being held as a victory celebration for this war the committees in charge have arranged to combine the two periods in the character of the party.

Some of the helpers will wear colonial costumes brought out of old trunks in the attic where they have been carefully stored for many years. 34 ARE GRADUATED IN INDUSTRIAL ART

Prizes Awarded and Class Helped Win War

Thirty-four young men and women students of the School of Industrial Art and the Philadelphia Textile School were graduated in the school auditorium, Broad and Pine streets, last evening. Because conditions of the school have not yet readjusted themselves to the peace-time situation, as many of its students were in war service, a less elaborate program was carried out.

The farewell address to the graduates was made by Theodore C. Search, president of the institution, and the presentation of prizes, scholarships and diplomas was made by the principal, Leslie W. Miller. "The government and the people in general have become conscious of the value of industrial art through the war," said Professor Miller. "War service took 700 of our former graduates, and 500 of these were overseas. Trained artists were needed in camouflage work, in facial restoration work, in aviation cabinet work, and in many of the war industries. They are needed now in occupations of rehabilitation. The diversity of fields in which our artists were able to serve their country has permanently established industrial art among the necessary enterprises."

There was an exhibition of pottery, painting, sculpture, metal, modeling, illustration and pen and ink work, together with fabrics designed by the textile students, in connection with the event. This was the work of both the graduates and the undergraduates. Scholarships and those in whom they were awarded followed. Mr. M. John Libby, awarded to Mary Ellen Gaudin; Mr. Herbert H.
