Says After Meal

Baltimore. June 9. — Ethan Allen
Andrews, professor of zoology at Johns Hopkins University, has followed his own advice by eating locusts.

"Fine, just like shrimp," was his verdict. "If there were a scarcity of other food, persons who had tasted them would probably think nothing of eating them in large quantities."

He and others working with him in the study of the habits and flavor of the pests are convinced that by eating the locusts as fast as they appear this generation would be doing the right, thing by posterity. So he did his bit.
Others equally brave have ventured to help in the same way.

What has interfered with the con-sumption has been the discovery that the locusts are not in the best of health. Many have been found suffering with a fungus trouble. After seventeen years underground, many are slightly moldy. This mold, spreading from the tail for-ward, will kill many of the insects. But Professor Andrews fears that it will not enuse death soon enough to prevent the eause death soon enough to prevent the laying of eggs and the propagation of the next generation, seventeen years hence.

Du Pont Faction Puts Over Ticket in

City Election Wilmington, Del., June 9 .- The Al fred I: du Pont faction of the Republican party gained its second big political victory here on Saturday, when the city elections resulted in putting over the entire Republican ticket, with the ex-ception of five members of the City Council. Four of those five came from wards where a Democratic majority has always been assured.

The result was a surprise. After the bitter pre-election fight, a close result was expected by leaders of both sides. Few Republicans claimed the city for Taylor by more than 500 votes, while the Democrats expected a majority of a thousand for Lawson. Taylor's majority was 1033.

The Democrats gained a victory is the Twelfth Ward, where Murray de-feated the Republican candidate, Williams, by a majority of 197. This makes a representation of five Demo-erats in the new Council over four in the present body.
